2 Youths Held With Eloping Girl, 14, After D. C. Holdups

Brothers and Child Are Seized at Va. Hotel, Returned Here.

8 Crimes Admitted, Detectives Report

Say Intended Bride Hid on Floor of Car as Raids Were Made.

Crime Roundup.

Arrested in a Woodbridge (Va.) inn with a 14-year-old girl, two men were brought to Washington last night under suspicion of being the "drunken bandits" who terrorized the Capitol Wednesday.

Continuing their filibuster against the anti-lynching bill, Senator McKellar and other Southern Senators sarcastically commented on "inability" of Washington police to find the "drunken bandits." Page 6.

Confidence that "any prisoner" can be "competently handled" at Lorton was voiced by Public Welfare Director Elwood Street yesterday, after District Commissioners had asked him to explain why Sam Beard, notorious, District of Columbia gambler, was transferred from Atlanta Penitentiary to Lorton. Page 3.

2 Youths Seized.

Two youths suspected of being the bandits who staged seven holdups in Washington Wednesday night were captured last night at a Woodbridge (Va.) hotel, where they had paused in an alleged flight that was at once an elopement.

With the eldest of the two youths, who are brothers, was a 14-year-old girl. Police said the couple had planned to be married at Hickory, N. C.

While the youthful trio, with the police hot on their trail, were enjoying their brief day of freedom, the Senate was devoting an hour and a half to a discussion of their activities of the night before.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said the two admitted their guilt in eight holdups here—the seven Wednesday night and another Tuesday night. Booked for investigation at headquarters, the boys gave their names as Ellis M. Tibbett, 20, and Ellsworth J. Tibbett, 17, both of Ardmore, Md.

Girl Also Being Held.

The girl, whom police said, Ellis Tibbett planned to marry, also was taken into custody. Her name was withheld because of her age.

According to detectives, the girl was a passenger in the rear seat of the car during the mad half hour in which the holdups were committed. She is said to have hidden on the floor behind the front seat while the two young men drove wildly from one victim to another.

The tip that led to the capture of the trio came from Samuel I. Durphy, proprietor of Woodbridge Inn, where the three registered shortly after 6 o'clock last night. Recognizing the youths from newspaper descriptions, he went to Lorton Reformatory and telephoned Washington police.

Even as he telephoned, however, local detectives were closing in on the suspected men. Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett, acting on other information, was already at the scene with Edward E. Scott, Ninth Precinct detective. Inspector Thompson, Capt. Ira Keck and Detective Sergts. Aubrey Tolson and Frank Brass were cruising in nearby Virginia, checking tourist camps.

Durphy brought Capt. Paul Peg-

Miners' Union to Fight Award Of $117,000 Strike Damages

Appeal—Even to U. S. Supreme Court—Mapped by Workers in East St. Louis; Company Had Asked $400,000.

By the Associated Press.

East St. Louis, Ill., Jan. 13.—The Progressive Miners of America announced tonight that it would exhaust every legal resource in an effort to overturn United States District Judge Fred L. Wham's award of $117,000 in strike damages to the United Electric Coal Co.

George Dowell, of Duquoin, counsel for the union, said the judgment would be appealed, to the Supreme Court if necessary. He asserted the decision was a "direct blow at the right to strike" and "affected every laboring man in the United States."

Judge Wham, in entering the award this morning against seven locals and 66 individual members of the union, ruled that a labor organization, its officers and sympathizers "who enter into a conspiracy to inflict violent injury upon an employer or upon his property or business * * * are each liable to respond in damages for such loss or injury so inflicted."

The company, which had sought $400,000, based its claim on its inability to operate the Red Ray Mine, near Freeburg, Ill., because of a strike from April 1, 1933, to February 11, 1936. It contended it lost $300,000 in business during the period and was forced to spend $100,000 for maintenance.

Judge Wham, however, limited the company to recovery for losses allegedly incurred between September 7, 1934, and the day the mine reopened, holding it was only during that time that a "well planned and highly organized conspiracy" was shown "to have preceded and accompanied (mass) picketing and violence."

The judge said there was no question of the right of union workers to strike at any time, and neither was there any liability for losses suffered by an employer in the lawful conduct of such a strike. However, he asserted, there was ample authority for holding unions responsible for losses due to unlawful acts.

In principle, the decision was comparable to the precedent-setting Danbury, Conn., hatters' case, settled by the United States Supreme Court in 1915, and the Coronado coal case, decided in 1922. In both, the court held that labor unions and their members were liable, under the Sherman anti-trust law, for injuries inflicted by unlawful acts on employers.

Group Health Plan Is Drafted For Greenbelt

Residents to Share Cost of Medical Center, Doctors, Nursing Corps.

Residents of Greenbelt, Md., have drafted a plan of co-operative medical care in keeping with the town's reputation as a model co-operative community.

To be known as the Co-operative Health Association of Greenbelt, the project contemplates establishment of a health center with emergency and lying-in rooms, X-ray facilities and a dispensary, all to be operated on a cost basis with provision for reduction of charges in event the co-operative makes money.

A staff of two physicians, to be increased by three when Greenbelt reaches its maximum population this spring, and a full corps of nurses are to be hired.

Some remaining details of organization will be ironed out at a mass meeting of Greenbelt citizens in the school auditorium tonight.

The co-operative would be financed by collection of an enrollment fee and monthly dues from residents of the community desiring to participate in the enterprise. Preliminary estimates are for an enrollment fee of $5 for an individual and $10 for a family, with monthly dues of $1.50 for one person, $2.50 for two.

The first step for creation of the co-operative was taken by Greenbelt Manager Roy Braden at the request of residents. An advisory medical committee has surveyed probable needs and costs of the undertaking. Its members are Dr. Kingsley, Roberts, medical director of the Bureau of Co-operative Medicine; Dr. B. C. Williams, medical adviser of the Farm Security Administration, and Dr. F. D. Nott, assistant Farm Security Administration medical adviser.

New Deal Arraigned.

By the Associated Press.

William J. Kelly, president of the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, arraigned a whole series of New Deal enactments yesterday as the principal obstacles to the restoration of prosperity.

Their total effect, combined with policies which now seem to be in mind, has been to destroy the confidence of business, retard investment, and prevent the operation of "an open and free-flowing capital market," he said. He was a witness before the Senate Unemployment Committee.

As an essential measure to end the recession, Kelly testified, it must be made "clear to the country that national economic planning is not and will not become an accepted policy of the Federal Government."

Would End "Witch-Burning."

For the retail goods industry, Louis E. Kirstein, Boston merchant, called for "a cessation of witch-burning on the part of business groups as well as on the part of Government officials."

Representing the national organization of community chests, Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, son of the former President and Chief Justice, proposed a unified program for the administration of relief through Federal contributions to the States, to be matched by State and municipal funds. He advocated more home rule in the administration of relief.

Kelly said that so far as the durable goods industry was concerned, at least, there were three indispensible requisites to restored prosperity.

"The first of these essentials is confidence," he said. "That is, such belief in the continuance of conditions favorable to the successful outcome of long-range plans as to encourage and stimulate initi-

3 U. S. Cruisers to Join Britain In Ceremonies at Singapore

Three light cruisers have sailed from Honolulu for Sydney, Australia, where they will attend a sesquicentennial celebration, and then visit Singapore for the formal opening of new naval docks. The map shows their route. Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend (inset) is in command.

President Moves to Strengthen Nation's Ties With England; Whether Japan Will Participate in Opening of Docks Stirs Curiosity.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Taken as further evidence of the increasing Anglo-American bond of friendship, the Navy Department yesterday announced three American light cruisers would represent this country at the formal opening of the new Singapore naval docks February 14.

Several days ago this Government was invited by the British Admiralty to send several naval vessels to the Singapore ceremonies. President Roosevelt promptly agreed to acceptance of the invitation, and the announcement was made in a simple and unostentatious manner. Nevertheless, it was regarded as having world-wide significance.

This significance flowed from the fact that three modern American cruisers would join with the British navy in celebrating the virtual completion of the huge naval fortifications at Singapore, held to be a symbol of British prestige in the

Popular Front To Resign Over Finance Crisis

By the United Press.

Paris (Friday), Jan. 14.—The Popular Front government of Premier Camille Chautemps, buffeted by widespread labor disorders and collapse of the franc, decided to resign today.

The collapse of the government came unexpectedly as the Chamber of Deputies met for what was expected would be a vote of confidence in the monetary, political and social policies of Chautemps' cabinet.

Resignation of Socialist members of the cabinet immediately preceded and brought about the decision for the whole cabinet's resignation.

Socialist deputies, who earlier indicated they would support Chautemps, decided they could not vote their confidence in view of a statement by the premier which was interpreted as an invitation to the Communist Party to withdraw from the Popular Front government.

The decision to act immediately was made because of the urgency of the national crisis, caused by interlocking labor unrest, financial troubles and international tension.

The strikes had their origin in the rising cost of living, and intensified lack of confidence in the franc. This lack of confidence stems largely from the great treasury deficit, due in large part to army and navy expenditures caused by international tension.

Chautemps formed the second Peoples' Front government June 22, 1937, after the ministry of Socialist Leon Blum fell because a conservative senate refused him decree powers over troubled French finances.

It was believed that Edouard Daladier, minister of war in the fallen cabinet, or Edouard Herriot would be asked to undertake formation of a new government.

Unionized workers demonstrated in the streets last night, clashing with police and singing the Communist "Internationale."

Chinese Claim 2,000 Victims, Lose Tsining

Chiang Defends East-West Life-Line and Arrests Shantung General.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Friday, Jan. 14.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's armies fighting on China's "Last line of defense" were reported today to have killed 2,000 Japanese in desperate but futile resistance at Tsining, southwestern Shantung province.

At the same time the generalissimo was said by Chinese sources to have strengthened his military hand by arrest of one of his generals and the execution of a former government leader accused of trying to undermine his authority.

Chiang, Chinese said, had flown to Suchow to direct a major counter-offensive along the Tientsin-Pukow railroad, the route of the Japanese columns gradually closing in from north and south. Suchow is the junction of China's East-West "lifeline," the Lunghai railroad, and the Tientsin-Pukow line.

Beside the 2,000 slain, Chinese said more than 2,000 Japanese were wounded in the battle of Tsining, about 100 miles northwest of San Bernardino, Calif., Jan. 13 (AP).—Peace officers searched today for a motorist who ran down a man on the highway 20 miles northwest of Parker Dam yesterday and sped on with the body wedged inside a front fender, outdistancing pursuers. The body of the unidentified victim was not found. Witnesses reported the automobile was traveling about 70 miles an hour when it struck the man.

$84,000 Stolen From U.S. With Fake CCC Camp

By the Associated Press.

Amazed Senators heard yesterday that a clever Interior Department clerk who set up a "dummy" CCC camp defrauded the Government out of about $84,000 through voucher forgeries and escaped detection almost four years.

Three department investigators told the committee how Reno Stiteley, 29, former $2,300-a-year voucher room chief in the National Park Service, executed a three-year series of forgeries and used the money he obtained to pay off a $6,000 note on his house, buy an expensive automobile, gamble on sports events, speculate in the stock market and spend lavishly to entertain friends.

One of the investigators said Stiteley, who pleaded guilty recently in the District Court here to nine counts of a forgery indictment, "might still be getting away with it" if he hadn't shifted the scene of his operations from one department to another.

Details of the case were unfolded to the committee while it was considering the President's nomination of E. K. Burlew to succeed the late T. A. Walters as First Assistant Interior Department Secretary.

Chairman Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, called D. H. Rozier, jr., Robert C. McCarthy and Cecil G. Miles, the investigators, to testify after Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, interrupted his questioning of Burlew with a demand that the department's files on the Stiteley

12 in Vote Frauds File Appeal Here

By the Associated Press.

Twelve persons convicted of conspiracy to commit election frauds at Kansas City, Mo., in the November 1936 general election, appealed yesterday to the Supreme Court.

Their petition said that, following the elections, the United States Government seized 255,000 ballots cast in the 460 voting precincts, and two successive Federal grand juries have been investigating.

The twelve appealing from a decision by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals said their conviction was erroneous because it was not "a conspiracy against a definite individual . . . but is only a conspiracy against candidates and the public."

Economies Favored.

By Robert C. Albright.

The economy route to a balanced budget was favored yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who declared Government credit "is as high as it has ever been." He opposed additional taxation "with the business situation as it is now."

Morgenthau's contribution to the current clinic on the recession's cause and cure appeared in printed hearings of the House Treasury-Postoffice sub-committee made public yesterday.

The Treasury Secretary blamed the slump on heavy business inventories forced by fears of inflation; and the adjustment that followed "when they felt that this Administration would not stand for inflation, and would not let prices run away."

Morgenthau's views became known on the eve of publication of the full tax recommendations of a House Ways and Means subcommittee, proposing modification of the undivided profits tax and "smoothing out" of the capital gains levy.

Subcommittee recommendations will be reported to the full committee today, and public hearings will be opened tomorrow before the Ways and Means Committee. Estimated revenue from the new tax measure is expected to conform with Morgenthau's view "that we keep the revenue that we have on the present tax basis."

Meantime, experts of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported a possible "turn for the better" in the future business picture, and an indicated check in the recent sharp decline in industrial activity.

The President was reported considering additional conferences with representatives of automobile and automobile finance companies, and in one quarter it was said some limitation on credit extensions to

Sixty Gallinger Nurses Made Ill By Poisoned Food

Sixty Gallinger Hospital nurses and several physicians were recovering last night from what was characterized as "a mild outbreak of food poisoning" by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer.

Although five nurses were still ill, Dr. Seckinger said nearly all the nurses affected were back on duty.

Nurses first complained of gastro-intestinal disturbances after lunch Wednesday, and by midnight nearly a third of the staff were confined to their beds. The wave of illness has been traced to a meat salad, consisting of veal, lettuce, tomato and mayonnaise, according to one staff doctor who never eats the dish himself and hence was not sick.

Second-Class Mail Beats Special Delivery Two in 23 Cases; Leads First-Class 9 Times

Postmaster General Farley's recent statement—that newspapers mailed second-class often arrived at their destination as soon as regular first-class letters—is true—sometimes—a test conducted by The Post revealed yesterday.

All the mail was deposited at city postoffice at 2:35 a. m. Wednesday.

Simultaneously mailing a special delivery letter, a regular first-class letter and a copy of The Post to 23 persons in and around Washington, a check-up by The Post test yesterday revealed that in two instances the newspaper arrived at its destination before the special delivery letter, and in nine cases preceded the first-class mail by several hours.

The newspaper and the regular letter were delivered at the same time in another nine cases, while in seven other cases the letters failed to arrive nearly 12 hours after the paper had been received.

The final count showed for the special delivery letter: Arrived first, 20; arrived second, 2, and in a three-way tie, 1.

The regular letter failed to arrive first in any case, and was second only once. It was the last to be delivered 12 times, tied with the paper on 10 occasions, and tied with both paper and special once.

The paper's record showed: arrived first, 2; arrived second, 10; tied for second, 10; three-way tie for first, 1.

Mailed from the city postoffice at 2:35 a. m., one newspaper reached a Montgomery County address at 8:55 a. m., an hour ahead of the special delivery letter, mailed at the same, and easily outdistancing the regular letter, delivered at 1:30 p. m.

Another Montgomery County test found the copy of The Post delivered at 9:35 a. m., nosing out the special which came at 9:50 a. m., while the letter was timed at 2:30 p. m.

Nearly 24 hours separated the arrival of two sets of papers and letters addressed to Prince Georges County, in each case The Post reaching its destination at 10 a. m. Wednesday, while the pieces of regular first-class mail came at 9:30 a. m. and 9:45 a. m. Thursday.

Arriving at Hagerstown, Md., within a few minutes of 2:30 p. m. Wednesday, five newspapers beat out by an 18-hour margin five letters clocked in between 9:30 a. m. and 9:55 a. m. the following day.

In Washington, the paper beat the letter in one case out of four,

Evolution Not Denied in Bible, Church of England Declares

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 13.—The biblical account of the creation of the world provided "no objection" to theories of evolution, the Church of England's commission on Christian doctrine agreed today.

The 272-page report was described by some church leaders as the most important Anglican document in almost 400 years.

The 21-man commission, headed by the Archbishop of York, said the recognized Christian doctrine of creation "leaves abundant room for a variety of theories as to evolution of the world."

The commission, appointed in 1922 to resolve doctrinal differences, declared emphatically, however, that the universe "depends upon the creative will of God."

The report held the sixteenth century Reformation was justified and the Church was "still bound to resist the claims of contemporary papacy."

It added "some of us" envisaged a reunion of Christendom under leadership such as "a papacy which renounced some of its present claims," while other members of the commission hoped for a reunion "by a more federal type of constitution which would have no need" for such leadership.

In a report on miracles, some of the commission members held God would not want to perform miracles; others countered that this view would lead to "monotonous uniformity."

The commission avoided a flat statement on divorce issues, urging further study.

House Strives To Trim Postal, Treasury Costs

$60,862,722 Cut Sought In Appropriations for Next Fiscal Year.

By the Associated Press.

The House began an attempt yesterday to cut $60,862,722 from the Treasury and Postoffice Department appropriations for the next fiscal year.

Most of the proposed reduction, which would leave the two departments a total of $1,515,552,286, including a reappropriation of $115,000,000 for the old age security account, had the approval of the Budget Bureau, but the House Appropriations Committee loped off an additional $7,916,050.

Meantime, there was a wave of cloakroom criticism yesterday of the House's recent vote to empower President Roosevelt to veto individual items in appropriation bills.

Methods Criticised.

Criticism of the method by which Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, author of the amendment, got it across, developed among his coleagues on the Appropriations Committee, and they decided to continue the discussion at a special meeting today.

Some said an attempt would be made to nullify, or at least modify, the provision in the event it hurdles opposition already developed in the Senate.

On the House floor, Representative Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, asserted the membership had been "duped" into approving the item veto. He said it "goes far toward dictatorship."

Silver Program Scored.

Beginning of debate on the Treasury-Postoffice supply bill precipitated Republican criticism of the Budget Bureau the Administration's silver purchase program.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, said the bureau should be divorced from the Treasury's jurisdiction. He based his contention on the fact that Daniel Bell, acting director, is a Treasury employe.

Asserting this made Bell's position "embarrassing," Taber said "I doubt if we are getting the administration of the budget act to which the country is entitled."

Taber criticized the Government's program for purchase of newly mined domestic silver as "raids" on the Treasury.

Ouster of Kimble As Judge Upheld

Annapolis, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Court of Appeals today, in sanctioning a manadmus requiring Senator Robert B. Kimble (Republican), Allegany, to vacate the office of judge of the People's Court of Cumberland, held the 1936 law under which Kimble and eight other magistrates were appointed to be constitutional.

The court, through Judge F. Neal Parke, affirmed the writ of mandamus granted by Judge Frank G. Wagaman, in the Allegany County Court, on the petition of Alphonse E. Bender, Cumberland taxpayer. The appellate court held Kimble ineligible because in his capacity as a Senator he voted for the 1936 law. This brought him under the constitutional ban preventing legislators from holding offices created during their terms.

Jefferson Commission Meeting Will Be Jan. 25

A meeting of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, scheduled for next Tuesday, will not occur until Tuesday, January 25, the secretary of the commission announced yesterday. The further postponement is due to the illness of the chairman, Representative Boyland (Democrat), of New York.

At the meeting proposals are expected to be made for a much simpler memorial than the marble palace proposed by the commission last year.

Ban on Holding Firms For Bank Stocks Asked

By the Associated Press.

Congress received a recommendation from Secretary Morgenthau yesterday for legislation which would abolish holding companies for bank securities.

"There are eight or ten holding companies that hold much bank stock and I think that is an unhealthy situation," he said in testimony on the Treasury Department's 1939 appropriation bill which came before the House yesterday for consideration.

Summit Park Citizens' Body Campaigns for 'City' Facilities

URAL S. FISHER.

By Christine Sadler.

Summit Park is one of the new "have not" developments of the District of Columbia. Its citizens association is pledged to put it in the "have" class by bringing in sewers, city water, hard-surfaced streets, sidewalks and more inhabitants—and to keep its growing pains as light as possible.

There are approximately 50 homes in the area, which was "discovered" as a good suburban possibility about 10 years ago, but which has grown slowly because it lacks the city facilities mentioned. The big Oxon Run sewer assured for the whole section has increased the belief that Summit Park has a bright future.

Group Merger Sought.

Ural S. Fisher, young president of the citizens association, thinks a 100 per cent membership in one civic body would help insure a healthy growth for the community. The Summit Park group was organized four years ago, but two years ago the Progressive Summit Park Citizens Association was split off. Fisher was elected to bring the groups together, and believes he will succeed.

In addition to a strong and unified association of citizens, the program for which Fisher and his members are working calls for the paving of Suitland road, from Thirty-sixth to Thirty-eighth streets, and a change in the zoning laws from residential A to residential restricted A—which would prohibit the building of duplex homes and make the area one of single-family residences.

The association favors a vote for citizens of the District, but Fisher personally does not care for it. The group is likewise opposed to increased taxes and was against the increase in bus and street car fares.

Fisher Virginia Native.

"We wish the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge would hurry through. We believe the finishing of it will have a good effect on the growth of the areas over here across the Anacostia," Fisher said.

"Most of our fights so far have been for streets, and we are still after streets. We need new ones cut through, sewer facilities and street surfacing. We work with the other associations near us and hope we will continue to work with them, as our wants bear weight when we all work together."

Fisher, a native of Virginia, has been living in Summit Park for almost ten years. The oldest of his two children was the first baby born in the new settlement. He has been a member of the citizens association for three years. His wife, who edits the association paper, is one of his most active supporters in civic work.

For seven years Fisher has been a Scout Master. His hobby, outside the "extra work" mentioned is playing a trumpet. He is a delegate to the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, and is employed at the Navy Yard.

On Monday—A. H. Gregory, veteran treasurer of the Federation of Citizens Associations, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

ative and hazarding of capital and credit.

Lists Seven Aids to Business.

Congress, Kelly said, can do seven things to help business along, including assurance to the country that national economic planning was not to become an established policy. The others were:

Repeal of the tax on undistributed profits of corporations.

Amendment of the capital gains tax, to permit a carryover of losses from year to year as offsets for the tax on capital gains.

Amendment of the National labor relations act to provide "procedures" which are consistent with recognized principles of equity and justice.

Have the Securities and Exchange Commission "encourage and not repress a broad free market for the securities of business."

Correct unduly burdensome and punitive provisions of the securities acts of 1933 and the securities exchange act of 1934.

As quickly as Kelly had finished reading a lengthy prepared statement embodying his attack on New Deal laws, Chairman Byrnes (Democrat, South Carolina), asked for figures of employment in the durable goods industry. From an index figure of 33.4 in 1933, employment rose to a peak of 96 in 1937, the witness responded.

"Then we've actually destroyed you with prosperity, haven't we?" Byrnes said, pointing out that the laws to which Kelly objected were passed during the period of increasing employment.

"I shall be glad to state my feelings about those acts," said Kelly.

Industry Has Prospered.

"You have already," Byrnes said. "Isn't it a fact that your industry has prospered more than it has in years?"

"There is no question about that."

"Yet in 1932, your industry was not threatened by any of these destructive acts?"

"No."

"And your industry was broke, too, wasn't it?"

"We were pretty blue."

"Well, what did you attribute it to?"

while in the other three cases, both The Post and letter were delivered at the same time. The special beat the others by about two hours in each Washington test.

Mail directed to residents of Alexandria showed a dead heat between The Post and regular letter, while the special took first place by a four-hour margin.

Alexandria, Arlington County, Va., residents got their specials about 7:30 in the morning, receiving both the paper and letter in the regular mail about four hours later.

Handling of newspapers as second class matter was blamed by Farley for a good part of the postal deficit of $46,500,000 recently revealed

Told by a reporter that the postal report showed it cost the Postoffice Department $38,000,000 to transport newspapers, of which the department got back only $9,000,00, the President expressed the thought that the time has long since passed when the Government should subsidize newspapers and magazines.

Meanwhile, a postal committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association has replied to the President's remarks concerning newspaper mailing rates by submitting figures showing that it cost publishers more to send their papers via postal service than it does to have a private agency distribute them.

"Daily newspapers," the association said, "do not want a subsidy from the Federal Government in the form of postal rates or otherwise and do not ask for one."

The mail was delivered at the City Postoffice at 2:35 a. m. Wednesday. The following chart shows the time and place of delivery. All times are Wednesday except those marked with (*), which are Thursday.

Green Predicts C.I.O. Unions to Return to A.F.L.

Makes Claim as Dubinsky, Labor Peace Advocate Is Due to Testify.

Prediction that Committee for Industrial Organization leaders favoring reunion with the American Federation of Labor will "win the fight" came from William Green, president of the A. F. L., last night as the Senate Unemployment Committee prepared to hear today the principal C. I. O. advocate of labor peace.

He is David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, now engaged in hot controversy with C. I. O. Chairman John L. Lewis over responsibility for failure of A. F. L.-C. I. O. negotiations

Urged Building Boom.

Green, speaking in Boston at a dinner for R. J. Watt, Massachusetts labor leader leaving to become a member of the international labor office governing board in Geneva, foresaw victory for leaders "chafing under autocratic restraint" in the C. I. O. and referred to the "dual movement for a united labor movement." The Associated Press reported.

Green earlier had addressed the Boston Chamber of Commerce, forecasting industrial recession would end before the end of the year and asserting that the principal need now is for a nation-wide construction program.

The A. F. of L. head blamed continued division within labor to the C. I. O.'s insistence that its newly chartered unions, which Green said were in conflict with previously chartered A. F. of L. unions, be allowed to return with those which originally split with the federation.

Asserting the A. F. of L. had always "left the door open, the door unlocked" to the C. I. O., Green likened the federation's position to President Lincoln's determination that "the Union must be preserved."

"An agreement was reached in the peace negotiations which provided for a fair, honest and just settlement. When the agreement was reported to the one who controls, dictates and dominates the C. I. O., he said 'No.'"

In his earlier speech Green did not mention the C. I. O. by name, but asserted, the split in the ranks of labor was due to a total disregard of unit procedure and democratic procedure. He hit, too, at proposals for incorporating trade unions.

The "sins and excesses of a small minority in labor" should not be seized upon, he said, as "an excuse for subjecting the hosts of organized labor to Government regulation and domination."

The labor leader called upon business to accept "whole-heartedly" the principles of collective bargaining, and urged the "fullest co-operation" of businessmen and bankers in the furtherance of "a sound and constructive legislative and economic policy."

Discussing a Nation-wide construction program, he asserted "such a policy would serve a manifold purpose. It would increase home ownership, establish and maintain decent living and home conditions and, at the same time, open up a field for employment which seems to be well-nigh inexhaustible," he declared.

'Jobs or Relief' Theme of Pickets

Orderly and carrying placards which outlined their pleas to the District officials, the pickets soon dispersed after being refused a conference with District officials.

At the same time Director Elwood Street, of the Board of Public Welfare, announced yesterday that he had received a statement from the alliance protesting the "layoffs which are now taking place in the Public Assistance Division of the Welfare Board."

The statement which was also sent to the House sub-committee on District appropriations urged that they reject the cut of the relief budget from over $3,000,000 to an approved appropriation of $900,000.

The Gallup Poll

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 13.—Are the newspapers fair to the Roosevelt Administration?

Signs multiply that the Administration is becoming increasingly critical of the way the press reports Washington affairs. Recently the President charged the press with fostering a fear psychology, and Secretary Ickes, in a radio speech on December 30, continued the critical theme by intimating that "newspapers and commentators" stood in the way of better co-operation between business and government.

George Gallup.

Most people would agree that the best judges of fairness in handling news are the readers themselves. Through its far-flung organization of field reporters the Instutute has taken the question to newspaper readers all over the country—to city dwellers, many of whom have the opportunity to read only Republican papers; to farmers who read country weeklies; to newspaper readers of all incomes and all political affiliations.

Seventy-three out of every hundred newspaper readers interviewed say that the papers they read are fair to the Roosevelt Administration. Twenty-seven out of every hundred say that their papers are not fair to the New Deal.

This response must be interpreted as a testimonial to the impartiality of the handling of political news in America, the more striking because a majority of U. S. papers lean editorially to the Republican side. Last fall 62 per cent of newspaper readers told the Institute that the papers they read were supporting Landon.

Considering the Republican complexion of the press, it is not surprising to find that more Republicans than Democrats think the papers they read are fair to the Roosevelt Administration. For the country as a whole, 85 out of every 100 Republicans believe the press is fair to the New Deal and 65 out of every 100 Democrats feel the same way about it.

Among Democrats, belief in the political fairness of the press is highest in the South, where the papers are virtually all Democratic, and in the East. The vote of confidence among Democrats is somewhat lower in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast. But even in these sections, one-half of the Roosevelt supporters interviewed say the papers they read are fair to the New Deal.

Lawyers' Choice—Felix Frankfurter

If President Roosevelt asks the advice of the legal profession on the successor to Justice Sutherland, he will get several nominations that are generally regarded as acceptable to the New Deal.

During the fight over the Court plan, the Institute asked a cross section of the Nation's 175,000 lawyers to name the man they would like most to see appointed to the high bench.

Their first choice was Felix Frankfurter, Vienna-born Harvard Law School professor who has occupied high rank as an adviser to the Administration. Second choice was John W. Davis, the Democratic candidate in 1924, generally classed as a conservative. Third was Newton D. Baker, now deceased, and fourth was Senator Wagner, one of the foremost New Dealers in the Senate.

A dozen others received prominent mention from the lawyers, notably Gov. Murphy, former Dean Roscoe Pound of the Harvard Law School, Judge Learned Hand of New York, Senator Borah, James M. Landis, Donald Richberg, Attorney General Cummings, and Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson.

Eleven Million Nearer Than Eight.

As of late November, the best estimate of the number of unemployed persons is 10,870,000, the maximum figure reported in the recent unemployment census. In his report to the President, John D. Biggers, Director of the Unemployment Census, stated that 7,822,912 persons had filled out unemployment cards declaring that they were out of work. But studies by the Institute showed that only 74 per cent of the people who regarded themselves as jobless took the trouble to tell Uncle Sam about it. This figure was subsequently verified by special studies undertaken by Mr. Biggers, in which the government found that only 72 per cent of the unemployed reported their plight.

The failure of a large proportion of the jobless to send in unemployment report cards means that the figure resulting from the voluntary census should be discarded in favor of the more realistic estimate made in the sampling check-up.

Farm Conferees Favor 10,500,000-Bale Quota in Cotton Bill; Strict Control Is Debated.

THE FARM BILL CONFERENCE committee favored an annual cotton production of about 10,500,000 bales yesterday but was undecided whether to make the program effective before 1939.

Leaders said the production figure was virtually the same as proposed in the separate crop control bills which Senate and House conferees are re-writing into one measure.

Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, forecast considerable conflict over control features. He is deply opposed to strict Federal regulation and has a strong ally in Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee.

"The preponderance of letters from cotton farmers," Smith said, "urges the conferees to adopt the House provisions."

The latter places no control on the 1938 crop, and marketing quotas, starting in 1939, would not be imposed until the cotton carryover approximated 7,000,000 bales.

Resume U. S. Transient Aid, Senate Investigators Urged

An "alarming upward trend" in the number of California transients was reported to the Senate relief investigating committee yesterday by Walter A. Haas, of the San Francisco Community Chest.

Haas asked that the Federal Government reassume financial responsibility for the out-of-State transient, through grants-in-aid to the States, and the development of a co-ordinated program.

Detailing State difficulties in meeting the problem since abandonment of the Federal transient program in November, 1935, he said "statistics for the last half of 1937 show an alarming upward trend at the end of the year." Transients aided by the State Relief Administration rose from 773 for the week ending July 29 to 1,517 for the week ended December 30. He said 246,123 transients in need of manual employment entered the State through November 15 of last year.

Haas estimated the 12-month figure "will exceed that of the previous year, despite the betterment of drought conditions in the Middle West."

The witness said no provision has been made for the relief of unemployed single men since March, 1937, but boys, between the ages of 18 and 21, and unemployable transients, exclusive of single men, have been given assistance.

Delinquency Alarming.

Haas emphasized "the plight of the homeless boys" entering the States, and said a local lay committee had been "shocked by reports under which these youths were forced to live and alarmed by evidences of delinquency among them." He said the committee as a temporary solution had opened a "shelter" with a capacity for 43 boys.

The Community Chest representative also testified that the number of maritime workers out of employment has recently "assumed serious proportions" in Pacific Coast seaports.

"The transient problem is definitely a Federal problem with which no political subdivision can successfully cope," he testified. "But, providing Federal money is made available, State and county governments can co-operate in working out an intelligent long-time program."

Partly Due to Strikes.

Chairman James F. Byrnes asked if unemployment among West Coast seamen was not "due to labor disputes" and Haas agreed it was "partly" due to this cause.

Then Byrnes asked if aid to migrant youths might not "encourage" transient boys to remain away from home. Haas replied he would like to see a Federal policy worked out that would furnish financial means "of sending these youths back home."

The witness outlined broad general relief recommendations made by community chests and councils of California in 1936, and urged favorable committee consideration.

He asked that Federal funds be provided for direct and work relief and a grant-in-aid basis to States with the Federal Government establishing and requiring the maintenance of adequate standards of relief and personnel. He asked direct administration of relief be put in the hands of qualified local units of Government under the supervision of a proper State body.

Dr. A.R. Bird Heads 'First Ward' Group

Dr. Andrew R. Bird, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, was elected chairman of the First Ward Neighborhood Council Wednesday at a meeting of the organization, formed to co-ordinate social agencies in the area between the White House and the river, known as "Foggy Bottom."

Other officers chosen were: Vice chairman, Mrs. Grace Parr, public assistance division; secretary, Harry Moore, juvenile court probation officer; assistant secretary, Miss Dorothy Ellis, attendance department, public schools; representative to the executive committee, Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, secretary of the First Ward Citizens Association.

Chairmen of standing committees were appointed as follows: Housing and health, Robert St. James, George Washington University; co-chairman, Miss Elizabeth McDermott, Instructive Visiting Nurse Society. Church co-operation, the Rev. Charles Enders, Concordia Evangelical and Reformed Church; co-chairman, the Rev. Hampton T. Gaskins, Liberty Baptist Church. Recreation, Dr. Carl Douglas Walls, George Washington University.

Ford Considering Third Peace Plan

St. Louis, Jan. 13 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co., which had rejected two previous peace proposals, today was asked to consider a third plan for settlement of a strike called by the United Automobile Workers of America at its St. Louis assembly plant.

"Let's get together and get the men off the picket line," John L. Sullivan, union attorney, said to the company's counsel, Thomas F. Muldoon, at a National Labor Relations Board hearing.

He suggested the company dismiss all employes who were not on its pay roll at the time of a seasonal layoff last September 15 and then refill their jobs with union men on the basis of seniority. In return, he said the union would end its strike. Company officials took the plan under advisement.

Lorton Is Safe For Sam Beard, Street Asserts

Public Welfare Director Elwood Street declared yesterday he was "confident that any prisoner at Lorton can be competently handled," following a request from the District Commissioners for a full explanation why Sam Beard was permitted to return to Lorton.

The Commissioners' request was sent to Supt. Ray L. Huff of the D. C. penal institutions by Street yesterday, and a detailed report on the Beard controversy will be made, it was stated.

"I have great confidence in Mr. Huff and his staff," Street said.

"I must refuse to comment on whether Beard should be permitted to remain at Lorton until I have received a detailed report from Mr. Huff," he added.

Request Sent Street.

The request, addressed to Director Street, was as follows:

"The Commissioners would like to be advised why Sam Beard was returned from Atlanta to Lorton; also how much longer his sentence is; and a report on his behavior since confinement."

By an act of Congress the Welfare Board has "complete and exclusive control and management of the reformatory at Lorton."

In a memorandum Wednesday to Director Street from Superintendent Huff on the subject of "Transfer Publicity," it was pointed out that in the recent transfers, 15 District prisoners were transferred from Lorton who presented acute problems of custody or discipline or both.

Huff reported in the memorandum that "the collective judgment was based on the records and on the observations of these prisoners by the staffs of the institutions concerned."

"Medium Custodial."

Beard was one of the 13 returned to Lorton from the Federal prison at Atlanta. He was termed as a "medium custodial" prisoners.

The notorious gambler, who started his sentence 21 months ago, is now within 20 miles of the District of Columbia. Fears are widespread that his sinister hand again will gain control of the Washington underworld rackets.

When he was prosecuted, the prosecuting attorney recommended that he serve his term away from this territory. He was sentenced to Atlanta from 2 to 6 years, and it is pointed out that at the present time he is eligible for parole.

Should he be required to serve the maximum term, he would probably only serve slightly over 4 years, on the basis of an 8-day reduction per month for good behavior.

Washington Puts Pressure on Reds In 'Robinson' Case

By the Associated Press.

The United States Government put additional pressure on Soviet officials yesterday for an explanation of the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens, of New York in Moscow last month.

Secretary Hull, who asked the Soviet government for information concerning Mrs. Rubens a week ago, invited Soviet Ambassador Troyanovsky to visit him.

During their conversation, the Secretary of State asked the ambassador to transmit to his government a request for an explanation as to the delay in supplying the desired information.

The State Department later received a dispatch from Loy Henderson, counselor of the American Embassy in Moscow, saying he was informed by the Russian foreign office that, although the matter had been referred to Soviet internal authorities immediately upon the receipt of the United States request of January 7, the foreign office had been unable to elicit any information from them thus far.

The agreement whereby the United States recognized the Soviet regime in 1933 required the Soviet government to report to the American Embassy within 72 hours the arrest of any American citizen in that country.

W. Va. Clubwoman Slain by Boarder Who Kills Himself

Cameron, W. Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A neighbor found Mrs. Beulah Cooper, middle-aged wealthy clubwoman, and J. O. Prunty, elderly boarder, shot to death today in the Cooper home.

Mrs. Lena Snowden, the neighbor, said she heard a shot and found Mrs. Cooper, a widow, lying in the front hall. Prunty was lying in the kitchen with a pistol at his side, she added.

Dr. W. C. Boggs and Justice of the Peace Clyde Loper said Prunty shot the woman during a struggle in the hall, then walked to the kitchen and put a bullet through his head.

Miner She Never Saw Leaves Stock to Marion Davies in Will Nevadan Who Always Went to Screen Star's Pictures Remembers Her at Death, Although Fan Mail Went Unanswered.

By the Associated Press.

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 13.—Marion Davies was only a shadow on a movie screen to Clark Alvord, hard rock miner of the Nevada hills, but he bequeathed her the bulk of his small estate and named her one of its executors.

When Alvord—miner, student of Indian lore, postmaster and keeper of a general store in the desert town of Nelson—died last week he had no autographed picture of the actress. Friends said he wrote her hundreds of fan letters that went unanswered.

But when his will was filed for probate today it read:

"I give and bequeath to my beloved Marion Davies all my property both real and personal which includes 510,000 shares of the South Eastern Mining Co. of Eldorado Canyon, Nev., she at all times and her heirs to have all full voting power of above shares."

This was written in his own script September 24, 1930. Later Alvord added this codicil:

"I desire that 45 per cent of my estate be distributed to my legal heirs, the rest to go according to my last will. I appoint John S. Satain and Leo McNamee and Marion Davies as executors of this will to act without bonds."

The estate included $1,000 cash; the mining company and a lease with an estimated value of $9,000.

Friends said that Alvord never missed one of Miss Davies' pictures and that he often drove 40 miles across rough desert roads here to see her latest movies.

Silk Stockings Bind Murdered Woman, Girl, 19

Pair Shot Dead in Long Island Home; Ankles, Wrists Lashed Together.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—Crime scientists peered through microscopes at a pistol bullet and knots in silk stockings today in an effort to solve the puzzling murder of two women in a quiet home in the Long Island village of Elmont.

The bullet had ripped through the head of 19-year-old Jean Schuellain as she sat in a chair in the home of Mrs. Lenida Waite, 59-year-old widow and a neighbor.

Mrs. Waite's body, also shot through the head, lay on a bed when the crime was discovered last night. The wrists and ankles of both women were bound with silk stockings, tied with square knots. There were no signs of struggle.

Police, tracing the courses of the two bullets fired, were unable to find the slug which killed Mrs. Waite. They reasoned that it may have dropped, spent, after it glanced off a bedpost and that the killer retrieved it.

Detectives ordered a search for and elderly man said to have threatened death to members of the Waite family. Mrs. Waite's son, George Waite, an electrician, who discovered the killings when he returned from work, told police a New Jersey man, an old acquaintance of the family, had appeared at the house last Thanksgiving and threatened to kill them all.

Neither woman had been criminally assaulted and police discarded robbery as a motive.

Boy, 11, Must Be Tried For Killing Stepfather

Beckley, W. Va., Jan. 13 (AP).—A smiling 11-year-old boy with a new haircut heard the judge tell him today he must stand trial January 28 for killing his 60-year-old stepfather.

Ray Schilling sat calmly with his mother, also charged with murder, while the trial docket was made up. January 28 also was the date set for the trial of Mrs. Ida Harper Jarrell. But mother and son will be tried separately. The boy claims he shot his stepfather, George Jarrell, a coal prospector, in defense of his mother.

Warned Death Is Near, Cleric Sticks to Fast

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Jan. 13.—Dean Israel Harding Noe moved through a 45-minute service today in the face of a physician's warning that death was near for the 46-year-old churchman unless he ended a religious fast begun more than a year ago.

A doctor, who declined to be quoted by name, said Dean Noe probably could survive "only a few more days" unless he abandoned his effort to prove "man can, here and now, put on the fullness of the God-head bodily, provided he is a willing instrument in the Father's hands."

Vigor Amazes Communicants.

Dean Noe strode across the street from the deanery to St. Mary's Episcopal Cathedral this morning with a vigor that amazed some of his communicants. Smiling at friends, he told newsmen he had nothing to add to his statement last night objecting to what he regarded as the premature publication of what he was attempting to prove by his fast.

"When my program has been completed in the next two years, I shall have something to say," he explained.

Robed in purple, he carried a lighted taper to the altar and applied it to the candles. His voice was strained and husky, and bore little resemblance to that of the robust clergyman of a year ago.

Subsists on Oranges.

The dean's friends said he subsisted all of last year on oranges alone, starting from December 23, 1936, and giving up water last February. Since January 2, he has taken nothing except the tiny wafer and sip of wine of the communion service he holds three times weekly.

"A man can live a long time on orange juice," a physician said, "especially a robust man like the dean was when he began his fast. He weighed around 200 pounds and drew from an enormous supply of reserve strength. The dean doesn't appear to weigh more than 100 pounds now."

Bootleg Industry Fast Dwindling, Says Report

By the Associated Press.

America's one-active bootleg industry is dwindling fast, although liquor peddlers still have a foothold in the South, Stewart Berkshire, deputy commissioner in charge of the alcohol tax unit, Internal Revenue Bureau, said in his annual report yesterday.

Wife-Swapping Trial Witness Dies in Court

Principal's Step-Father Collapses on Stand in Massachusetts.

By the Associated Press.

Salem, Mass., Jan. 13.—Fatal collapse of a testifying witness tonight recessed Salem's "wife-swapping" divorce trial for five days.

Lyman S. Smith, 59-year-old Saugus liquor dealer and stepfather of Mrs. Raymond S. Lee, one of the four principals in the case, fainted on the witness stand and died shortly afterward in an anteroom.

Dr. Ignatius Zielinski, medical examiner, said heart disease caused death.

Accounts Conflicting.

Smith was called toward the end of the three-day sensational trial as Judge Edward B. O'Brien continued his frequent questioning of witnesses to sift the conflicting accounts of the marital mixup.

Lee, a Salem chauffeur, testified to the "wife-swapping" angle in the two divorce suits brought by his wife and Calvin M. Watson, Topsfield tree surgeon.

One set of witnesses tended to corroborate his account, and another contradicted it, while the two young attractive brunette wives denied or belittled the "switching."

Mrs. Esther A. Davis, Salem housewife, who corroborated Lee, said it "seemed sort of an agreement" that the Watsons and Lees should "swap" partners and leave her home in different cars after parties. It happened at least four times, she added.

Mrs. Lee called the whole story a "pack of lies."

Mrs. Watson admitted frequent switching of mates, but maintained she never was intimate with the chauffeur.

Smith, as he collapsed, was relating how he cared for Mrs. Lee and her young son after she had sued for divorce last year. Mrs. Lee, he said, "was all black and blue and the boy was in bad shape."

Killer to Plead Unwritten Law In Triangle Case

Defense Questions Jurors on Prejudice as to Victims' Morals.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 13.—Prospective jurors in the murder trial of Paul A. Wright, former airport manager, were asked today if they would be prejudiced should the defendant disclose the story of how and why he shot his wife and his "best friend" to death.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler asked the veniremen:

Would they be biased if Wright were to tell from the witness stand just what caused him, in a "white flame" of jealous frenzy, to kill Evelyn McBride Wright and John B. Kimmel when he found them embracing in his home the night of November 9?

He also asked them if they would be prejudiced against his client if his testimony reflected on the "character, morals and reputations of the two victims."

Filling the courtroom of Superior Judge Ingall W. Bull were 250 spectators, all that could get in. Hundreds milled in the corridors outside.

First in the room before the opening of the trial was Dr. J. J. Wright, of Milwaukee, Wis., father of the defendant. He shook hands with his Edith McBride, mother of the slain son.

Also in the courtroom were Mrs. Mrs. Wright, and Mrs. Maureen Kimmel, widow of Kimmel.

Wright has pleaded innocent to first degree murder charges. Giesler has indicated he will base his case largely on the "unwritten law."

White Dog, Guide Of Legless Paper Seller, Is Killed

Edward Bernstein, the legless newspaper vendor who sells the latest editions as he sits on his wheeling platform on F street northwest, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets, was absent from the stand he has occupied for the past five years yesterday. The reason was that his best friend and boon companion, Snowball, a white Spitz, was killed helping his master across the street at the intersection of New York avenue and Thirteenth street Wednesday.

Day in and day out Bernstein, with Snowball nuzzling against him, made a livelihood. His cheery smile made customers forget the fact his legs were gone at the hip—smashed off by a train near Pensacola, Fla., when Berstein was 10, quarter-of-a-century ago.

Public Will Vote On Film of Birth

A "delayed ballot" will be used by the Medical Society of the District of Columbia in polling its guests Tuesday at the private showing of the movie "The Birth of a Baby."

The exhibition has been arranged to get a cross-section of lay opinion on whether the picture should be shown to the general public. The film was produced at the expense of the Mead Johnson Co., with the co-operation of the medical profession.

Each of the several hundred guests Tuesday will be given a ballot and a stamped envelope.

Cloudy, Warmer, Today's Forecast

Increasing cloudiness, turning to rain in the afternoon, and slowly rising temperatures were predicted for the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia today.

Typical winter weather greeted Washington yesterday, with bright sunshine and chill breezes throughout most of the afternoon.

Yesterday's low was 33 at 8 a. m., while the high was 39 at 3:50 p. m. By nightfall the mercury had dropped to 35 again.

Law Dean Opposes Higher Speed Limit

Vigorous opposition to proposals for raising the District speed limit was expressed last night in a radio address by Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick, dean of the Columbus University Law School.

"The authorities well know that a limit of 25 miles would not move traffic any faster in downtown districts," asserted Dr. Fitzpatrick. "And in any group of accidents the chances of fatal outcome increase rapidly as the speed mounts."

He declared that District traffic conditions call for "more fundamental treatment."

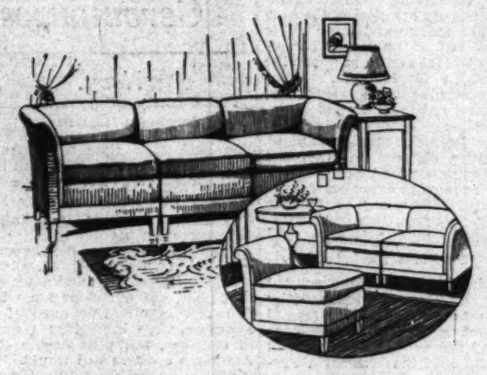
Ex-Army Teacher Wins British Prize

Award of the Buchanan Medal to Dr. Frederick Fuller Russell, formerly curator of the Army Medical Museum and instructor at the Army Medical School, by the Royal Society of London was announced yesterday in Science, official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The honor was bestowed in recognition of world-wide services in the development of public health. Dr. Russell is a member of the board of managers of Memorial Hospital for Treatment of Cancer and Allied Diseases, New York, and a lecturer at Harvard medical school.

He was curator of the Army Medical Museum here from 1907 to 1913, also serving as prfessor of pathology and bacteriology at George Washington University medical school from 1909 to 1913. While in Washington he taught bacteriology and clinical microscopy at the Army Medical School.

An Old SOFETT Comes To Life


Years ago our grandfathers courted our grandmothers on a small sofa which they called a sofett. Not so very long ago came to life a modern designer's conception of this interesting old price. To meet present-day conditions, this sofett is made in three separate pieces which fit snugly together to form a full-sized davenport, or which may be used as a small sofa or love seat, and chair. We are showing one similar to the one pictured in a lovely green fabric with tiny figures at $165—solid Honduras mahogany, too. May we show you?

Tax Boost Now Frowned Upon By Morgenthau

automobile purchasers had been discussed.

Coincidentally, the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee reported to the Senate its recommendation for a Federal Trade Commission investigation of the policies employed by manufacturers in distributing motor vehicles, and policies of retailers in selling them, "as these policies affect the public interest."

In the House, Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, proposed formation of a "council of minds" free of factional "bickering" to fight the recession. He proposed a co-operative meeting of Government and political, financial, industrial, agricultural, labor, religious and educational leaders.

Recommendation by Secretary Morgenthau that the budget be balanced "through economies rather than through increased taxation," met almost immediate opposition from congressional progressives, led by Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr., of Wisconsin.

Senator LaFollette, in a radio speech, again urged "increasing income taxes and broadening the base to provide greater and more stable revenue" as the "only way to balance the budget and to preserve the credit of the Government."

He declared private investment alone could not increase and maintain National income at a level necessary for an adequate tax yield.

LaFollette did not mention the Morgenthau statement, but declared "we are once more experiencing the disaster of attempting to balance the budget by reduction of Governmental expenses."

"Will Not Work."

"The trouble with the argument that the budget can be balanced by drastic reduction of Governmental investment is that all experience since 1929 proves that it simply will not work," said the Wisconsin Progressive.

La Follette's statements were made in the course of a Town Meeting of the Air broadcast from New York, in which Amos Pinchot, prominent Republican, prescribed Federal retrenchment rather than expenditure, although Pinchot favored "adequate relief."

Pinchot proposed abandonment of all programs "which involve scarcity," enforcement of the antitrust laws, abandonment by the Government of its "attempts to manage industry and farming from Washington" and repeal of the capital gains and undistributed surplus taxes.

He said it would be sufficient revenue if tax sources yielded the $6,650,000,000 estimated on the present base.

Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the subcommittee, pressed Morgenthau for his views on the recession, and whether he thought it "temporary."

Morgenthau replied that "this slowing down of business having come so recently, I think it is impossible for anybody to say whether it is a temporary matter or whether it is something that will last for several months or several years. Frankly, it is too early to say—we do not know."

Morgenthau's statement was made before the sub-committee December 8, before the recent round of conferences on the industrial situation. Yesterday, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in its monthly survey of economic conditions, said it saw signs of improvement.

The bureau cited reduced inventories, renewed interest by prospective buyers in some lines, some improvement in demands for cotton and wheat, outlook for continued foreign demand of American farm products and a less severe decline in consumer purchasing power than in industrial activity.

Business "Stocked Up."

The Secretary said some of the recession "is seasonal and some of it is not."

"As you understand," he testified, "the country was so convinced that we would have inflation, and that this Administration would not be able to control runaway inflation, that business generally stocked up pretty heavily. Then, when they felt that tis Administration would not stand for inflation, and would not let prices run away, they found themselves with more than normal inventories.

"They were also convinced that we would make a serious effort to balance the budget, and we will balance it if we spend $1,500,000,000 less than we spent last year. Also, the people were pretty well convinced that we would have real trouble in Europe, and things like copper, nickel and commodities of that sort went up on a war basis. Then, as somebody put it, 'Peace reared its ugly head.'

"As a result of those things, we find business men making an adjustment all over the country, getting themselves in a better inventory position."

Ludlow asked how much longer "can we operate with a deficit and still maintain the Government's credit?"

"I do not know," replied Morgenthau. "That is a pretty hard question to answer. Of course, we think we should balance the budget as fast as we can, always keeping in mind that we may have an unemployment situation. If we do, the Administration will not let anybody starve. Barring that situation, the chances of balancing the budget are excellent."

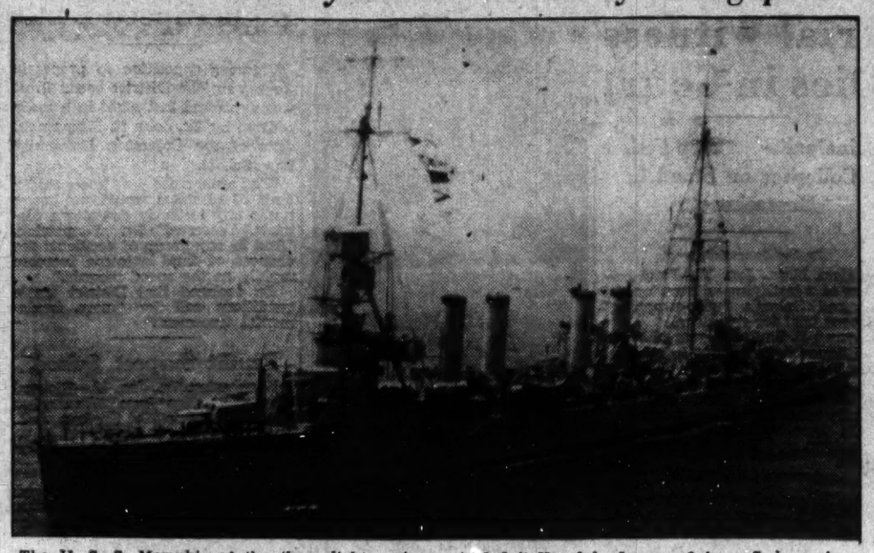
No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

U. S. Cruiser on Way to Naval Ceremony at Singapore



The U. S. S. Memphis of the three light cruisers which left Honolulu January 9 for a Sydney, Australia, sesquicentennial celebration which will be followed by a visit to Singapore, where new naval docks will be opened formally by the British government.

Navy.

Far East, at a time when Anglo-American relations with Japan have suffered a severe strain.

There was lively curiosity here, following the Navy Department's announcement as to whether the British had invited the Japanese navy to participate in the ceremonies. None knew, and advices on that point did not come from London last night. But even if the Japanese were invited as a matter of courtesy, the visit of the three American cruisers still would be regarded as signifying this Government's friendliness toward the British efforts in the Far East.

There is no doubt British and American authorities are fully aware of the significance that will be attached to the visit of the three cruisers to Singapore and are quite willing to have such a face placed on the event as a gesture toward Japan. The American authorities, however, confined themselves to the Navy Department announcement, and pointed out that anything said beyond that constituted speculation, even if plausible speculation.

En Route to Sydney.

"The Navy Department announced today," its statement asserted, "that the three light cruisers Trenton, Milwaukee and Memphis, after visiting Sydney, Australia, during its sesqui-centennial celebration, beginning January 26, will stop en route home at Singapore to be present at the formal opening of the new Singapore docks on February 14.

"Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend, U. S. Navy, is in command of the visiting ships, flying his flag on the U. S. S. Trenton."

The ships are en route to Sydney, accompanied by the heavy cruiser, Louisville. They left San Diego, Calif., on January 3 and Honolulu on January 9. The visit of the vessels to Australia was planned several months ago, and it was expected they would remain several days in Australian waters, visiting the principal cities.

This plan has been altered, however, by the invitation to attend the Singapore celebration. The U. S. S. Louisville will remain in Australian water about six weeks, visiting Melbourne, Adelaide, Auckland and possibly Hobart, Tasmania, and returning by way of Tahiti, Society Islands, South Pacific.

Although the Navy Department announcement said the three cruisers would go to Singapore "en route home" from Sydney, this is not an accurate statement if they are to return to San Diego direct. Singapore would be on the "route home" if the vessels should return by way of the Mediterranean and Atlantic Ocean. Singapore also is only slightly off the course from Australia to the American naval base at Manila. It is a possibility the three cruisers may stop at Manila after leaving Singapore, thus increasing temporarily the naval strength based on the Philippine Islands.

The Navy's announcement, however, was made after Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, conferred with Secretary of State Cordell Hull. Secretary Hull, Admiral Leahy and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, earlier this week, had a session with President Roosevelt at which the Singapore visit may have been discussed in detail.

Leaving the State Department, Admiral Leahy did not reveal the nature of his conversation with the Secretary of State, but he said the Navy favored general upward revision of present limits on warship building without large appropriations immediately. He indicated the first move would be an expansion of the limits set on naval building by the Vinson-Trammell act of 1934, which authorized a program within the provisions of the Washington arms and Londan naval limitation treaties, both of which expired at the end of 1936.

It is known the Navy is desirous of more funds for the construction of additional auxiliary vessels in order to place the Navy "in balance" as between capital ships, cruisers and auxiliaries. The present budget for the next fiscal year calls for $142,000,000 for new construction, compared with $130,000,000 appropriated for that purpose in this fiscal year.

The Navy appropriation bill for the 1939 fiscal year, beginning July 1, will be reported to the House next week. Meanwhile, the President, within a few days, is expected to send to Capitol Hill his naval armament message outlining what steps he believes this country should take to strengthen its sea forces.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison conferred during the day with the President. He said he left with Mr. Roosevelt results of a survey into steel prices the Navy must pay. He said the survey indicated the prices asked were not unreasonable, when compared with estimates made by naval authorities.

These decks are the largest in the world, designed to accommodate vessels up to 55,000 tons. In addition to the drydocks where warcraft of the largest type can undergo substantial repairs, Singapore has accommodations for the storage of oil fuel, explosives and other naval supplies, and has an air base described as the largest self-contained air base in the British Empire. Substantially more than 12,000 British naval, military and air forces are now based on Singapore.

A British estimate in 1936 indicated that more than $60,000,000 would be spent in the fortifying and equipment of Singapore. The drydocks cost $38,500,000. Approximately $4,000,000 is being spent on the air base while $9,810,000 is being spent on army purposes.

Singapore is Great Britain's protection for India against a Far East attack. It likewise serves as protection for the Dutch, French and Portugese colonies in the Far East and would serve as an obstacle to an attack on the Philippine Islands.

It was regarded then, as now, as one of the most strategic spots in abandonment of the project. But the Far East—"the cross roads of the world." As a gesture toward world disarmament, Ramsay MacDonald, when British prime minister, greatly retarded the work of fortifying Singapore and urged after the Japanese invasion of Manchuria in 1931, the British accelerated the Singapore project.

Biggest Docks in World.

These docks are the largest in the world, designed to accommodate vessels up to 55,000 tons. In addition to the drydocks, where warcraft of the largest type can undergo substantial repairs, Singapore has accommodations for storage of oil fuel, explosives and other naval supplies and has an air base described as the largest self-contained one in the British Empire. A British naval, military and air personnel of substantially more than 12,000 is based at Singapore.

A British estimate in 1936 indicated more than $60,000,000 would be spent on the fortification and equipment of Singapore. The drydocks cost $38,500,000. Approximately $4,000,000 is being spent on the air base, while $9,810,000 is being spent on army purposes.

The value of Singapore as a naval base is that it commands sea communications from the East and West, just as Gibralter does the Mediterranean. It is Great Britain's protection for India against a Far East attack. It likewise serves as protection for the Dutch, French and Portuguese colonies in the Far East, and would serve as an obstacle to an attack on the Philippine Islands.

The secrets of Singapore have been jealously guarded by the British, and in the past three years there have been frequent stories concerning the arrest of Japanese in that vicinity. Thus, the officers and men of the three American cruisers will be privileged to view a naval base that few naval personnel, other than British, have seen.

Capt. Frank A. Braisted is in command of the Trenton, Capt. March C. Bowman is in command of the Milwaukee, and Commander Larence F. Reifsnider is in charge of the Memphis.

British Surprised.

Singapore, Jan. 13 (AP).—Announcement three United States cruisers would call here February 14 was received as a "pleasant surprise" in British naval circles. Navy officials described the occasion as a "purely empire affair" and said no invitations had been issued to foreign powers.

Available Cash Exceeds Farm Loan Demands

Agriculture Department Expert Says Acceptable Borrowers Too Few.

An Agriculture Department economist yesterday reported that "both the commercial banks and the institutions supervised by the Farm Credit Administration have lending capacities in excess of the demand of farmers with acceptable credit ratings."

The statement, result of a study by E. J. Engquist, jr., results of which were published in The Agricultural Situation, a monthly Agriculture Department publication, came as advocates of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage act were preparing a vigorous battle for its extension. In some quarters Engquist's study was regarded as aimed at this proposal.

"Agricultural credit activity appeared to be more nearly normal in 1937 compared with the drastic adjustments between 1930 and 1935," Engquist said. Increased agricultural prosperity, evidenced by larger farm income, increases in the price of farm products and the rising value of farm real estate formed the background supporting resumption of normal credit conditions.

Engquist also found that loans are being offered farmers by commercial banks "at rates slightly more favorable than heretofore and that emergency crop loans were offered during the year at 4 instead of the previous 5½ per cent.

case be submitted to the committee. Burlew previously had told the committee he had no connection with disbursement of funds and, in reply to Pittman's questions, had explained he did not know full details of the Stiteley case.

Rozier, McCarthy and Miles said Stiteley began in August, 1933, to forge vouchers on a "dummy" CCC camp he "established" in the Shenandoah National Park, in Virginia, collecting them through the War Department office, cashing them or depositing them to his account at banks and then destroying copies that, in regular procedure, would have been filed with Park Service records.

While Pittman, McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, and other Senators expressed amazement that Stiteley was able to continue his operations through March, 1937, and expand them to include "padding" the pay roll of a CCC camp that actually existed and forging vouchers on the Bureau of Public Roads, the investigators explained Stiteley escaped detection because:

detection because:

He had easy access to voucher forms; he knew the departments were "months behind" in posting their voucher records; he destroyed the copies that might have led to exposure.

Miles said the departments are "more careful now."

McCarthy said Stitley "might have kept on getting away with it if our investigation had not uncovered the forgeries of vouchers disbursed through the Interior Department."

After Rozier commented it was "difficult to say whether the frauds should have been caught at the War Department or Park Service or by whom," Pittman expressed surprise that records of neither department had not exposed the forgeries.

Turning to another subject, Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, insisted that Louis R. Glavis be called to testify to wire-tapping and other espionage while he was the Interior Department's chief investigator. Steiwer said he wanted to "shed full light on the matter of whether Burlew had any connection with wire tapping and other spying in the Interior Department."

Led by 'Monsieur X,' Group Blamed for Murder of Woman Spy.

By the United Press.

Paris, Jan. 13.—The Surete Nationale tonight said a band of Italian executioners, led by a mysterious "Monsieur X," was being tracked down for a series of political murders, including the stilleto slaying of an attractive French woman spy.

Commissioner Mondanel, of the Surete, said the motives behind the murders were "extremely grave and of far-reaching consequences," and hinted the band worked under orders from high Fascist quarters.

Police were reported to have information indicating Mlle. Letitia Toureaux, the woman spy, was slain on a Paris subway train May 18 by the same band which killed Carlo and Nello Roselli, rich young Italians exiled from Premier Benito Mussolini's Fascist regime.

The murder on January 26, 1937, of Dmitri Navachine, Russian economist who broke with Dictator Josef V. Stalin over the Russian "purge," also was attributed to the execution gang.

The slaying of the Russian at first was attributed to Soviet secret agents. Later police information was said to point toward the "Csar," secret committee of revolutionary action which allegedly is the nucleus of the rightest Cagoulards (Hooded Men).

Five Under Arrest.

Minister of the Interior Marx Dormoy and the Surete Nationale last night announced five "Csar" members were under arrest in the slayings of the Roselli brothers, the eldest of whom, Carlo, escaped from Mussolini's Lipari prison island in 1929 and fled to Paris, where he founded the anti-Fascist newspaper, Giustizia E Liberta. One of the five men—Jean Marie Bouvier, 20-year-old French soldier and son of a Paris industrialist—allegedly confessed and described the slayings of the Roselli brothers in a woods near Bagnolesde l'Orne last June 11.

New 40-Ton Plane To Replace Clipper

San Francisco, Jan. 13 (AP).—One of the largest and most powerful ocean-spanning planes probably will replace the ill-starred Samoan Clipper on the Honolulu-New Zealand air route a few months hence.

Pan American Airways officials said a 40-ton, 72-passenger plane being built for that route would be ready for test flights in March.

Investigation of the fiery crash of the clipper near Pago Pago, Samoa, Tuesday and the loss of its seven crew members including Capt. Edwin C. Musick, ace international air mail flier, awaited arrival of examiners at the scene.

Oil Firms Finish Defense in Trial

Madison, Wis., Jan. 13 (AP).—The defense rested today in the trial of 16 major oil companies and 37 individuals on charges of conspiracy to fix Midwestern gasoline prices.

James Miller, New York accountant, the last defense witness, testified that major oil companies' purchases of gasoline from independent refiners in 1935 and 1936 generally were made at prices below the level of published quotations.

Britisher Is Hurt In Palestine Riot

Jerusalem, Jan. 13 (AP).—A British constable was wounded and an Arab was killed today in a battle between terrorists and British army troops, the royal air force and Palestine police in the Hebron district. The clash resulted from the search for the slayers of J. L. Starkey, British archaeologist, who was killed Monday in a holdup near Hebron.

Fifty were reported wounded today in fighting between Syrian nationalists and separatists in Jebel, Druze, semiautonomous area in the French-mandated territory of Syria.

Japan Acts to Reduce U. S. Cotton Imports

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said today the Japanese government has ordered its cotton manufacturers to use 30 per cent synthetic fiber in their yarns to reduce imports of raw cotton.

Officials said the new order, which will be effective February 1, probably will reduce substantially Japanese imports of American cotton. Heretofore Japan has been one of the largest markets for this country's cotton.

North Ireland Calls Election to Resist Fusion

Ulster Prime Minister Asks Voters to Back 'Loyalist' Party's Policy.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 13.—The government of northern Ireland today called for a mandate to resist any plan of Irish fusion which might develop at forthcoming talks between Ireland and Britain.

The Belfast cabinet was spurred to action by an announcement that reunion with northern Ireland would be discussed by Prime Ministers Eamon de Valera of Ireland and Neville Chamberlain of Britain.

The discussions will begin in London next Monday, the first between important delegations of the two governments in many years. They were announced as primarily to deal with the subjects of defense and trade.

The Ulster government, apparently fearing a possible British about-face on their stand against union of the six Ulster counties with Ireland, unexpectedly called for general elections in northern Ireland on February 9, and announced parliament would be dissolved January 20.

At the same time Viscount Craigavon, prime minister of northern Ireland, asked the voters to back his "loyalist" policy and return the unionist party to power.

In both Britain and Ireland there appeared optimism that the approaching conversations would bring tangible results in political and economic co-operation. There also was a feeling in Ireland that De Valera's dream of a united and independent Ireland might be realized.

Dodd Denounces Hitler Regime in First U.S. Speech

New York, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Former Ambassador to Germany William E. Dodd, in his first speech since his return from Berlin, tonight denounced Fuehrer Adolf Hitler.

Speaking at a dinner given in his honor, Dodd, who was outspoken in his criticism of the Nazis during his tenure of office in Berlin, said Hitler was a more absolute ruler "than any medieval Emperor of Germany."

"All the world knows," Dodd said, "how he denied religious, personal and press freedom, how universities and schools were put under party control, and how almost as many personal opponents were killed in five years as Charles II had executed in 20 years of the seventeenth century."

Franco Patrols Hunt Deserters Near Gibraltar

Impartial Sources Report Growing Uneasiness in Rebel Territory.

By the Associated Press.

Gibraltar, Jan. 13.—Increasing desertions and uneasiness in insurgent territory, following the Spanish government's capture of strategic Teruel, were reported tonight by impartial foreign sources.

The insurgents have installed an armed cavalry patrol in the no man's land separating British Gibraltar from insurgent-held La Linea in an effort to check the desertions from Generalissimo Franco's army.

At the same time, coast guard detachments were reinforced by machine-gun equipped units to prevent further escapes by sea from Algeciras.

Persistent reports of a mutiny among the insurgent forces in southern Spain have been denied by reliable authorities. Scores of insurgent deserters, however, have been crossing into British territory day and night to fight for the government.

The deserters who enter Gibraltar are arrested and fined for being in the British fortified zone without permission. The Spanish consul, however, pays their fines and sends the deserters to Valencia.

Although insurgent artillery kept up its pounding of government positions on the Teruel front, there was a lull today in the heavy fighting that has marked Franco's efforts to recover the lost Aragon territory.

Lunatic Irked by News Of Royal Birth Seized

Amsterdam, The Netherlands, Jan. 13 (AP).—Police today arrested an escaped lunatic who, they said, threatened to kill Queen Wilhelmina and Crown Princess Juliana.

The man was J. R. Aaymaker, 29. He escaped from an asylum last year after making similar threats. Doctors said he was excited over publicity given the approaching birth of a child to the crown princess.

Chinese Claim 2,000 Victims, Plan to Trap Foes at Tsining

Japan.

Suchow. The massed forces clashed there Wednesday.

Chinese forces were said, however, to be threatening to trap Tsining's captors by an attack on Yenchow, about 15 miles to the northeast.

While official confirmation was lacking, Gen. Han Fu-chu, the Shuntung governor, was said to have been arrested for failure to halt the sweep of Japanese troops over China's "sacred" province.

The failure of Han's troops to halt Japan's southward thrust was said to have made difficult the defense job now being directed by Chiang.

Advices from Hankow, one of China's provisional capitals, said the Chiang regime had executed Chu Min-yu, former general secretary of the executive yuan (council) for activities subversive to the generalissimo. Chu was a brother-in-law of Wang Ching-wei, former foreign minister.

United States naval authorities here announced that efforts to salvage the American gunboat Panay, sunk by Japanese bombs in the Yangtze River December 12, had been abandoned after the ship's safe, official papers and some personal property of the crew had been removed by divers.

Johnston Quits 3 U. S. Posts for Federal Reserve

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace announced yesterday that Oscar G. Johnston, of Mississippi, had resigned as a director of the Commodity Credit Corporation, as a cotton adviser to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and as manager of the 1933 Cotton Producers' Pool.

Johnston, in a letter of resignation, said he had accepted appointment to the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. Federal Reserve Bank directors are not permitted to hold other Government positions. Johnston, whose home is at Scott, Miss., also is manager of the Delta and Pine Land Co., a large cotton planting concern.

Townsend Hits Plan

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 13 (AP).—Dr. Francis Townsend, founder of the old-age pension plan bearing his name, today denounced efforts of Congressmen interested in age pensions plans to compromise their differences.

Emergency Act Controls Prices In Puerto Rico

Acting Governor Moves to Avert Food Profiteering in Ship Strike.

By the United Press.

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 13.—Acting Gov. Rafael Menendez Ramos today proclaimed a state of emergency in Puerto Rico to prevent profiteering as result of the two-week-old strike of longshoremen and shipworkers which tied up all insular port activities.

The proclamation was made in accordance with the island's law which authorizes the governor to protect the public from price exploitation. It affects only the prices of foodstuffs and other necessities made scarce by the walkout which has blocked unloading of cargoes from the mainland.

Ramos, acting in place of Gov. Blanton Winship, who is ill, also named a committee of three business leaders to make a survey of prices to determine their average level during the past six months.

Britain, Soviet at Odds.

London, Jan. 13 (AP).—Great Britain informed the Soviet Union today she was opposed to closing her consulate in Leningrad on Russian orders. Informed sources said the notification was not an actual refusal but contended that the Russian policy of consular "parity" was contrary to all precedent.

Norris Fears Lynching Bill Fight's Results

Senator Is Anxious Lest Bitterness Affect Roosevelt Program.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, expressed concern yesterday lest bitterness produced by the anti-lynching bill fight dim chances of enacting President Roosevelt's legislative program.

The veteran Nebraskan said both sides in the fight "feel very deeply" about the issue, and that a continuance of the debate might open wounds difficult to heal.

Norris said proponents and opponents of the pending bill would be equally responsible if the fight endangered the Administration program.

He said "psychological differences" which might result from the battle would have a more serious effect on Mr. Roosevelt's program than the loss of the time consumed in the filibuster itself.

On the Senate floor, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, Arkansas' woman Senator, carried on the fight against the proposal, which provided Federal prosecution and fining of sheriffs who failed to protect prisoners, and made counties liable for payments to the families of lynching victims.

Mrs. Caraway won a rest for her Southern colleagues by sending to reading clerks a lengthy report made by a minority of the Judiciary subcommittee in 1887. The report, she said, bolstered her argument that the anti-lynching measure was unconstitutional.

The reading was continued for more than two hours. Most Senators left the floor, and Mrs. Caraway passed the time reading a newspaper and visiting the gallery.

The Arkansas Senator also read an address denouncing the anti-lynching bill, terming it an "insult" to the South.

"Much has been said about a 'filibuster' against this bill," she told the Senate. "I do not think this is a filibuster. This is a debate which is proceding in such a way that the whole country knows there is more involved than lynching.

"This effort to pass this bill is just one of many efforts to take away from our section the influence we have had."

2 Youths and Girl Seized in Banditry

Crime.

low, of Lorton Reformary and Sergt. E. J. McDermott, of the Virginia State Police, back to the inn with him.

Shortly after the trio registered, it was learned, they spent a congenial hour in the hotel reception room, playing Monopoly. The girl and her alleged fiance were still at the game when the arrest was made.

Once the detectives had surrounded the hotel, a squad was sent inside to make the arrest. On the way upstairs they encountered the younger of the two brothers who, they said, struggled for a minute before submitting to arrest. The older brother and the girl were found still at their game and surrendered without resistance.

Revolvers Found.

Brought back to Washington, police said that the two youths readily admitted that they were the "drunken bandits" who terrorized Washington Wednesday night. Between them they still had about $40. Police also found two revolvers.

According to the story they told police, the youths escaped from Washington after the crime by driving across the Highway Bridge, which officers were even then speeding to in order to close off escape. They spent Wednesday night and part of Thursday at a tourist camp.

Inspector Thompson said that Ellsworth, the younger brother, admitted firing the shots during the holdup of a grocery store owned by Abraham Butt, at 831 Sixth street southwest. Thompson quoted the youth as saying:

"I only wanted to scare him but I think I was as scared as he was."

Exchange Wisecracks.

Interviewed at the Women's Bureau, the girl told how the three had left Ardmore, where she is a school student, on Tuesday.

"It was just that we wanted to get married, Ellis and I," said the prisoner, who wore a red sweater and a checkered dress, from beneath which pajamas were visible.

"Ellsworth, the young kid, was going to take us on our honeymoon, and we were going to spend our honeymoon in Florida. We had money when we left home. We didn't think about sticking anybody up.

"We got as far as Raleigh that night, and next day we decided to come back to Washington. We changed our minds about Florida for the time."

The girl then told of the ride back to the outskirts of the city, where they stopped to drink.

They All Got Tight.

"We stopped in front of a liquor store, and Ellsworth went in and came out with whiskey bottles. Then we drank and drank, and we all got tight, but Ellsworth got tighter than any of us. He was terrible tight.

"Pretty soon he pulled out a gun and yelled, 'Let's go stick people up. Let's go have thrills. Come on.'

"The first place we stopped he got out and made his brother get out. They held up a filling station man. When I saw what they'd done, I jumped out of the car and started to run away, but Ellsworth pulled me back.

"We went all over town, it seemed, me in the back seat. Ellsworth held a gun to Ellis' ribs and told him to drive, or else he'd shoot.

"When he'd stick up a place, he'd go inside and seem to be shaking hands with everyone and having a high time. He fooled around in a lot of places. At the last grocery we went to he came out after we'd heard two shots, and said he thought he'd shot someone who was running in a white apron and we had to get out fast. I was scared."

"I ain't ever going home now," she said. "The kids in school would tease me and I would be ashamed.

"I'm going to wait for Ellis. If he goes to jail, I'll wait till he gets out and we'll go to Florida and have a little farm and peace, maybe."

Holdups in Half Hour.

Within a half-hour on Wednesday night the two bandits, described as drunk, held up and robbed seven grocery stores and filling stations. At a grocery at 831 Sixth street southwest, one of the men fired two shots at the proprietor, Abraham Butt, 30, when he attempted to flee from their drawn pistols.

Their blazing trail of crime led Washington police to send special scout car and cruiser details into the section where their activities were concentrated. All bridges and roads leading from the city were guarded.

Earlier yesterday the two men were reported heading back into Washington from nearby Virginia. A radio broadcast from Arlington County informed police that an automobile carrying two men who answered the description of the desperadoes had been seen on the Richmond highway, northbound.

While the search for the criminals was being pursued yesterday, Southern Senators, filibustering against the anti-lynching bill, poked fun at the efforts of Washington police to find the drunken bandits.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, read into the record reports of the crime from several newspapers, including The Washington Post, and commented with broad sarcasm on the inability of the police to apprehend the fugitives.

A traffic mishap occurred when police received a call that a holdup was about to be committed at Twenty-second street and Virginia avenue northwest.

Detective Sergts. J. J. Tolson and R. J. Barrett and Detectives E. E. Scott and E. W. Guest leaped into a squad car, driven by Policeman J. H. Gwinn, and sirened through heavy traffic toward the scene.

At Tenth street and Constitution avenue their car collided with an automobile driven by Walter B. Herrity, of Arlington, Va.

The officers were bruised and shaken. Three of them leaped into a cab, while Scott hailed a passing motorcycle.

When they reached Twenty-second and Virginia, they found two men seated in a car. They arrested them and then found a secret compartment in the automobile.

Agitated by the crime wave and demands from Capitol Hill, Commissioner Hazen yesterday, meanwhile, declared Congress should help him obtain more policemen for the District.

On Capitol Hill, Southern Senators filibustering against the anti-lynching bill, meanwhile, poked fun at thet efforts of Washington police to find the two drunken bandits who Wednesday night staged seven holdups.

Among other Senators who interrupted McKellar from time to time to make humorous comments were Senators Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina.

McKellar Confused.

Senator McKellar frequently confused the Washington police with Federal authorities who would be charged with enforcement of the antilynching act if enacted into law.

"Members of this body are trying to turn over the job of stopping lynching to these Federal police," he said, "when there seems to be such an utter disregard of crime under the eaves of the Capitol.

"If we want to get rid of crime, God knows we should start here at home—where we've got constitutional authority."

McKellar read newspaper reports of the demands of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for 25 additional policemen.

"I don't know how many police there are here or how many they need," he said. "But if they need more, they ought to have them."

The Tennessee Senator is a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee which will act on the District supply bill.

While Senators chuckled and the galleries guffawed until admonished by the presiding officer, McKellar read accounts of the seven hold-ups and paused every few sentences to comment with broad humor on the failure of the police to catch the robbers.

"Here we have two bandits too drunk to walk," he said, "and all the policemen in Washington couldn't catch them. I wonder what was the matter. One constable in Texas would have 'em in jail in 10 minutes."

McKellar and other Senators also ridiculed the reward offers made by police officials for the capture of the hold-up pair.

Two D. C. Bandit Suspects Captured

Ellis (left) and Ellsworth Tibbett, brothers, were arrested last night at Woodbridge, Va., as suspects in the series of holdups of Washington shopkeepers. Ellis was eloping with a pretty 14-year-old, girl, police said.

Mrs. Porter Wins WJSV Pie Contest

Mrs. Dorothy G. Porter, 307 Holly avenue, Takoma Park, won first prize in a pie-baking contest instigated by Larry Elliott, WJSV announcer, who acts as master of ceremonies on the "Aladdin's Kitchen" hour.

Announcement of winners was made Wednesday. Mrs. Porter's prize entry was a lemon meringue pie. Second prize was won by Mrs. Irene Callow, 3110 Elm street, Mount Rainier, with a cocoanut pastry. Third prize was won by Mrs. J. K. Gauge, 1923 Otis street northeast, with an old-fashioned apple pie. The pies entered in the contest were sent to Central Union Mission.

6 Show Windows Are Smashed In 'Crime Wave' at Men's Store

The corner store diagonally opposite the Government Printing Office, at North Capitol and H street, has been having a private crime wave.

Six windows have been smashed in the last three and a half weeks at Hollander's Men's Wear Store, at 801 North Capitol street.

Early yesterday, for example, four lumberjackets were snatched from one of the display windows on the H street front after a jagged hole had been smashed in the glass.

By 2 p. m., a new window had been installed and business was proceeding as calmly as usual. The store has been 47 years on the site.

"We've had occasional thefts of this sort before," said Jacob Legum, manager, yesterday, "but never so many within such a short period. On January 2, three windows were smashed at the same time, and several pair of shoes, pants and sweaters were stolen. On two other nights in the last three weeks, someone has broken a window and taken what he could reach.

"All these thefts are done in the same way—but it couldn't be the same man, because one of our robbers was caught and given several months in jail.

"Times sure must be hard," Legum reflected, "for people to smash a $30 window for a $1.98 pair of pants."

Daniel Hite, owner of Hollander's, declared that $200 worth of merchandise had been stolen in the series of raids, and that the broken windows were valued at about $150. He added that "the windows are insured, but the merchandise isn't."

Senate Reveals Vast Rail Profit On Tiny Capital

Kuhn, Loeb Executives Tell How Bank Made 6 Million in Market.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators heard from executives of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. yesterday that the bank used "very little of its own capital" to make large profits in connection with capitalization of Pennroad Corporation in 1929.

However, George W. Bovenizer and Benjamin J. Buttenweiser, partners in the famous banking house, disputed the assertion of Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, of the Senate Railroad Finance Committee, that the bank "took practically no risk" to make profits of about $8,000,000.

They told the committee market conditions made possible a profit that might well have been a considerable loss. Committee records showed most of the transactions involved took place shortly before and after the stock market crash of 1929.

The investigators said Kuhn, Loeb & Co. had made $11,841,628 since 1924 through transactions related directly or indirectly to railroad consolidation activities of the Pennsylvania, Delaware & Hudson and Wabash Railway companies.

Pennroad Corporation was formed by officers and directors of Pennsylvania as an "independent instrumentality" to purchase railroad stocks in which Pennsylvania was interested. The investigators included Pennroad transactions in computing the total profit to Kuhn, Loeb on business given it by the three railroads.

The Senate investigators said that when the market crashed in 1929 each member of the syndicate was required to buy 60 per cent of his participation at $16.50 a share. Kuhn, Loeb was required to take up only 6,600 shares costing less than $100,000, they added.

A special detail of the Guard of Honor will meet at the American Legion Club for a drill tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Commander of Guard L. D. Batson will be in charge.

The dance committee of the post and auxiliary, of which G. P. Brannon is general chairman and Mignon Lunquist cochairman, will meet at the legion clubhouse Tuesday at 8 p. m. for the purpose of making final arrangements for the Washington's Birthday Ball to be held at the Army and Navy Country Club February 21.

On Wednesday evening a meeting of the Eighth District of the American Legion will be held at Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria.

The winter meeting of the Past Commanders Association will be held this evening at 8:15 in the presidential suite of the Willard Hotel. Col. Joseph Randall, president of the organization, will preside. Officers for the coming year will be elected and new members inducted. Officers who have served with Col. Randall are John D. Kiley, vice president; the Rev. Howard F. Snyder, chaplain; Lucille Allan, secretary; Elsie Pinney, treasurer, and Egbert G. Corwin, sergeant at arms.

Legion Meetings.

Agriculture Post, American Legion, will meet this evening at 8 o'clock in the south building of the Agriculture Department, room 1039. Sons of the Legion, Drum and Bugle Corps, will meet at 8 p. m. in the National Guard Armory.

Officers were elected at the banquet of the District of Columbia Commandery, Military Order of Foreign Wars, which was held Wednesday at the Army and Navy Club. Maj. James Alexander Lyon, retiring commander, who was elected national delegate, presided. The principal address was made by Tswen Tling Tsui, Second Secretary of the Chinese Embassy.

Commander George Tully Vaughan, veteran of the Army Medical Service in the Spanish-American War and of the Naval Medical Corps in the World War, was elected commander. Dr. Vaughan, noted Washington physician and surgeon participated as fleet surgeon in the Vera Cruz operations and was surgeon of the transport Leviathan when she was taking troops to France.

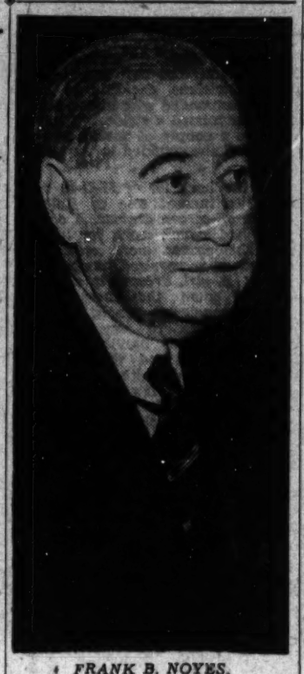
Noyes, Associated Press Head For 38 Years, to Retire at 75

News Group's First President to Pass Task to 'Younger Hands.'



FRANK B. NOYES,

New York, Jan. 13.—Frank B. Noyes, of Washington, announced today his retirement from the presidency of the Associated Press at the expiration of his present term in April. He has held the position through 38 eventful years of newspaper history.

To the board of directors, in session here, Noyes disclosed his decision. After his long service, he said, he felt entitled to pass on to younger hands a task to which he has devoted himself since his 30s. On July 7 he will be 75.

Noyes will continue as president of the Evening Star at Washington.

The Washington publisher has been a member of the board and the executive committee of the present Associated Press and its predecessor corporation for 44 years, and his direct connection with the press association goes back even further. He associated himself with a small group who set out in 1893 to realize the ideal of a great co-operative association of newspapers for the exchange of news.

Born in Washington in 1863, of a newspaper family, he had been successively manager of the Washington Star and editor of the old Chicago Record-Herald. Prior to this connection he associated himself with Melville E. Stone, who became the first general manager, and Victor Lawson, of the Chicago Daily News, in the upbuilding of the Associated Press.

He was just 30 when, in 1893, the ideal took corporate form. The co-operative association which Noyes and his associates evolved from the old Western Associated Press began its stormy and historic career with a small but determined membership. It grew steadily under his leadership. In 1894 he became a member of the board of the first nationally organized Associated Press, an Illinois corporation. The present corporation, which succeeded the old in 1900, has had no other president. In its membership today are included more than 1,300 daily newspapers.

Shetland Island Film To Be Shown Tonight

An unceasing battle between rugged nature and uncompromising human will feature an unusual motion picture—"Edge of the World"—which will have its American premiere before the National Geographic Society, in Constitution Hall, tonight. It depicts the struggle for existence in the bleak Shetland Islands, by sturdy descendants of the Norsemen.

1937 Gold Imports Total $1,631,523,000

The United States imported $1,631,523,000 worth of gold in 1937.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that this total was the largest since 1935, when $1,740,979,000 was brought here. The United States now owns more than half of all the gold held by governments and central banks.

Drunk Ban Planned.

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—William D. Upshaw, former Georgia Congressman and famed dry leader, told the Florida Baptist Convention today he was starting a national campaign to have enacted a constitutional amendment prohibiting drunkenness in the United States.

Temple Sisters Are Addressed By Mrs. Simon

U. S. Women Challenged to Defeat Fascism and Communism.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—American women were challenged to play a leading role in the defeat of Fascism by Mrs. Abram Simon, of Washington, in a speech before the Silver Jubilee mass meeting of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods held here today.

Paying tribute to Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott, Elizabeth Stanton and other pioneers in the campaign for women's rights, Mrs. Simon declared, "The future of democracy lies in the hands of the same liberalism that made possible the self-emancipatio nof women.

"The next 25 years will decide whether America is to remain the home of democracy," she said. "We women are ultimately pledged to defeat imported Fascism, Communism or Hitlerism.

"We believe in children and the nursery but we will not be relegated to the kitchen and to the nursery. We refuse to be mere breeders of sons for war and war only."

Opening the meeting over an international radio hook-up, Lily M. Montagu, secretary of the World Union for Progressive Judaism, greeted the sisterhoods

Contract Bridge

There are many factors that should influence the choice of a final contract. In deciding between two suits which are equally playable, there often is a basis for choosing that is not generally appreciated by any except expert players. This basis can be best explained by actual illustration. Let us consider the following hand:

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	3 ◇
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

As may be seen, South has something of a problem when, having bid and been raised in hearts, he must then develop the bidding further. On the second round I fear that far too many players would choose to show the spade support. In fact, from a superficial viewpoint, if South bids three spades over North's three hearts, he is proceeding quite normally. Yet in this particular hand, and in countless hands of a similar nature, this belated raise on South's part would probably be fatal. North certainly could not be criticized for bidding four spades rather than four hearts. But, although exactly the same tricks are "off the hand" at hearts and at spades, a four heart contract has every chance for success while a four spade contract is inevitably doomed. The difference lies in the fact that at spades South must expose his hand as dummy and thereby reveal his singleton diamond! Playing against spades, East opens a low diamond to partner's bid. West, not being blind, can see dummy's singleton and thereupon a shift to clubs becomes not only simple but mandatory. This shift will be fatal. East controls the spade suit with his Queen, and the defenders will take two clubs, one diamond and a spade, come what may.

At hearts, it is a vastly different matter. West opens his diamond King but then, regardless of his partner's low follow-suit card, can hardly be so clairvoyant as to shift to clubs, particularly in view of his own Ace-Jack holding, the King staring at him in dummy, and his ignorance as to the Queen's whereabouts.

Obviously the "normal" diamond continuation by West gives South his four heart contract, since he maintains club control while establishing North's spade suit.

The basis, then, for South's choice to continue bidding hearts rather than to support the spades, en route, is his singleton diamond, which, if he realizes what is best for him, he must keep concealed from the enemy.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Sonja Henie, Decorated by Her King, Makes a Hurried Visit to Washington to Receive Adulation of Milling Crowds; Schedule Almost Smashed; Little Theater Scores a Coup; Mr. Flynn Drops by; Civic to Give Benefit Performance; Notes.

SO WE went to the Shoreham to meet the fabulous sprite of the ice, Sonja Henie.

Miss Henie turned out to be about the sort of ebullient and mildly excited and exciting young person we had anticipated. She is a diminutive thing who comes only about up to here—blonde in coloring, with a retroussee nose, a ready smile and a figure that has attained approximate perfection by the rigorous development entailed by the arduous exactments of an incomparable co-ordination of mind and muscle. It must be a gift.

BELL.

I mean this extraordinary ability of one so young and so distinctly feminine to achieve such pre-eminence as the supreme exponent of agility and grace on blades. Those blades—meaning the runners of ice skates—are treacherous things, take it from one who completely embodies the spirit of the old jest about the young woman who was proferred a seat in a street car. "Oh, no," said she, "I have been sitting down all the afternoon. I have just been skating!"

There is no sitting down on the ice, when Sonja Henie is concerned. She is the transcendent embodiment of elfin grace, dazzling speed and consummate composure on the frozen surface of any lake or rink. Else how could she ever have become an Olympic champion at an age when most are scarcely beginning to walk with any assurance?

There are many other claims to distinction that may be advanced by this exceptional young Norwegian. She has, among other things, conquered the English language—no small order in itself, what with its crazy vowel sounds, twisted idioms, irregular verbs and whatnot. When Sonja first came to the American screen, there was a decided accent in her speech. Now she speaks practically perfect English idiom, with only the faintest traces of alien distortion.

Her film career, of course, is a flattering thing that seems not to have turned the head of this remarkable young woman. One of the outstanding box-office attractions of the cinema, she still is an unspoiled and amiable young woman who is taking all of her sensational success in stride. It isn't too safe a thing to attempt to delve into her private predilections in the matter of Hollywood living, but none suspects that there are attachments that strike a little deeper than the surface manifestations of a volatile youngster's deeper emotions. I am naming no names and probably you had better not.

But there she is—a natural and unaffected girl who has scaled the heights, as such things go in athletics and the cinema, and still retains her balance and a comparative composure. She likes the films. It is not too much to expect that some day her proficiency as an actress—and it has been numerously demonstrated—will lead to a role in which she will not be called upon to make a monkey out of practically all others who think they can skate.

The primary object of Miss Henie's visit to the Capital yesterday, of course, was to receive a decoration from her crown—the order of the "Knight of St. Olaf," bestowed upon only four women before her in the history of its existence. This ceremony occurred in the Norwegian Embassy—or is it legation?—at 4:30 yesterday afternoon, at a reception at which she was guest of honor of her government's American representatives. It was quite a day in the life of any young woman of eminence.

• • • •

It was quite a day, too, in the lives of those who attempted to keep up with the Henie schedule. Not only did she arrive at the Washington Airport on time, but her plane set itself down after something like 6 minutes ahead of its time-tabled arrival—at 2:36 instead of 2:42 p. m.

There was a bit of chaos at the landing field—so one who wasn't there is led to believe. A lamentable lack of police supervision made the Henie arrival something in the nature of a free-for-all scramble during which many of prominence were pushed into the background and many of no importance whatever—except, possibly, to themselves—crowded dignitaries away from the microphones and detoured large bouquets of flowers that never reached their intended recipient. But that is the way such things go, sometimes.

From the airport, the star was whisked to a luncheon at the Norwegian Embassy, adulated by hosts of admirers and eventually spirited to the Shoreham, where she submitted with conspicuous graciousness to the pertinent and impertinent interrogations of the press. At 7:30, a buffet supper was served for the physical and mental restoration to normalcy of all and sundry, by Manager Sam Wheeler, of Twentieth Century-Fox in Washington, and Arthur De Titta, local manager of Fox Moxietone News.

It seems unnecessary to remind an observant public that Miss Henie is a contract star of Twentieth Century-Fox, who makes up to Darryl Zanuck whatever prestige he may have lost as a picker of stars by assuming that Louise Hovick was an actress!

• • • •

There were a few frightful moments yesterday afternoon when it seemed a possibility that Miss Henie would not be able to complete her hectic Washington schedule. Her secretary-manager called up from Cleveland to impart the disturbing tidings that she must leave the National Capital at 8:30, instead of 11:30 p. m. That would have been just too bad, had it come true. Fortunately, it didn't, and the distinguished guests bidden to the friendly rout around the buffet tables at 7:30 so were enabled to make the acquaintance of a cordial, talented and beautiful young artiste in a diversity of fields. So, perhaps, that is that.

CHARLES BOYER AND CLAUDETTE COLBERT as they appear in the pivotal roles in the Warner Brothers' screen version of Gilbert Miller's stage production of "Tovarich," a comedy of "White Russian" emigres, marooned in Paris. This sprightly number reappears on a downtown screen today as chief feature of the bill for the new week at the Metropolitan Theater.

• • • •

Comes a self-explanatory wire from Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, who preside over the destinies of the Little and Rialto theaters, as follows:

"Film-buying trip more than successful in closing deal for 'Eternal Mask,' which ran 12 weeks at the Filmarte Theater, New York, at $1 top. Terms with distributors enable showing at usual Little Theater admissions, starting January 23."

So now you know what to expect on Ninth street.

• • • •

Joe Flynn, that veteran stentor of the better things of the socalled "legitimate theater," last here as avant courier for "The Follies," drops by the office to lay eloquent stress upon the fact that the company to be seen at the National Theater in George Abbott's production of "Room Service," the week of Monday, January 24, is no fly-by-night crew assembled for the purpose of knocking off a few vagrant shekels, but the ace company that is due to open the piece later for a run in Chicago. We have always found it a safe policy, during the past 80 or 90 years, to take Joe's word at face value in such matters.

• • • •

"Little Men," Louise May Alcott's sequel to her immortal "Little Women"—if that is what it is—comes to the National Theater on Saturday morning, January 29, for a single performance. This will be the fourth play in the series of six to be brought to Washington this season by the Children's Theater of New York in the sixth year of its operation in the Capital.

Sixty-six years young, the play recreates the atmosphere of grandmother's day, or perhaps it should be grandfather's, since the entire action of the work takes place in a boys' school not far from Boston.

• • • •

The Washington Civic Theater will present a benefit performance of John Van Druten's comedy, "The Distaff Side," for the Alpha Chi Omega and Alpha Delta Pi sororities on Wednesday, January 26. The regular run of the play will begin in the Wardman Park Theater on Wednesday, January 19, and continue nightly throughout the week at 8:30 p. m.

• • • •

Apropos-of-Nothing-at-All Note.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 13.—I am a red-hot Don Ameche fan. I mean the Ameche who gives those brilliant performances on the radio every Sunday afternoon, not the Ameche who is being kept in pretty-boy roles by Twentieth Century-Fox.

DON AMECHE

Did you hear that masterly bit with Anna Neagle in one of his programs several weeks ago—the one in which he played the aged Henry VIII? And did you know that it was Don who turned in, on the same program, the best piece of dialect comedy that has been offered via the air in many a moon? Versatile? Say, this Don Ameche of the airways can hold his own with Muni . . . or Tracy . . . or any actor that ever came down the proverbial pike.

• • • •

He could have done that comedy skit in any dialect that you would care to name. Other actors, having heard his seemingly endless collection of dialect stories, say that no one else can touch him. And Ameche, as an actor, playing a new role each week, brings to each one a subtle sincerity that is the sure proof of greatness.

• • • •

I wonder if Mr. Darryl Zanuck has a radio? If he has, he really should tune in on Don's program some Sunday instead of playing polo—and discover that he has, safely under contract to his studio, one of the three or four really great actors in screen history. Having made that discovery, I believe that Mr. Zanuck, as a very smart producer, would promptly wake up, send for all of his writers and say: "Gentlemen, we have a gold mine and we're not working it. Give me stories for Don Ameche—and for Pete's sake, let's forget we ever thought him handsome."

• • • •

Stopped in on the "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" set and found Miss Shirley Temple's imagination running wild. Using the prop radio equipment, she was killing time between scenes by staging a "broadcast." "First on my program," she announced into the dummy microphone, "will be Miss Frances Klamt, singing 'On the Good Ship Lollypop.'" Miss Klamt, Shirley's schoolteacher, proved a bit bashful and Shirley jumped into the breach of silence. "Miss Klamt will sing as soon as Miss Mary Lou Isleib (Shirley's stand-in) obliges us with a story about a dog." Mary Lou told the story. "How," demanded Shirley, "do you like our broadcast?" Two electricians, deciding to bait Shirley, responded with hisses. Shirley never missed a stride. "I think we have a couple of snakes in the audience," she confided to the mike.

• • • •

On the back lot of M-G-M today I witnessed one of Hollywood's off-screen dramas. A company had struck work for lunch and the extras were crowding around an improvised hamburger stand. A girl, dressed in a satin evening gown that showed the signs of much use, bought a sandwich, started to pay for it, fumbled in her handbag for a long moment and finally produced her dime with an audible gasp of relief. "It's the last one, Joe," she told the lunch-counter man with a laugh. Taking the sandwich, she hurried back to the set. And while I watched, she divided that one slim sandwich into two slimmer halves—and craftily slipped one to a tuxedoed young boy who gulped it down in a single bite.

Fred Keating is the butt of one of the best laughs Filmville has enjoyed in many a moon. Fred is a chronic worrier whenever his health is concerned. The least little pain and he imagines himself the victim of a mortal ailment. A few days ago, he complained of a stomache ache—and his friends decided on a practical joke. One after another, they viewed his condition with alarm—so convincingly that Fred finally summoned an ambulance and had himself carted away to the hospital. There a desk nurse gave him a form to fill out. Fred got as far as the stock query. "Whom shall we notify in the event of death?" Two minutes later, suddenly and completely cured, he was in a taxi en route home.

Loew's CAPITOL

Many Factors Can Impair Clarity and Operators Are Admonished.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Jan. 13.—G. F. Rackett, who holds forth in a comfortable office, through whose doors seep the pungent odors of hypo and whose floor vibrates from the machinery below, urged theater owners today to give the customers a break when color movies are on the screen.

Rackett is vice president in charge of production of Technicolor films, whose four laboratories are among the busiest in Hollywood. All he wants the theater managers to do is turn out the lights.

"You'd think it would be a simple thing," he said, "but one of our big problems is getting color pictures onto the screen and into the eyes of the audiences, without giving them headaches. We believe the pictures themselves are perfect and it burns us up sometimes to see how they're manhandled in the theaters."

The main trouble, he said, is the fact that most movie houses are continually lighted with lamps of varying degrees of softness. Sometimes they're red, and bracketed on the walls; sometimes they're blue and shine down from the ceiling.

"But they all ruin a color film insofar as the audience is concerned," he said. "For best results a color picture should be shown in absolute darkness."

Operators Could Help.

He recommended that movie operators also would be doing their customers a service if they'd wipe the grease off the lenses of their projection machines and if they'd use a little more care in focusing the pictures on the screen. Mostly they do this by rule of thumb. He said they'd get better results if they'd use opera glasses to check on the haziness of the images.

The Technicolor plant now in busier than it ever has been before. It's making prints by the hundreds for four new pictures, including "Snow White," "Gold Is Where You Find It," "The Goldwyn Follies," and "Tom Sawyer." It's about to start on "Robin Hood" and "Her Jungle Love."

Rackett said he could not understand how rumors have started to the effect that the Technicolor company's limited capacity is holding down the number of color pictures.

"We have not yet had this plant running at full capacity," he said. "When and if we do, and can't take care of any more business, we'll be mightly glad to announce it."

The laboratories now are equipped to make 75,000,000 feet of color film a year. By June they will be able to process 140,000,000 feet.

A King's Fur Cape.

"Marie Antoinette" now is in production at M. G. M., with some of the huskiest cops ever seen in these parts to keep everybody off the set except the actors, and possibly the press agents. The latter popped out today with word that Metro's King Louis XVI is wearing the biggest fur cape ever manufactured.

They said it contains as much fur as 20 women's coats, and that they're all ermine skins, at that. They said that 2,500 ermines had to sacrifice their lives in the interests of this masterpiece. They claimed it was an exact duplicate of the one worn by the king many a long year ago. We'd surely like to see it (not that we doubt a publicist's word) and learn for ourselves whether an M. G. M. ermine skin has any resemblance, say, to the hide of a jackrabbit.

Wishes like that, incidentally, probably explain the reason for the cops.

Play Hot Joke On Dave Oliver

David Oliver has the role of the eccentric camp cook in "Mountains Are My Kingdom." The comedian had never played in a "Western" before, so Noah Beery, jr., and members of the company decided to initiate him and give him a touch of cowboy "high life."

The first scene in which Oliver appeared required that he should be dishing out grub from a frying pan and that a number of horses should rush through the camp, one of them battering against him.

"Put plenty of zip into it," instructed Director Wyndham Gittens. "Pretend you're scared to death and throw that frying pan into the air and yell."

The horses rushed in and the camera began to turn. Oliver grabbed the handle of the frying pan, cast it wildly from him and emitted a yell that scared the coyotes miles away.

Star's High Home Tourist Ski Slide

The spot where Wallace Beery used to have a beautiful High Sierra Mountain home is now a ski slide.

Such was the word received by the star on the set of "Madelon." Last winter, the mountain home was demolished by a landslide that covered most of the Silver Lake shore on which the house was built.

A winter resort at a nearby lake has turned the slide into a ski jump. Visitors at the resort for winter sports are now zipping along on skis over the site of Wally's cabin.

Navy Pilots Invite Gable to Be Guest

Clark Gable received an enthusiastic invitation from the Navy flyers at North Island, San Diego, to stay with them when he goes to Lindbergh Field for location on "Test Pilot." Many of the pilots stationed at the Air Base during the filming of "Hell Divers" are still there.

Juror Is Fined, Mistrial Ruled In Bennett Case

Abruptly halting trial of Eula Mae Bennett and her husband, James Bennett, charged with interstate transportation of stolen jewels valued in excess of $5,000, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday fined Edwin A. Austin, 26-year-old member of the jury, $30 for contempt of court.

Basing his action on a reported telephone conversation between Austin and John L. Laskey, a lawyer, Justice O'Donoghue declared a mistrial in the trial that had already consumed four days and was expected to end late yesterday. The trial was expensive, one of the Government's witnesses having been brought here from California.

According to disclosures in court, Austin and Laskey, lifelong friends, talked over the phone Wednesday night. Austin is said to have called his friend to ascertain if he could question various witnesses, since his position as assistant buyer in a local store's jewelry department qualified him to expertly question jewel experts called to value a bracelet nd three rings.

It developed Austin did not discuss the case, nor did he identify it, except to say he was sitting in Justice O'Donoghue's court, nor were merits of the case gone into.

Upon convening of court yesterday the conversation was reported to Justice O'Donoghue, who thereupon halted the trial while he queried Austin. The latter readily admitted he had asked the lawyer-friend certain questions, but had not discussed the case and did not think his actions improper.

Convinced there were no wrongful motives actuating Austin, Justice O'Donoghue assessed him only a $30 fine or three days in jail. Laskey paid the fine, according to a receipt in the clerk's office.

Charles Murray, assistant United States attorney, stated the Bennets would be tried as soon as arrangements—with a new jury—can be made.

Slain by Father-Lover

NELLIE MEESE, 17, was found shot to death near the body of her father, Nelson Meese, 47, at Scottdale, Pa. The corner said the two, their relationship unknown to each other, had fallen in love. The father had not seen her since her birth. The deaths were recorded as murder and suicide.

World Church Council Lauded

Dr. John B. Mott, chairman of the International Missionary Council, Wednesday commended the proposed World Council of Churches to which eight American delegates have been selected by representatives of more than 30,000,000 American churchmen.

Dr. Mott spoke at the final session of the three-day meeting of the electoral college of the American adherents of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work of the World Conference of Faith and Order at Washington Cathedral.

Dr. Adolf Keller, of Geneva, director of the Central Bureau for Inter-Church Aid, told the audience that "the church of Christ in Germany is faced with the problem of political mysticism which gives a religious meaning to the state."

D. C. Audience Hears Christian Science Talk

Peter B. Biggins, of First Church of Boston, Speaks Here.

A lecture on "Christian Science: The Science of Divine Power" was delivered last night in Memorial Continental Hall by Peter B. Biggins, member of the board of lectureship, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass.

The lecturer said in part:

"The student of Christian Science soon recognizes that the rule of this science can be applied with scientific accuracy. When in the laboratory the chemist combines certain elements and produces a certain result, he believes that this has taken place through the operation of a scientific law.

"When in the great laboratory of human experience we apply the scientific understanding of the power of good, the power of God, and utilize this science in the practical affairs of daily life, and healing results, surely we have the right to consider this the result of science.

Justice, mercy, wisdom, goodness! How we appreciate these qualities as we see them, expressed in daily life!

"Before the truth of being, as revealed in Christian Science, touched their lives, many people have had difficulty in expressing these God-qualities, even in small degree. They have not understood how to go about it.

"But as the nature of God becomes plainer, and man's unity with God is better understood, it is seen to be inevitable that man as God's likeness should express justice, mercy, and goodness.

"Loving-kindness is an attribute of God. Man in God's likeness expresses loving-kindness.

"The utilization of the power of kindness never fails. We have the Scriptural assurance that "Love never faileth."

U. S. Opposes Cutting Postage Rate to 2 Cents

By the Associated Press.

It's going to continue costing 3 cents to mail an average letter.

William W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, testified at hearings on the Treasury-Postoffice supply bill, which the House took up yesterday, that "we think the time has not been reached" for a return to 2-cent postage, estimating a revenue loss of more than $90,000,000 a year.

ONE MAN'S BIOGRAPHY THAT IS THE HISTORY OF MODERN BASEBALL

"Clark Griffith—50 YEARS IN BASEBALL"

By Shirley Povich

When Clark Griffith was a rookie pitcher only the catcher wore a glove—fouls did not count as strikes—there were twelve teams in the National League—the American League was undreamed of—the fixed top for player salaries was $2,400 a year. Clark Griffith not only lived thru all the changes from that day to this—he caused many of them himself. You'll find his life story, as told by Shirley Povich, fascinating reading. It will appear serially in the daily and Sunday Post.

Sam Beard's Return.

When Sam Beard was convicted of violating the District's law against gambling he was sent to the Federal prison in Atlanta for only one reason. The law enforcement officials who had broken up his racket wanted to keep him far enough away to prevent his patching it together again. There is ample reason for indignation, therefore, when this "big shot" of Washington's gambling ring is returned to Lorton Reformatory at a moment favorable for the resumption of his control over his former gang.

From the viewpoint of penal officials, the exchange of Beard, along with 12 other Atlanta prisoners credited with good behavior, for 15 difficult inmates of Lorton may be reasonable enough. Lorton is not equipped to handle desperate criminals. Beard, presumably, has been an amiable prisoner. Clever racketeers usually are. So the authorities at Atlanta send him back, and Superintendent Huff, of the local penal institutions, accepts him. Mr. Huff seems to be confident that Beard could be kept out of mischief at Lorton.

It is true, of course, that any efficient penal institution should be able to keep a notorious gambler from managing an illicit business while incarcerated. Perhaps Mr. Huff would be able to do so in Beard's case. But the people of the District do not want to take a chance. They know that organized gambling is a very important source of revenue for the underworld, that from it stem numerous rackets and crimes of violence. Knowing also the difficulty of destroying such rings of lawlessness, once they are firmly established, they are fully justified in protesting the return of Beard to the region in which his racket once flourished.

Mr. Huff made a serious mistake in not taking this aspect of the case into consideration before accepting the gambler at Lorton. Fortunately, he now has an opportunity to broaden the viewpoint on which, presumably, his initial action was based. In making his report to the Board of Public Welfare, in response to a request initiated by Commissioner Hazen, he can note the concern of law enforcement officials and the wishes of the public, and on that ground recommend Beard's return to Atlanta.

Such a request, re-echoed by the Board of Public Welfare and the Commissioners, would undoubtedly meet with favorable response from the Department of Justice. For the District Attorney is said to have brought about Beard's transfer to Atlanta in the first place.

Three Crashes.

Air tragedies seem to concentrate. Until a few days ago, weeks had passed without a serious crash in American aviation. Then a Navy bomber vanished off the West Coast. Ten persons were hurled to their deaths in Montana. Now the Samoan Clipper has gone.

The last is the most spectacular, for it represents the first seagoing plane lost by Pan American Airways in ten years of intercontinental flying. This record gives a fair indication of both the human and mechanical factors in the Samoan accident. Both were as nearly perfect as possible. In the Navy loss, the piloting again is certain to have been highly competent—no amateurs fly for the Navy. As for the equipment, it may be presumed to have been in the best possible condition. In the case of the Montana crash, the plane involved was one of the newest models.

But in spite of these best available men and planes, the accidents occurred. Once again the conclusion presents itself that the world is rushing too rashly into the air. In the case of the Samoan Clipper it is generally agreed that jettisoned gasoline became ignited. How, is no more certain than how the Hindenburg's hydrogen was set afire. Engineers have various theories but none has a certain safeguard against the hazard. Until one is developed, or until wing-load ratios can be adjusted to obviate fuel dumping, this one danger in long-distance flying persists. And there are others.

In connection with the Clipper accident it has been pointed out that Pan American Airways is the only American company engaged in transoceanic air travel. As such it enjoys substantial subsidies in the form of postal contracts which, it is claimed, effectively discourage competition. Having no competitors, the protest continues, Pan American is not pushed into buying latest equipment, and accidents such as overtook the Samoan Clipper, which had been in service for several years, are the unhappy result.

The argument is not convincing. The thorough servicing routine which is a fundamental in Pan American's high record for safety should insure the highest possible mechanical efficiency in planes. As for the quasi-monopoly, this has grown naturally as a result of Pan American's international competition. English, French, German and Dutch oceanic air lines are largely if not entirely subsidized monopolies. To compete with them, Pan American has invoked Washington's assistance. If others are worthy of this backing, it would seem that they have only to prove it.

One aspect of the Clipper tragedy is certain. The loss of Capt. Edwin C. Musick will be felt by all aviation. His ability and modesty were probably unequaled in aviation circles. What was more important, with these to mark him as leader, his conservatism set a standard other pilots could not ignore.

The Psychological Factors.

Perverse though it seems, strikes and labor disturbances are most in evidence when business is expanding and profits and wages rising. In periods of declining activity, both management and labor begin to realize the extent of their dependence upon each other and the necessity of working together to reverse the downward trend of production and trade. In recent weeks we have witnessed a typical though surprisingly rapid transition from the strife and struggle accompanying the recovery movement to the more sober atmosphere of industrial adversity.

There is still disagreement as to the causes of the current setback and the proper means of combating it. But there is also increased appreciation of the importance of presenting a united front in the struggle against adverse business conditions. Spokesmen for the Government, for industrial managements, and for labor are now trying to reconcile differences of opinion in order to attain their common objectives. A short time ago, labor and capital were chiefly conscious of antagonistic aims, each striving to obtain the lion's share of an increased industrial output.

The present acute social and financial crisis in France has been aggravated by a lack of co-operative discussion designed to end strikes and other conflicts. For a time, while the struggle to establish collective bargaining was being carried on in this country, a spirit of determined resistance to direct negotiations with organized labor was manifested by American employers. Now, however, there are signs of closer rapprochement between employer and employe groups, recently disposed to maintain an aloof attitude toward one another. The establishment of friendly contacts between the President and some of the industrial leaders hitherto openly antagonistic to Administration policies is also a significant and hopeful development.

The outlook for peace within the faction-torn ranks of organized labor likewise appears brighter as unemployment decimates the dues-paying membership of the C. I. O. While John L. Lewis, for reasons of his own, still pulls against the tide running toward reconciliation, it is evident that his influence is waning as the rank and file of C. I. O. adherents come to realize the futility and folly of dividing the forces of organized labor at a time when self-interest obviously calls for a united front.

Of course, spokesmen for labor and management still hold widely divergent views concerning the causes and cure of depression. The president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, A. F. Whitney, testifying before the Senate Unemployment Committee, deplored acceptance of the "fallacies of industry and finance to the effect that all this country needs is to restore prosperity to the durable goods industries and confidence to business and finance." Restoration of mass purchasing power, Mr. Whitney says, is far more important than restoration of business confidence.

By raising issues and inviting replies, even sharp conflicts of opinion such as these may be resolved. Nobody would deny the importance of increasing mass purchasing power. The problem is how to secure it. Those who urge the necessity of stimulating the chronically depressed capital goods industries believe that the increased employment provided by expansion of these industries would be a means to the generally desired end. They also know that without confidence in the future of industry the investment support which supplies funds for business expansion will not be forthcoming.

Although there is some danger of attaching too much importance to the intangible elements that advance or retard recovery, it would be a mistake to underrate the psychological factors that are now helping to create an atmosphere favorable to co-operation. Confidence in the outlook for industrial progress is strengthened when factional disputes subside and representatives of the Government, of industry and of labor join wholeheartedly in the search for a practical recovery formula.

Over The Bar.

You never can tell. List to the story told by Sam A. Lewisohn, in his recent book on American art, of how Thomas Benton happened to become an artist.

Seventeen, and undersize, at that, the young Missourian wandered into Joplin's main saloon one day and ordered a beer. While sipping it, his eyes traveled to a Rubenesque nude hanging over the bar. An older customer, noticing the boy's concentration, winked and began to twit him for it.

Benton, flushing, retorted that he was not interested in the lady's curves as such, but only in the brush-work of the artist who had painted her. "So you're an artist, Shorty?" jeered the man. Benton admitted the impeachment. And to back up his claim he proceeded across the street to a newspaper office and won a job as cartoonist.

Today, of course, he is, with Grant Wood and John Steuart Curry, a leader in the country's effort to develop an art of its own. It might be difficult to say as much of the other Joplin boys who minded their p's and q's and dutifully stayed away from saloons. So you never can tell.

Progress In Slum Clearance.

Washingtonians who have not yet come into contact with the work being done by the Alley Dwelling Authority have missed one of the most promising activities of the local government. The ADA has never indulged in glittering promises or gone in for self-advertisement. But it is making steady progress toward the abolition of Washington's worst slums.

Completion of the authority's first housing project for white families once more illustrates the soundness of its policy. The primary task is reclamation of slum areas. Various sites cleared of disease and crime breeding slums have been devoted to commercial purposes. But the ADA rightly gives special consideration to the rehousing of low-income groups now compelled to live in a demoralizing environment.

Costs are kept at a minimum consistent with efficient construction, durability and attractive design. Some of the ADA's housing projects have been built for the lowest income groups. But the K street (Southwest) development just opened is to serve those of somewhat better, though still modest, means. Its rentals range from $32.50 to $41.50, for four to six room houses.

The chief significance of this and similar ADA projects is not apparent from an inspection of these well-planned houses. It appears in cost records and rental charts. On a per-room basis the rentals charged for these homes are but slightly above those fixed for some PWA projects which cover only operating costs. The ADA rentals include operating costs, interest on the money invested, amortization, replacement costs and local taxes.

Slum reclamation without subsidies is often said to be impossible. But the record of the ADA casts doubt on this assumption. Its entire program is geared to the policy of "breaking even." And there is every indication that it will succeed, if the management continues to be as competent as is the case at present.

In view of the excellent work this agency is doing, it is to be hoped that the President will not long delay the allocation of funds to the ADA under the United States Housing Act. There seems to be an unfortunate controversy over the power of the President to transfer to the ADA money to be raised through the issuance of USHA bonds. But the law itself is clear enough. It provides that the President may make available to the local authority "such sums as he deems necessary" and that money may be drawn "from any funds appropriated or otherwise provided to carry out the purposes of this act."

With that extensive grant of authority, there seems to be no reason for further quibbling. No doubt the President will provide the ADA with all the money it needs to continue its work as soon as the issue can be laid properly before him. That should be soon, of course, for the local authority has now exhausted its funds available for housing and will have to curtail its much-needed program unless additional capital is forthcoming.

"What are we doing for the unborn?" an orator demands to know. Well, the love of money is the root of all evil, and we're spending all their money so they won't have any to love.

A Yale instructor says humor should be taught in colleges. We have an idea that a college professor trying to be funny on purpose would be very unfunny.

Life Insurance Peak.

From the Dallas Morning News.

A dependable barometer of economic conditions, on a long-range basis, is the total life insurance in force in the United States. This figure, which reached a peak of 103 billion dollars in 1929, dropped to 98 billion in 1933. But at the close of 1937 it attained a new high of 110 billions. Payments from insurance companies, which totaled about $2,400,000,000 (billions) in 1937, constitute a factor in the national income too large to be overlooked.

Americans, who held 70 per cent of the world's life insurance in 1929, have been more insurance-minded than people of other countries, but life insurance has made remarkable foreign gains in the last few years, especially in Japan. This form of provision for the future has proved as nearly depression-proof as any other kind of saving that is available.

The one uncertainty that stands in the way of the continued development of life insurance is the danger of money inflation. Few will want to invest 59-cent dollars in insurance if there is danger that they or their heirs will be paid off in 20-cent dollars. This danger is present, of course, in certain other forms of investment, particularly savings accounts and bonds, but it would be especially harmful in its effect on policy holders.

Protection of insurance investments is one of the arguments against inflation that should be considered most seriously. Life insurance is an economic stabilizer, without which business cycles probably would be much more extreme than they are. There is need to give consumers as much assurance as possible that the money they invest in insurance will come back in dollars of equal buying power.

Henry George Idea.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our republican form of government has almost crashed in chaos, mainly because of defective channels of distribution of the enormous production of wealth of 1929.

We were producing so much that the demagogues in power could see only one remedy—to cut the production so as to create an economy of scarcity, so that men will be forced to seek work at the wages and terms of the owners of America—owners of the "land-values."

Why not adapt the Henry George idea of opening up the use of the desirable land to those who can and will use it? (I don't mean farm land.) If privilege and monopoly are brought within the law, then the people will have access to the means of production, and they can and will make their own prosperity.

It is an utterly false idea that government can make prosperity, though it is easily possible for it to destroy prosperity by foolish and unnecessary laws.

Librarians Please Note.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to make a suggestion on behalf of all persons who are hard of hearing and who use the public library. Perhaps because of our handicap we rely more on books than we ordinarily would, and I am sure there are many others like myself.

I understand the desirability of library employes keeping their voices low, but why should they not speak more slowly and distinctly? All of us whose hearing is impaired depend upon lip reading to some degree. It is often not necessary for one to raise his voice at all if he will only open his mouth. With the mumblers and the mutterers we are lost, however, and continued repetition is embarrassing to us both.

I hope the library employes will receive this suggestion with the good will in which I make it and that the next time they encounter a patron who does not hear well, they will remember the lip reading trick. It almost always works.

Mimicking The Squid?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President said, "I will not let the people down." Of course not, he cannot do it for the simple reason they are down already, squelched by high taxes, administrative failure, unemployment and the "social insecurity act" holdup.

The Jackson - Ickes - Roosevelt smoke screen, released to divert attention from ever-mounting debt and taxes, 12,000,000 unemployed and the complete failure of a bogged Government's stupid policies reminds one of a squid. To protect itself the squid goes backward to muddy the waters. Its inky ejaculations are a deceptive attempt, a screen, but we know the creature is hiding somewhere in the mess.

More On The Ludlow Resolution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An avid interest in the Ludlow resolution coupled with an analysis of all pros and cons motivates this letter and leads me to assert that I think it is a step in the right direction.

The oppositionists to the proposal adduce the arguments that a referendum such as that proposed would deflate our prestige abroad and make us an easy prey for invaders. Such piffle. What international prestige have we when this country persists in adhering to a "theory" of isolation (a figment of the imagination in this day and age) and our plenipotentiaries have to be led around by the hand and shown the ropes of foreign intrigue and diplomacy?

Now the other angle. Surely if our military forces are now prepared to repel an invasion during the time it takes to mobilize national resources and defense, the country should be reasonably secure from anything remotely suggesting an attack for the short time necessary to ascertain public sentiment by vote on any question pertaining to war.

And apropos of all this hooey about the people being confounded by the inevitable avalanche of propaganda, et cetera. As we "swing back the portals of memory" we see statesmen, preachers, priests, writers, teachers, poets, generals, admirals (in short, all those far from the scene of battle) galvanized into excesses of patriotic fervor and hysteria. Am I too harsh in affirming that they would probably be just as susceptible to the ballyhoo as we of the hoi polloi?

One of the strongest features about the measure is that it would prevent the party in power from precipitating wars abroad to stave off internal upheaval or boost the sales of munitions. And instead of hamstringing the Administration with respect to foreign policy, the chances are that if power to declare war were lodged with the people a clearly defined stand would eventuate and much of this pussyfooting that characterizes modern diplomacy would be dumped overboard. The pen may be mightier than the sword, but no empires have ever been carved out with pens.

A bristling line of defense against invasion and a solidarity of sentiment with respect to war would minimize much of the prevalent apprehension at home and give us more time to consider domestic problems which are of more serious import than Nipponese aspirations or European goosestepping.

It is my observation that:
No wars have ever been so small
They should not be the will of all.

CHARLES J. SULLIVAN.
Washington, Jan. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A visitor in Washington, I attended today the House session at which the Ludlow resolution was presented by its sponsor. This resolution, introduced three years ago, in January, 1935, was discharged from committee by petition of 218 members of the House. Speaker Bankhead, leaving the chair to speak against the proposed amendment, stated it was the gravest question submitted to Congress in the 20 years he has been a member.

And yet debate of this important issue, "the gravest in 20 years" in the words of the Speaker, was limited to one-half hour. Proponents of the measure, endeavoring to express their views in the 30 to 60 seconds allowed them, were silenced again and again with the fall of the gavel. Even applause in the gallery for speakers favoring the resolution was promptly silenced by the attendants.

During the past week I have visited national shrines of great historical significance, reminders of the sacrifice and struggle to form our Union and attain representative democracy. It rests with the people of each generation to retain and maintain our heritage of free government, requiring, perhaps, even greater vigilance today in a world drifting toward dictatorships.

In this letter I am stating no argument for or against the Ludlow resolution. The sole purpose of this communication is to call attention to the serious breach of public trust in limiting practically to the point of denial, discussion of a subject of vital concern to the American people, so that other citizens honoring and valuing our democratic institutions, may voice their protests against such undemocratic tactics and demand a full, frank and free discussion in Congress of this important and purely domestic issue of whether Congress or the people shall have the right to declare a war of defense.

District Kidnaping Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of January 12 there appears a news article to the effect that there is no law for the District of Columbia covering the subject of kidnaping. Permit me to suggest that while a member of the House, in 1932, I introduced and brought about the enactment of a measure designed to cover the subject of kidnaping within the District, and it is to be found in 47 Stat. 858, ch. 103; also, in Title 6, sec. 36, supplement II, District of Columbia Code.

At the time of discussion of legislation covering interstate kidnaping, following the Lindbergh tragedy, I made an investigation of the laws dealing with the subject of kidnaping and holding for ransom or reward entirely within the District, and I found that such laws were wholly inadequate and ineffective. Thereupon I conferred with the district attorney and his staff and prepared and sponsored the bill in question, which became a law by approval of the President on February 18, 1933 (Public, No. 362, 72d Congress.)

Since there is thus a drastic law on the subject, I believe it well for its provisions to be fully known; hence I venture to submit this communication, and append herewith the indicated act in its entirety, to wit:

AN ACT

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That section 812 of the Act entitled "An Act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia," approved March 3, 1901, as amended (D. C. Code, title 6, sec. 36), is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 812. Whoever shall be guilty of, or of aiding or abetting in, seizing, confining, inveigling, enticing, decoying, kidnaping, abducting, concealing, or carrying away any individual, by any means whatsoever, and holding or detaining, or with the intent to hold or detain, such individual for ransom or reward, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment for life or for such term as the court in its discretion may determine. This section shall be held to have been violated if either the seizing, confining, inveigling, enticing, decoying, kidnaping, abducting, concealing, carrying away, holding, or detaining occurs in the District of Columbia. If two or more individuals enter into any agreement or conspiracy to do any act or acts which would constitute a violation of the provisions of this section, and one or more of such individuals do any act to effect the object of such agreement or conspiracy, each such individual shall be deemed to have violated the provisions of this section."

Shipbuilding Costs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The newspapers report that an American oil company has placed an order for six new tank ships, each to be of 14,000 tons. The ships will be built in Germany.

Inquiry as to why this work was not given to American shipyards elicits the information that the cost of labor in the United States was such that costs would be at least a third more, and naturally the company had to do business where it would get a better job for less money.

This is not an isolated case. Quite a few other companies in the United States are going abroad to have their ships built for the same reason.

When things like this are happening it might be a good idea to associate some of the things that are causing the present depression with such practices. Possibly critics will blame the oil company for going out of the country to have its ships built, but I prefer to saddle the blame on the conditions, and politicians in this country who make such things possible.

U. S. S. Somers.

THE recent trial of the Algic seamen for mutiny recalls the tragic affair of the U. S. brig-of-war Somers. The captain, Alexander Slidell Mackenzie, hanged three of his crew out of hand for plotting a mutiny. And one of these, Midshipman Philip Spencer, was son of the Secretary of War.

The father's rank did not deter, but seemed, on the contrary, to please the captain with the grim sea justice.

Mackenzie told the court of inquiry that Spencer, while waiting to be hanged, "said he 'feared this would injure his father.' 'Had you succeeded,' I replied, 'the injury you would have done him would have been much greater.' If it had been possible to take him home, as I first intended, I told him that he would have got clear, as in America a man with money and influential friends would always be cleared; that the course I was taking would injure his father less than if he should go home and be condemned, and yet again escape."

And yet the captain feared public opinion. He complained of newspaper stories charging him with brutality and asked that the court particularly examine this point so it would be shown that cruelty hadn't caused the mutiny, as on the Bounty and the Hermione.

* * * *

On September 12, 1842, the Somers sailed for African waters. Discipline was good at first, but soon began to slacken.

Much of the unrest was later blamed on Spencer who, though an officer, spent most of his time forward. He made himself popular by giving the sailors tobacco. And, as the captain later testified, Spencer had a method of throwing his jaw out of joint and making peculiar music that amused the sailors.

It was said, too, that Spencer cursed the captain, that he drew a ship with a black flag, that he complained at the number of floggings given the crew. At the trial Mackenzie proved there was no undue number of floggings, and that most were given with the "colt," a whip of only three thongs, instead of with the dreaded "cat-o-nine-tails."

But the other evidence was clear enough. On the night of November 25 Spencer asked one James W. Wales to accompany him out on the booms. Swinging there on the spar with the black water rushing below, with the canvas and ropes creaking as the ship plowed through the tropical sea, Spencer revealed the plot.

He planned to seize the ship and to kill the officers and such of the men as were unwilling or unfit for his purpose. Then he would sail to the Isle of Pines, pick up a man familiar with the business, and become a pirate. Or perhaps he would sail to the Guinea coast and load with slaves. He asked Wales to feel the back of his neckerchief where, beneath the cloth, crinkled a piece of paper. That, he said, was the complete plan.

* * * *

Wales promised to join, but the next day informed Capt. Mackenzie of the plot. At first the captain laughed, and then, recalling Spencer's friendliness with the crew, became deadly serious.

When asked about this communication to Wales, Spencer said it was only a joke.

"This, sir," the captain answered, "you must know is joking upon a forbidden subject. This joke, sir, may cost you your life."

In Spencer's locker a paper was found on which, spelled in Greek letters, were listed the names of the crew. And likewise in Greek letters, but English words, was a legend explaining who were thought to be safe, who doubtful, and the posts to be taken by the chief conspirators.

Owing to the smallness of the ship it was impossible to spare a room in which to imprison Spencer. He was placed in double irons and kept on the quarter-deck under the constant guard of an officer. The crew, realizing that it was suspected, became restless and sullen, and the sailors were often observed looking at Spencer, either from curiosity or, as the officers thought, waiting a sign.

Two days later Elisha Small, a seaman, and Samuel Cromwell, the boatswain's mate, were arrested. There were now three to guard, and the officers began to crack under the strain. The holystones, which were used to scour the decks, were taken from the men so they couldn't be converted into weapons. And when, on November 30, four more men were placed in irons, Capt. Mackenzie saw something would have to be done.

* * * *

He called a council of the officers and asked that they consider the evidence of mutiny, and also whether it would be possible to return the prisoners to port. After deliberating all the next day, the officers reported: They were convinced of the guilt of the first three arrested, and that it would be "impossible to carry them to the United States."

Spencer, Small and Cromwell were singled out for the death sentence because they were the only three of the suspects capable of navigating the ship.

Spencer asked permission to give the signal but, when he faltered, Capt. Mackenzie gave it in his stead. A cannon was fired, the colors broken out and the three were hanged to the yardarm. The captain then ordered the crew to cheer the flag, and peered intently at the men for any sign of disaffection that might show by a sullen cheer.

But, as he told the court later, "Three heartier cheers never went up from the deck of an American ship!"

Inconsistencies On Lynching.

I WANT to poke a stick around in the curious processes by which it is possible to urge the passage of the so-called antilynching bill and at the same time not only condone but vigorously defend the appointment to the United States Supreme Court of a man who admits, but only when cornered with proof, that he once took an oath of allegiance to the Ku Klux Klan.

PEGLER.

Whatever its performances—and they were covered with oath-bound secrecy—the Ku Klux was a modern revival of an old-time lynching and flogging organization, and its purpose was to terrorize, boycott and otherwise intimidate three special groups of citizens and such other individuals as incurred its disapproval.

It was condemned by all persons of liberal mind as an un-American institution, with the essential gears of an underworld racket, and it finally disintegrated not because of any awakening of shame in its members, but because the field had been completely sold. Everybody who was qualified by mentality, character, race and religion to belong to the Ku Klux Klan had been taken in, and still the vast majority of the citizens were "aliens" in the Ku Klux jargon, and the volume of their contempt was sufficient to break it up.

• • • •

THIS KU KLUX had much in common with the pagan Nazi movement, and an emissary of the German fanatic in the greasy raincoat once tried to establish relations with it as the American equivalent of Naziism but decided the Klux was too juvenile and gave up. The Nazis held and now insist more aggressively than ever that to be a blond, blue-eyed German with a belief in Adolf Hitler is to partake of the deity of the German god and thus to be god oneself. This may eventually cause some embarrassment between Germany and Italy. For the Italians think that, although they are not God Himself, they are His favorite children, and the Germans, in their thoughtless early enthusiasm, carelessly proclaimed their belief that all peoples of dark complexion, dark eyes and short legs (a description which fits many of their present Italian allies) contained a touch of the tar brush.

Our Klux used the word "Nordic" in place of the Nazis' word "Aryan," and it was their belief that they were just about the right time and the element commissioned by God to represent Him in this country. They were to maintain discipline, police the morals and personal affairs of all non-members, and elect a government which, like Hitler's, would see that God's will was done according to their version of God's will.

Yet, the elevation of a Klansman to the Supreme Court received the hearty approval of individuals who also approve a bill which conflicts with the most sacred principles of the organization to which their hero solemnly swore his oath.

I AM PUZZLED also by the concern for law, order and democratic processes which is shown on behalf of the antilynching bill by persons who likewise approve and defend the seizure of factories and destruction of property, the fomentation of riots and the intimidation by physical violence and other means of citizens who hold opposite views.

There be some among these defenders of law, order and democratic processes who have been known to resent the mere publication of opinion contrary to their own and to hold that anyone injured or, it follows, deprived of his life in attempting to pass through a picket line to attend his own accustomed job is not a victim of mob violence, as in lynching, but a victim of his own error. I can understand the admiration of persons of this mind for the character of a man who joined the Ku Klux Klan. I should think they would flatly indorse lynching and fight against this bill as a menace to their most cherished principles.

I wonder whether they would agree to the addition of a rider in the lynching bill empowering the Federal Government to move in and prosecute the local authorities for obvious failure to put forth their best efforts to protect workmen from molestation, injury or death and property from seizure or wanton destruction and to levy an indemnity on the local government.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"Look Unpleasant, Please!"

A revolt of Candid Camera victims may be at hand. Over in England, Winston Churchill is leading what appears to be a turning of the photographic worm and there are signs of a general uprising in America against the tendency to confuse photography with strip cartooning.

• • • •

No cameraman seems to want a good likeness of a subject any more. He's satisfied only when he snaps you looking like a gargoyle, a Mardi Gras balloon or one of Frank Buck's gorillas.

• • • •

Can you remember away back when the first thought of any self-respecting photographer was to pose you looking as attractive as possible? When he was fair enough to realize that you wanted a photo that would please your friends and not frighten horses?

• • • •

What's come over the cameramen?

• • • •

They now prowl around, popping out from behind draperies and leaping from behind potted plants to get a statesman with a hot potato between his teeth, snap a Cabinet officer with his wig off or take a noted industrialist asleep with his tongue out.

• • • •

You can panic photographers anywhere by whispering, "Quick, boys! I know where there's a justice of the Supreme Court in his nightshirt paring a corn!"

• • • •

Word that the President of the United States can be snapped eating an ear of buttered corn in bed will make them hysterical.

• • • •

And the Kandid Kameramen have no chivalry toward women subjects, either. To catch milady tripping on a rug, falling off a sofa or in the act of taking the papers out of her hair represents an artistic triumph.

• • • •

• • • •

Does anybody know at what night club some college sophomore is in a stupor under a table? Let's have a close-up at once for the magazines!

• • • •

Is there a tree from which a wide-awake photographer can use a telescopic lens and snap some dowager playing the harpsichord in her scanties? Action, my men, action!

• • • •

Only one thing appears to be slowing up the revolt. Too many of the victims seem to like it.

The deficit, now the finest in history, has about reached the point where some movie company will offer it a contract.

They found a businessman on the concrete walk outside his home, bruised, battered and bleeding, the other morning. The police have no clew. But his friends think he must have been co-operating with the Government.

The wife of a California State mountain lion hunter has sued him for a separation, alleging cruelty and desertion. We can imagine her constant complaint: "Me sitting here alone and you out neglecting me for those mountain lions all the time!"

England On Spain

London Correspondent's Analysis Rebukes View That British Lacked All Spine In Africa And On Peninsula.

By Lawrence A. Fernsworth.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

THE OFFICIAL British attitude toward Spain, and the related question of British security in the Mediterranean, have been both the perplexity and the despair of observers. To many it has seemed that if Britain's real intent was to preserve her Mediterranean "life-line," as well as her alternative highway around Africa, both of which obviously are menaced by the Franco-Mussolini-Hitler intrigue, then she is going at it in a very roundabout way. Her position has been described as that of the man who proceeds to the greasing of his motorcar by taking it apart in order to get at the hub—with the probability that he will not be able to get it together again.

The Britisher of liberal thought indulges in harsh language as he looks upon the spectacle. The dominion citizen, with his independent mind and his direct approach to all problems, feels like washing his hands of responsibility for a mode of conduct so at variance with his own way of doing things.

The Frenchman sees his own interests and those of democracy "betrayed by British selfishness," unmindful of the role played by French egoism in driving Britain into a corner in 1935 and in betraying Abyssinia. The Spaniard who sympathizes with and fights for the government, whether he is Republican or "red," stands aghast when he sees England pursuing a policy which in practice favors Franco. "I am fighting England's battle in the Mediterranean and yet I see her arch-enemy—and ours—favored by her policy," he cries!

But there is another side to the question which his blind spots hide from him, as will appear presently.

Explanations Of British Attitude All Partly Valid.

MANY EXPLANATIONS are offered for the strange attitude of the British government, such as that it is Fascist in tendency; that it is dominated by permanent undersecretaries who look askance at modern co-operative diplomacy and would like to wreck the League upon which it is predicated; that it is pursuing a temporizing policy with an eye on the next elections, to which it would like to bring a Mediterranean pact; that it thinks it can manage Franco in the end, and so on.

All these explanations have their shadings of truth; but they are secondary elements in the prospect, and to place them in the foreground is to behold the picture out of perspective. Such is the view of this correspondent after checking and cross-checking on the situation in this British capital, having had the benefit of the outlook of men who rank high in the councils of the government.

However much one may dissent from the British position, to scold will neither improve it or help to an understanding of it. The important thing is to get inside the minds of those in England who feel that they are pursuing a course predicated on the country's best interests.

The trajectory of Britain's present difficult position in view of the new gains made by Mussolini and Hitler against Britain's interests, their intrigues with Franco and their alliance with Japan, is rightly traced from the British retreat in the Abyssinian affair. It is obvious that had Britain there taken a solid stand, refusing to temporize and calling Mussolini's bluff, he would not have dared to embark upon his Spanish adventure; that under those circumstances Hitler might not have found the Spanish rebels' proposals interesting, and that the actual situation, ugly both for Spain and for England, might never have occurred.

England Seen Unprepared To Call Italians' Bluff.

HERE THE QUESTION must be asked: "Was England really in a position to call the Italian bluff?" Although this writer firmly has believed so, and has therefore been a critic of the British course at that time, further information come to hand convinces him that she is entitled to the benefit of a very large doubt.

The position of England was, first, that France, on whose aid she relied, was failing her in a most critical moment. Laval had double-crossed her by his secret understanding with Mussolini; French naval co-operation was, after considerable discussion, pledged after a formula which made it valueless; France was letting England down all around, even at the League conference where she finally backed a quite worthless sanctions accord.

Parenthetically it may be stated that in England this attitude of France is not forgotten and is considered as little short of treachery. Englishmen are still saying: "If we cannot trust France in a crisis, what's the use of making agreements with her?" And even though France has since then done an about-face and become wedded to a policy of clinging to England's coattails at all costs, the question still sticks in the Englishman's mind, and he is making France "pay for it through the nose." These facts have an important bearing on the British attitude with respect to Spain.

Was he bluffing?

Next must be asked the question: "Was Mussolini really bluffing?" There is much post-mortem evidence to the effect that he was. Indeed, Marshal de Bono admits as much in his book, while persons who at the time had contact with Italian officers, naval or military, report them as nervously asking: "Do you think England will go to war?"

The fact is that the British navy at the time was in as low a state of preparation as it was possible for any navy to be. Units of the fleet had hurriedly been sent to the Mediterranean virtually without munitions. One of the most important fighting units is described by naval officers as having aboard scarcely enough munitions to fight an engagement of 15 minutes.

Clearly Mussolini, through his spy system, knew this. In addition there was the menace of his aviation—no doubt overrated, but at that time a nightmare to the British naval mind, which feared its power to strike at and sink their fighting units.

Some members of the British naval command are pictured as confident of their ultimate ability to beat the Italian forces even though that might involve some losses in the beginning. But I have first-hand knowledge that other high officers doubted that. They knew that if ever there was a time when it behooved Mussolini to strike, that time was then; they feared that Mussolini, cognizant of that fact, might do so. In addition they had before them the big question mark as to France.

Difficult To Criticize British, Observer Concludes.

UNDER THESE circumstances it is difficult to cavil at England for acting as she considered it to be in her interests to act.

There remains one unanswered question about her attitude at that time. What about the "phoney" sanctions agreement which left so many loopholes for Italy as to nullify the purpose it pretended to accomplish? Did they represent the price at which French support was obtained? Or what did they represent?

But the fact remains that the British retreat then, even though much may be said to justify it, prepared the way for the further encroachments of Italy and the new menace offered by Germany in this Spanish affair.

600 Celanese Workers Rehired Since January 1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 13.—Since January 1 more than 600 employes of the Celanese Corporation of America have returned to work. Another 200 or 300 will be recalled within a week, and there is prospect that 1,000 or more, furloughed since early last fall, will be returned to work by the end of this month.

In Rebel Spain

By Herbert R. Southworth

A Lawyer's Life In Francoland.

THE RUMORS that filled the newspapers a month ago of strife behind the Rebel lines in Spain; of friction between the Requete and the Falange; of ill will between Queipo de Llano (Sevilla), Franco (Salamanca), Mola and his successors (Burgos), and most important of all, the growing difficulties between the Spanish rebels and their foreign allies, have been given shape and the color of life by a book recently published in Paris, "Doy Fe. . ." ("I Bear Witness . . .") by Antonio Ruiz Vilaplana.

Senor Ruiz Vilaplana was secretary of the court at Burgos from November 27, 1935, until June 30, 1937, at which date he drove across the international bridge to France, his papers in order, took the military salute from the Guardia Civil, and now in this book gives the most complete picture of life in Francoland that has yet been written.

• • • •

RUIZ VILAPLANA was a career lawyer, in what might roughly correspond to the Federal courts in America. He was stationed at Riaza, Ferrol, Madrid, before he received the post at Burgos. His inclination and his position kept him above the scuffling of politics. He was advancing in his profession and he held high office in the Spanish legal associations. Certainly his past was without suspicion or he could not have held a position of trust under the Burgos government. I mean that no one could accuse him of trade-union connection, of Masonic affiliation, of any radical political membership.

He was, from the evidence in this book, a man of humane instincts, a man with a deep feeling for the people, which caused him to hate tyranny in any of its disguises, a man intensely Spanish-nationalist, and above all (his training can in part account for this) a man devoted not to the words but to the actuality of "law and order."

THIS BOOK is primarily an explanation of why this man on June 30, 1937, at a time when the rebels seemed to be winning the war, crossed the bridge to France and left behind him his position and his career. The two chief causes for his behavior, as gleaned from a study of his book, were these: He resented the virtual colonization of Spain by the German and Italian allies. He saw throughout rebel Spain a daily breakdown of law and order, sanctioned by the military in control.

It was not only in the matter of human life that law had ceased to function. Far from protecting private property, the new regime put it at the mercy of political and military whims. When the case came up of a man to whom everyone in his village owed money, the court discovered that the case had been settled through the simple maneuver of the debtors denouncing the town creditor as a Socialist, whereupon the military took him out and shot him. Everywhere lawsuits were settled out of court in favor of the litigant who could first denounce the other as a radical.

Military fines are common. The Alcalde of Burgos and a right-wing lawyer were fined 500,000 pesetas each for some slight infraction of the rules. When it was discovered that they could not pay this, Mola cut the fine down to 2,500 pesetas apiece. Cases settled in the courts were found to have been previously disposed of through military intervention. Civil law completely broke down. And it was not that one system of law had been set up for another, but that anarchy had been substituted for law by the forces which daily charged their enemies with that fault.

THE BEHAVIOR OF THE ITALIANS and the Germans angered Ruiz Vilaplana. He says that the German invasion has been too generally discounted because of the super-noisiness of the Italians and he points out that the Germans are establishing themselves solidly in the commerce and industry of northern Spain. The invaders treat the Spaniards with undisguised contempt. The swastika waves over the finest hotel in Burgos and while old Spanish customers may take their meals there still, the Spaniards must not tarry afterward, for the Germans do not want them around.

Vilaplana was traveling one day on the Seville express with a Spanish captain on his way to the front. The train was crowded and the two Spaniards attempted to enter a six-chair compartment occupied by two Italians. Before they could ask permission to sit down, the Italians had slammed the door in their faces. At a dance in Valladolid one night, Vilaplana saw all the Spanish girls get up and leave in protest at the practice of letting the foreigners in free and making the Spanish boys pay.

• • • •

VILAPLANA HAS FINE CHAPTERS on the military leaders, on the church, and on the militias. Of all of the latter, he has kind words only for the Falange. Franco he sees as the creature of Italy and Germany, completely lacking in the personality to make himself caudillo.

This book is now being translated into English and will shortly appear in the American market. It should be a welcome addition to the Spanish bookshelf and clarify for American readers the situation behind the rebel lines in Spain.

BY WAY OF New Year's greeting perhaps, Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin have reminded us of the concluding sentence of "The Education of Henry Adams" . . . "Some day—say 1938, their centenary—they (Adams, Hay, King, etc.) might be allowed to return together for a holiday . . . and perhaps then, for the first time since man began his education among the carnivores, they would find a world that sensitive and timid natures could regard without a shudder" . . . Perhaps Dr. J. B. Rhine can find a way of suggesting tactfully to these hopeful shades that it might be better to put off this intermundial excursion until 2038.

TO BE ADDED to the modern library this spring are Edmund Pearson's "Studies in Murder," "Rome Haul," "Of Mice and Men," "The Wisdom of Confucius" (this edited by Lin Yuntang), and Henry George's "Progress and Poverty" . . . To the modern library giant editions will be added "Jean Christophe," "The Basic Writings of Sigmund Freud" (edited by Dr. A. A. Brill) and "The Complete Tales and Poems of Edgar Allan Poe."

• • • •

THERE ARE NOW 217 books in the regular Modern Library series and 40 books in the giant series . . . For more than ten years, which is to say both before the great depression and during it, the biggest seller has been "The Brothers Karamazov" and next, "Of Human Bondage" . . . But in 1937 the biggest seller was "Imperial Hearst" . . . In the giant series the largest sales have been of "The Complete Novels of Jane Austin" and of "The Poems of Keats and Shelley" . . . More than 30,000 sets of the two volume modern library giant edition of Gibbon have been sold . . . And if you have a flair for statistics and plenty of pencils and paper you might try to figure something out of all that.

• • • •

SPEAKING OF STATISTICS, Dr. Edith Mirrielees, writing in the current number of the Saturday Review of Literature, astonishes us with the assertion that 30 per cent of college undergraduates "cherish writing ambitions" . . . We had supposed somehow that the proportion was about 97.66666 per cent . . . Apropos of undergraduate writers Dr. Mirrielees makes an interesting distinction between the "brick by brick" (or Saturday Evening Post) school and the "look by look" (or Edward O'Brien) school . . . Dr. Mirrielees gives an example of "look by look" writing: "John opened the door. He walked into the room. He turned and closed the door" . . . Isn't that just like John—forgetting to wipe his feet!

Tom McCarthy

They All End Up In Jail.

"'MEMBER," he said, "'member when the teacher found you out? And it was comin' out on your report card on the first of the month. And you knew what the 'old man' would do when he heard about it?"

He was a Federal prisoner at Lorton, Va., but he was talking like a kid. And he didn't look so much different from dozens of kids you'll find on college campuses. Of course, he wore prison pants and a faded blue shirt, but his smile was youthful and he talked quietly.

McCARTHY.

"I was supposed to be 'big time,'" he said. "I admit I did take the public for $60,000 in less than three years. But I couldn't hang onto the dough I stole. You can't, when you're 'on the lam.'

"In the movies," he said, "they make it look thrilling. Well, get my side of it. I was a fair kind of crook and they only caught me once. But it wasn't thrilling. It was like I tell you. It was like waiting for the old man to get you into the woodshed. And, believe me, I knew I had it coming.

"I've told you how I swung up and down the country into every big city of 30,000 or over. But I didn't tell you what I thought about. So here goes.

"I'm not trying to look tough, but I didn't worry so much while I was busting a town with worthless checks. Then I was like a boxer in the swing of a fight. I was tense. Sure. But I was tight, too. I was thinking. And I didn't think I could be hurt.

"For about a half a dozen days a month I just worked in a sort of a fog. I didn't get dumb. I just brightened up and thought in terms of dough. I was making money.

"The time I worried . . . and I think the time all crooks worry . . . is not when pulling a job, but when traveling out of it. You see, Mr. Hoover—J. Edgar—has got what we call a 'front wrecker.' And we don't like it. You call it fingerprinting.

"Honest the worst scares I got, while escaping dicks, weren't the times when I was stealing something, but the times when I was traveling.

"And, no matter what dough you get, if you can't move without worry . . . and a cold sweat . . . it isn't fun. All the time I was driving around the country—and that means most of the 48 States—I worried about the 'front wrecker.' I was afraid I'd get picked up for speeding and that they'd get my fingerprints.

"NOW, the average guy doesn't worry much about that, but I did. They could wreck my front. They had my fingerprints in Washington. All that was needed to spill me was some country cop getting a little suspicious and taking my fingerprints.

"When I was picked up for passing a stoplight in a town of 5,000, it worried me. A bit of suspicion and a check with Washington meant that I'd go to jail. It's pretty hard to enjoy even a nice car and a new suit, when you're thinking about that. And that's what I thought about every minute on the road.

"I'll give you an example. I was driving through Texas. Now, I don't know if you know the State, but there's an 80-mile stretch between Beaumont and Houston. It's good road and it's straight. You feel like traveling on that stretch.

"Well, I passed a stoplight on the outskirts of Beaumont. Most guys wouldn't have been worried if they'd done that. They'd have paid the fine and forgot it. But with me it meant the possibility of discovery and a half a dozen years in the stir.

"So when I heard a flatfoot yell out for me to stop, I highballed.

"The ordinary guy would have stopped. I couldn't. I was a crook. And when I saw in the rear-vision mirror a Ford V-8 coming up fast, I let go. When I hit 85 the other car dropped behind.

"But even to the more than average traffic violator, that would have been enough. But I was a crook. So I couldn't forget it.

"I pulled down a side road and tried to keep everything under control. All the time my wife was sitting there white-faced and not saying a word. And we just had to hide out till dark. I felt like a coon treed by the dogs. And yet the average driver could have laughed it off. I was afraid of the 'front wrecker'—the fingerprint check.

• • • •

"WHEN I pulled out of the side road, I didn't continue on toward Houston. I doubled back through Beaumont and took the 'old Spanish Trail' to New Orleans. And maybe that kind of going with the wind sounds like fun . . . but it leaves a dirty, sick feeling in your belly.

"Of course, while working my racket, I had trouble—but not so many times. I had to take to my heels and, once in a while, I had to swing on somebody's jaw.

"But the worst of being a criminal is the realization that even the most innocent of acts can send you to jail . . . once they arouse suspicion.

"I placed $1,200 in a safe deposit box in Louisiana. I think I used the assumed name of 'Donald Ferguson.' Well, about a half a year later, I was close to the cushion, I was nearly broke. I beat it down there to drag it out.

"I wrote out the name of Donald Ferguson and asked to get into my box. For about three minutes I thought the guy was going to call the cops. Remember it was my own money . . . but it nearly turned me in.

"Because I was a forger, changing my handwriting every time I wrote a check, I'd forgotton how I'd written the 'e' in the signature at the bank where I'd left my money in safe deposit. And when I came back six months later I was using an open 'e,' rather than the closed one.

"Picking up the money I deposited myself, I excited suspicion that almost sent me to jail. I pleaded that I'd hurt my finger in an accident and that I'd changed my writing. But I came close, that time.

"But that's the hell of being a crook. Because you know some day they'll catch up with you. And you know that it may be an innocent act that'll give you away."

Then he walked out of the office. And I'll probably never see him again. Because he has a couple of more years to serve at Lorton and the possibility of as many more on untried charges.

Elements Same, 10 Billion Yrs., Chemists Assert

The chemical elements which make up the whole of matter have been in their present State 10,000,000,000 years.

The first estimate by chemical methods compares favorably with the age of matter set by astronomers, Dr. A. K. Brewer, of the Fertilizer Research Division, Department of Agriculture, told the Geological Society at the Cosmos Club Wednesday night.

The age of the oceans is about 700,000,000 years, about double previously accepted estimates, Dr. Arthur C. Spencer and K. J. Murata, of the Geological Survey, reported.

The ages of the universe with matter in its present form and of the earth as outlined by the scientsits runs something like this:

About 10,000,000,000 years ago matter came into its present form. Its form before that time is unknown. Then, as other estimates indicate, the age of the earth is about 2,000,000 years, one fifth of the time matter has been in its present form.

Then the oceans are about 700,000,000 years old, about one-third the age of the earth.

Dr. Brewer made his calculations of the age of matter from the rates at which certain substances change by radioactivity.

Calculations of the age of the ocean were nearly doubled by investigation which revealed that much of the salt carried into the sea by rivers does not remain dissolved in sea water, but goes to the bottom in chemical combination with the clays.

Previous estimates were based on how many years were spent in accumulating the 5,000,000 cubic miles of salt that is dissolved in the world's oceans, but no one, Spencer and Murata said, had taken into account the phenomenon of base exchange by which the clays take certain salts from the water.

Orphans, Others to See Rialto Film as Guests

Boys and girls from orphanages, homes and social service agencies will be guests of the Junior Cinema Guild at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at a showing, in the Rialto Theater, of "The Devil Is a Sissy," starring Freddie Bartholomew, Jackie Cooper and Mickey Rooney.

Student groups from Western, Eastern and Central high schools will present a series of 5-minute radio dramatizations dealing with tuberculosis over station WJSV the next three Saturdays at 9:30 a. m.

First Army Ship Built in Years Pays Visit Here

The Army is going to sea.

Flying the flag of the quartermaster general, the Ellery W. Niles, first ship constructed under Army orders in nearly 20 years, was moored yesterday at the War College dock for inspection by the House sub-committee on War Department appropriations.

Intended primarily for mine-planting operations off San Francisco, the vessel also has space for transporting troops between harbor and island posts along the West Coast.

Mines laid by the Ellery W. Niles are to be planted at strategic points guarding American waterways, to be detonated in time of emergency by cable connection between mines and the nearest coastal fort.

Commissioned in December, the vessel was built by a private firm in Wilmington, Del., at a cost of $780,000. It is 185 feet long, draws 10½ feet and has three Diesel-electric, twin-screw engines developing 1,600 horsepower. The bridge is equipped with fog-piercing neon lights.

Members of the congressional delegation who went aboard yesterday were Representatives John F. Dockweiler (Democrat), of California; D. Lane Powers (Republican), of New Jersey; J. Buell Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Albert J. Engel (Republican), of Michigan; Joe Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, and David D. Terry (Democrat), of Arkansas.

The party was escorted over the Ellery W. Niles by Quartermaster Gen. Henry Gibbins and Capt. Sam Rubin, commander of the ship.

Vinal Honored.

Dr. George W. Vinal, of the Bureau of Standards (who, incidentally, is a graduate of Eastern High School here), received notice yesterday that he will be the first person to receive the Gaston Plante Medal of the Societe Francaise des Electriciens.

The medal and cash award of 4,500 francs was established by the French society, equivalent of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, in 1934, on the 100th anniversary of the birth of Plante, who built the first storage battery.

Dr. Vinal's immediate reaction: "The first thing I noticed in The Post this morning was that the exchange rate of the franc is going down!"

The local scientist is the first to receive the medal, which will be presented to him during a meeting of the American institute—probably the summer meeting here in June. Citation of the reasons why Dr. Vinal will receive the award was not sent him, but it is believed to be based on his work on storage batteries.

He is the author of a recent book, "Storage Batteries," which deals with battery operation and construction. This work was translated into French and published in Paris in 1936. He is also the author of numerous technical papers on batteries and electrical chemistry. He has been associated with the Bureau for 30 years and now is in charge of the battery section. After graduating from Eastern he received both A. B. and A. M. degrees from Weslyan Connecticut University (1906-09. In 1936 he received an honorary S. C. D. degree there. His home is at 3810 Jennifer street northwest.

The associates and other friends of John S. Collins, chief administrative division, Bureau of Air Commerce, yesterday tendered him a surprise party on the occasion of his thirty-fifth anniversary in the Government service. Director Fagg and other officials joined in the greetings. The party was held in room 7057.

Notes.

Louis Ludlow, who recently scored a defeat, writes in of a success: "The Indiana Society is happy to report that a most successful year was had in 1937 . . . ." Now the society plans a party for Tuesday night at the Wardman Park Hotel, offering a good orchestra and tables at which Hoosiers can sit and get re-acquainted . . . The North Carolina Democratic Club of Washington will hold a business meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the Raleigh Hotel. Mrs. May Thompson Evans, assistant director of the Women's Division, National Democratic Committee, will be the speaker. All North Carolina Democrats are asked to attend.

Government employes are offered an opportunity by the trustees of the French Language School of Washington to acquire a knowledge of French free of tuition. A class of beginners will be organized at 7:15 o'clock this evening at the school, 1206 Eighteenth street northwest. Rudolphe de Zapp, the president, comments: "This is an annual custom of the school covering more than 20 years. There are also free-tuition classes in various stages of progress and these meet every evening at 7:15 o'clock for one hour. Among the more than 150 students are many members of the Diplomatic and Consular Service, the Army and Navy and other branches of the Government." . . .

The Georgia State Society announces committees for its ratification dance (celebrating approval on January 2, 1788, of the United States Constitution by the Georgia Legislature), to be held at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow evening. The welcoming committee will consist of the Georgia Congressional delegation and their wives; entertainment: Carter Barron and Mrs. Barron, Col. and Mrs. Gordon S. Green, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Camp, Major and Mrs. Charles Estes, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Worthy, Miss Leone Barber, Mr. and Mrs. Lacy W. Hinely, Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Scott, Mrs. J. W. Thurston, and Mrs. Julia Almand; floor: Charles Cook and Mrs. Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Porter Davis, Miss Winona Thurston, Thomas Hardman, Miss Kitty Reynolds, Marion Hiley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Graddick, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Little, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bigley and Miss Patricia Collins . . .

F. E. U. Local 262 Credit Union has elected officers for the ensuing year, as follows: A. D. Sartwell, president; J. O. Burnham, vice president; E. P. Harrison, treasurer; W. E. Perry, director, and Virginia Schaefer, clerk: E. C. Hooper, A. D. Sartwell, and E. P. Harrison, credit committee, and Victor Garland, W. H. Clark and R. S. Williams, supervisory committee . . . F. C. A. Notes: The Fard Credit Chorus is meeting each Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the cafeteria; all interested are invited to participate. On the seventeenth the F. C. A. Employes Credit Union holds a dinner before the annual meeting; on the menu will be: Fruit cup, fried chicken (cranberry sauce), sweet potatoes and frozen peas, celery, olives, pickles, ice cream and cake. The dinner begins at 6:30 in the Commerce Department dining room. Two hundred are expected to attend.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

More introductions are mumbled in Washington than anywhere in the Republic . . . Partially this is because there are so many transient celebrities and so many distinguished foreign names which the introducer slurs over rather than mispronounce openly.

* * * *

Consequently, you are often at sea all evening whether that distinguished hombre is the Ambassador from Brazil or the Senator from New Mexico . . . The only safe thing to do is to treat everyone as if he were at least a Senator or an ambassador—and then he's likely to turn out to be a distinguished visiting postmaster.

* * * *

Alas, the Senate may soon be without the refining influence of a feminine member; Dixie Bibb Graves has departed, and there are reports that Senator Hattie Caraway is weary of Senatorial splendors, while deserving Democrats back in Arkansas are champing for a shot at her seat . . . It's a marvel to some that Alice Longworth doesn't run for Congress; she'd be a dandy.

14

"—no gate too high for crashers."

My favorite diplomatic lady tells me she disapproves the American male's custom of leaping to his feet every time a woman, young or old, approaches him at a party . . .

"It interrupts conversation," she says, "and besides, it must be so fatiguing to the men, and it makes them look so silly!"

And Americans imagine they are being courtly and continental!

* * * *

Quite a few of the gentlefolk and even a few pundits trotted out to the Shoreham last night to see Sonja Henig, the dimpled, curvesome skater, on whose ample bosom the Norwegians yesterday pinned a medal . . . Miss Henie was indisposed most of the evening, and invisible, but everyone had a good time until the Scotch ran out.

* * * *

Since even the more rugged of the Hollywood cuties can't seem to take occasionally what a Washington deb or a Congressman's wife takes daily in her stride, I suggest they bring their stand-ins along to do the handshaking, while they themselves swoon on sofas.

* * * *

Ambassador Suvich, of Italy, and Minister Marc Peter, of Switzerland, are the camera fans of the diplomatic corps; Mr. Peter has some reels of his grandchildren that would compare well with the quints' movies.

"For pictures of children," he says, "the movie camera is the thing; it doesn't matter if they move; in fact, it's better."

* * * *

THOMAS DEWEY.

After Washington had a chance to give New York's new district attorney the once over, quite piercingly, as a presidential potentiality, the verdict seemed to be "How pathetically young he is!" To which Mr. Dewey's retort might be, "That's a fault every day remedies." . . . There's a bit of the man-hunter about young Mr. Dewey; he's the prosecutor incarnate, Javert with a law degree; he's too personable to be lynx-eyed, yet he does have the piercing eye. . . . But two-fisted idealism is his prize trait . . . He says idealistic things that no politician would say, but he says them with a scornful contempt of political corruption that expunges the naivete . . . His conversation drips with hilarious stories of crass, unblushing graft . . . It would be comical if the tory Republicans ever swing to him as an antidote to the New Deal; he probably would give the male factors of great wealth the best massaging they ever got.

* * * *

With a weary shrug, the Capital's hostesses accept gate-crashers as one of the curses of social success . . . Their attentions are slightly flattering, in fact, like having Prince Mike Romanoff around; a few phonies to underline genuineness . . . Anyhow, most gate-crashers are friends of some of the genuine guests, who help squeeze them in or even slip them invitations . . . One lone-wolf, however, recently introduced himself at a largish party as the Minister from Bermuda, and kinda got away with it; no other Britons were present.

14

"—ambassadorships over the counter."

Resentment smolders warmer and warmer around the State Department against world-weary plutocrats who virtually buy American diplomatic posts over the counter with campaign contributions . . .

* * * *

The custom is hallowed by time, and there's no good reason why a wealthy contributor shouldn't be a good diplomat, except that two times out of three he isn't . . . Most of 'em are assigned to capitals that aren't much more fun than the old home town; so it's a gyp all the way around.

* * * *

The doctors on the hill watch the Members' health with a jealous eye, not to mention the fitness of the hired help . . . Signs are scattered around urging a room temperature of 72.8 degrees or less, and asking 'em to drop in for a sample of the new cold shot pills, each containing 50,000,000,000 pneumonia, sirep, flu and catarrh germs, dead ones . . . A Member's death is expensive; his widow gets $10,000, and Congress often gets the widow as his successor.

1,038 Denied Aid Here in Last Month

Public Funds Are Inadequate, Says Director of Assistance Division.

956 of Number Asking Help Employable, Asserts Miss Hill.

Applicants for public assistance numbering 1,038 were refused assistance last month because public funds were inadequate, Miss M. Alice Hill, director of the Public Assistance Division, announced yesterday.

"Of the total number refused aid, 956 were employable and 82 were unemployable," Miss Hill said.

Due to the limited funds available for general relief, since the first of October no cases have been accepted unless the case falls under one of the Social Security categories of old-age assistance, aid for the needy blind or aid for dependent children, she said.

Reporting to Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, Miss Hill described the plight of the affected persons.

Without Food Two Days.

"Two families and one unattached person reported they had been without food for two days," she said. "Many were faced with eviction and one family consisting of a man and wife with five children under 16 was actually evicted."

Several applicants for relief reported that the children were not in school because they lacked clothing. One unattached man said he would probably steal and go back to jail, as he could find no work and was absolutely without resources.

Among the rejected applicants were aged and blind persons who had not resided in the District for the five out of the last nine years which is required by law before old-age assistance or aid to the needy blind can be granted.

Approximately two-thirds of these rejected applicants had no resources other than the possibility of an occasional day's work, Miss Hill explained.

Inadequate Earnings.

"The others had to depend upon inadequate earnings or assistance from relatives or friends who, many times, could ill afford to give the little assistance they managed to offer," she said.

The public assistance division was unable to give any kind of assistance to 42 per cent of these applicants. To 35 per cent of them orders were given for surplus food. For 16 per cent the intake secretaries in the District offices contacted some other social agency or wrote letters, in an endeavor to get some form of assistance. For the remaining 7 per cent some sort of arrangement was made to meet the problem.

"If funds had been adequate probably only 20 per cent of the rejected applicants would have been denied assistance because of ineligibility," Miss Hill declared. "The remaining 80 per cent, although in dire need, had to be refused assistance except for orders for surplus food because of insufficient funds."

Unions Certified For 6 Ship Firms

Two marine unions affiliated with the C. I. O. and one affiliated with the A. F. of L., were certified by the National Labor Relations Board yesterday as the exclusive collective bargaining agencies for six steamship-operating companies.

The National Maritime Union, C. I. O. affiliate, was certified for unlicensed personnel on vessels of the Pure Oil Co., and the Kellogg Steamship Co., both of New York, while the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, another C. I. O. affiliate, was named to bargain for licensed marine engineers employed by the Curtis Bay Towing Co., the Atlantic Transport Co. and the Cottman Co., all of Baltimore.

A. F. of L.'s International Longshoremen's Association was certified on vessels operated by A. J. Harper and Baker-Whiteley Coal Co., also of Baltimore.

Public Report On Velvet Ball Waits on Audit

Whatever contribution the Velvet Ball may have earned for the children's lunch fund will be made public when audits of the two committees in charge have been completed, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., president of the Citizens' Permanent Committee, Inc., announced in a formal statement last night.

Mrs. Boyle's statement opened with the declaration that "intimation has been given that these audits are being wilfully withheld." She closed it with the plea:

"It is respectfully requested that the general public withhold their verdict until this publication (of the audits) is made. Everyone seems to have had their day in court except the committee with facts, figures and affidavits. It is not the American spirit to indict, convict and sentence without giving the defendant his opportunity!"

An audit of the books of the Emergency Committee which was succeeded by the Permanent Committee as sponsor of the fund drive, has been completed, Mrs. Boyle said. The second audit will be "completed just as quickly as we can get it done," she declared.

"The books of account, duplicate receipts for money received, canceled checks, receipts, etc. (of the Permanent Committee), are in the joint control of Mrs. Georgianna Butts, treasurer of the corporation, and Harold S. Roberts, certified public accountant in the Woodward Building," Mrs. Boyle added.

Mrs. Boyle said Roberts has "devoted every minute of time to this that he could spare from his regular clientele" and has been able to complete an audit to December 15 "which has been open for inspection." However, she added:

"The committee will not open for publication these audits until both are completed. The audits must be certified to by independent accountants."

New Additions To Smithsonian Are Predicted

Congress Held Ready to Authorize Gallery and Two Wings.

Congressional authorization for the Smithsonian Institution to erect its long-discussed gallery of art and two wings on the Natural History Building of the national museum was foreseen yesterday by members of the institution's board of regents as they gathered for their annual meeting, presided over by Chief Justice Hughes.

After a business session the regents viewed a number of exhibits illustrating research work carried out by the institution and outstanding additions to its collections during the past year.

Described as samples of the highest development in ivory carving, two elephant tusks by the Burmese artist Maung Kin were displayed, while a gold and turquoise sceptre of the Chinese Emperor Ch'ien Lung represented Chinese art.

A group of 150 minute insects hitherto unknown to science was also shown the regents and a newly developed method of acid solution was illustrated in ancient fossils dissolved out of limestone.

Besides the Chief Justice, the following regents attended the meeting: Vice President Garner, Senators M. M. Logan (Democrat), and Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky; Representatives T. Alan Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland; Charles L. Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, Frederic A. Delano, Dr. John C. Merriam and Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the board.

Washington's school attendance—public, private and parochial—totals 107,352, the highest ever recorded here, public school officials announced yesterday.

The total included all pupils under college and university level.

The recently compiled statistics showed there are 93,047 boys and girls in public school; 12,513 in parochial schools, and 1,792 in commercially operated private institutions.

200 to Fight Street Shift In D. C. Court

Northeast Citizens Name Committee to Raise 'War Chest.'

Two hundred aroused residents of Northeast Washington last night organized a court fight against plans of the District government to extend South Dakota avenue to connect Eighteenth street and Michigan avenue.

Angered by the possibility of a $26,000 assessment being levied against them, the residents, at a mass protest meeting conducted by the Michigan Park Citizens Association in the Bunker Hill School, named a committee to raise a "war chest" to fight the project by hiring expert counsel to present their objections at a District Court hearing February 4.

Edward Inman was named to head a committee of 20 of which three sub-committees were charged with raising money, selecting legal counsel and interesting residents not attending the meeting in the battle.

Danger to Lives Claimed.

Throughout the meeting, punctuated by sharply worded criticisms of the project, which calls for a 120-foot arterial roadway connecting the dead ends of South Dakota avenue, leaders of the protest labeled the proposed extension:

"A project for killing our children."

It is the intention of the extension's planners, speakers declared, to create a main thoroughfare for trucks in interstate traffic to Baltimore and other points which will constitute a menace to lives of residents and their children. Speakers charged the "improvement" would provide assessed property owners with no benefit, but, on the contrary, would result in a deterioration of property values.

Finances Criticized.

Condemnation proceedings have set the value of the property to be used in making the extension at $61,000, it was cited. Of this amount, according to John J. Hurley, president of the association, property owners will be assessed a total of $26,000.

The largest assessment will be $1,190; the smallest, $15; the average, $60, Hruley said.

"The court procedure to be conducted February 4 before Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat is known as a 'benefit hearing,'" Hurley said. "We want to know what they mean by 'benefit.' I can tell you what we think is meant. We think it means depreciation of our property and another chance of killing our children."

The protest meeting was the largest ever held under the association auspices. It was attended by almost as many members of neighboring citizens' associations as members of the Michigan Park group.

University Park.

Resolutions advocating restoration of the office of People's Counsel, legislation to enable the District to participate in Federal highway benefits and repeal of the business privilege tax were adopted last night at a meeting of the American University Park Citizens' Association.

The resolutions were framed by Thomas E. Lodge, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations and chairman of the law and legislation committee of the university park group.

The roads resolution petitioned Congress to enact legislation to enable the District to participate in the benefits of the Hayden-Cartwright act on a parity with State governments and opposed diversion of gas tax funds from highway purposes in a manner that would result in curtailment of the Federal contribution.

If added funds are needed for the District, the tax resolution declared, and if a fair share of the burden of government is to be carried by the United States, taxation should be by general sales and income imposts. The resolution also recommended reduction of the realty tax to $1.50.

This portrait of Charles Thompson, a signer of the Constitution, has been identified as one of the works of Adolf Ulric Wertmuller. Several portraits in the Sequicentennial of the Constitution exhibit at the Corcoran Gallery were painted by artists whose identity has been lost. Viewing the work are Mrs. L. T. Easley, of 1227 Queen street northeast, and her son, Rex, 9 months, the youngest visitor yesterday.

"Artist unknown."

That admission of defeat has been removed from labels of more than a dozen paintings in the Sesquicentennial exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery of Art since it opened six weeks ago.

Mrs. McCook Knox, chairman of the portrait committee of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission Historical Loan Exhibition, made the disclosure yesterday.

Many exhibits still remain unidentified, but Mrs. Knox said she hopes the number will be further reduced before the show closes March 1. In the collection, besides oil paintings of Constitution and Declaration signers and their families and associates, are miniatures, silhouettes, snuff boxes, pewter, silver and other art objects.

The habit of John Wollaston, artist of the Revolutionary period, in giving all his subjects almond-shaped eyes was principal clew in crediting to him portraits of Mr. and Mrs. George Braxton, the former a brother of Carter Braxton, Declaration signer, and his wife the sister of John Blair, a Constitution signer.

Mrs. Parker Campbell Wyeth, a great - great - great - granddaughter of the couple, did not know the identity of the artist until she loaned the pictures for the exhibition. Mrs. Knox is sure that Wollaston is the man and her opinion has been supported by other experts on the portrait committee.

H. K. D. Peachy, who lent the portrait of Mrs. John Blair, his great-great-great-grandmother, recalled a family tradition that one something-Alexander, or Alexander something, was responsible for the work. The tradition was justified when study revealed that the artist was Cosno John Alexander, painting teacher of the famous Gilbert Stuart.

"Artist unknown" also was attached to the pastel of John Blair, who not only was a Constitution signer, but also one of the first justices of the Supreme Court. The portrait committee now is confident it was done by William Williams, whose celebrated canvas of George Washington hangs in the Alexandria Masonic Temple.

The likenesses of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thomson are by Adolf Ulric Wertmuller, Mrs. Knox is quite sure, although there is some dispute about this. Mrs. Thomson was the second wife of the secretary of the Continental Congress.

It was Mr. Peachy who lent the pictures of Mrs. William Samuel Peachy and Mrs. Robert Andrews and family tradition that the former was painted by Rembrandt Peale proved as reliable as it did in the Blair instance. It has also been determined since the exhibition opened that Peale did the Andrews portrait.

Mrs. Peachy (Mary Monro Cary) was niece of John Blair. In common with many other items in the Corcoran show, the picture of Mrs. Andrews, daughter of John Blair, had never before been on exhibit.

When paintings of George Ross, a Declaration signer, and his father of the same name arrived at the Corcoran Gallery of Art they were thought to be the work of John Hesselius. Now, however, the committee is fairly certain that his father, Gustavus, should be credited.

Dr. R. P. Tolman, acting director of the National Collection of Fine Arts, was responsible for identification of the miniatures of Luther Martin and his daughter, Maria, as products of Robert Field. Martin was a member of the Philadelphia Convention of 1787 and defended Aaron Burr at his treason trial.

The miniatures of Sarah Broom, her sister, Ann, and John S. Littler, Ann's husband, were found to be the work of James Peale. But for this exhibition this information might never have been known. Sarah and Ann were daughters of Jacob Broom, a signer of the Constitution. The miniature of John Lansing, a deputy to the Philadelphia Convention, was credited to John Ramage by Dr. Tolman.

Cantor Has Sore Throat.

Tubercular Man Admits Violation Of Health Orders

Pleading guilty to a violation of the District health code, respecting rules for the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis, Solomon Bell, 73, retired D. C. watchman, was placed on probation in police court yesterday and agreed to hospitalization at either Glenn Dale or Gallinger.

Bell explained that he was reluctant to be hospitalized, fearing that his pension would be cut off and his 30-year-old wife, Georgia, and four children left destitute. It was explained to him that the pension would continue, and he agreed to undergo treatment.

Publisher Lea Leaves $50,000 to Red Cross

Norristown, Pa., Jan. 13 (AP).—Arthur H. Lea, retired publisher and philanthropist, left bequests totaling nearly $1,500,000 to educational, religious, charitable institutions and relatives, in his will filed for probate today. Gifts included: National Red Cross, Washington, $50,000, and Meadville Theological School, of Meadville, Pa., and Chicago, $20,000 endowment.

2 Churches In Northwest Plan Merger

Congregationalist Shift May Relocate One of Buildings.

Merger of two prominent Congregational churches in northwest Washington is believed imminent as the result of a "plan of co-operation" announced yesterday by Mount Pleasant and Cleveland Park churches.

Dr. Russel J. Clinchy, Mount Pleasant's pastor, disclosed he is serving the Cleveland Park congregation as "advisory pastor," replacing the Rev. Joseph S. Loughran, who resigned his pastorate there January 1. The plan will have "great significance for the future of both churches," said Dr. Clinchy.

At present Dr. Clinchy is taking over all pastoral duties at Cleveland Park, and is arranging for guest preachers. This arrangement will be used probably until June, according to Dr. Clinchy.

The Mount Pleasant Church, which recently celebrated its fiftieth anniversary, is one of the strong churches of the Congregational denomination in Washington. It has a membership of more than 1,000 members, including influential leaders in Government and social welfare work in the Capital.

The Cleveland Park Church was started in 1918 and has been a community church of that area, emphasizing work with children and young people.

"These two Congregational churches are located in the residential area of Northwest Washington and have therefore always had a close bond and relationship," declared Dr. Clinchy.

The pastor said plans for combining the two churches and the relocation of one, or both, have been under consideration, but no decision has been reached.

Coroner to Hold Lonyay Autopsy

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald will hold an autopsy today on the body of Mortimer Lonyay, 53-year-old attorney, who died in Emergency Hospital last night from a bullet wound in the chest.

Before certifying the cause of death, Dr. McDonald will attempt to determine the course of the bullet. His lung punctured by a bullet, Lonyay was found Monday in a Chinese laundry at 1785 Florida avenue northwest by the proprietor, Henry Leo.

Leo said Lonyay, estranged from his wife, appeared despondent after a conversation with her earlier in the day had developed into an argument.

Lonyay lived at 1757 Euclid street. His landlady said he spent half the year in Detroit and had arrived in Washington on Sunday night.

Troika Tonight Holds Russian New Year Fete

By Chanticleer

There'll be singing and dancing and merrymaking at the Troika tonight for it's Russian New Year. A special floor show is planned and a toast to the new year will be one of the special numbers. You need not be Tovarich to appreciate this but, if you are, you will find the atmosphere, dancing, and food perfect.

Another spot where gaiety will be king is the Pall Mall room at the Raleigh. It's "Circus Daze" Wednesday and Eddie Daniels and his boys will get busy on the ginger ale bottle calliope, while Frank Portillo, the popular clown, will add to the merriment. Virginia Hunter's school of dancing will present the "Wedding of Tom Thumb."

Every night at the Pall Mall there is Dolores DuPree, the Spanish dancer, who has masculine admirers ga-ga with her dazzling beauty. Incidentally, while there, get Eddie Daniels to do one of his specialty numbers.

In your round of night stepping, drop into the Anchor Room at the Annapolis. Ward Duvall is the attraction. He is the "Gypsy Minstrel of the Air," and you have probably enjoyed his singing many nights on local radio programs.

There's a new schedule of superior menus announced at the Shoreham. Chef Jacques Haeringer promises some favorites such as broiled lobster and strawberry Romanoff, to say nothing of crepes suzettes.

In case you are slimming and calory counting, there is now the privilege of choosing a liquer or cordial instead of dessert on the regular dinner menu. Feature peach brandy to complete a good dinner, an excellent floor show, and dancing to Barnee's music in the Blue Room!

While on the subject of food, the Madrillon special attraction this week is prize steer that comes special from an exhibition in Chicago to Washington to be sold as "boeuf a la something." The Madrillon this week turns American and serves it in glorious American style as savory pot roast, roast prime ribs of beef, and American pot pie.

Last Wednesday this column gave a plug to Leo-Lisee, the duo that has been getting such good applause, but my severest critic points out that it was placed at the Mayflower instead of the Mayfair. A thousand apologies and I'll alibi myself by saying that everyone is allowed one mistake. At the Mayfair, please note, there is Beverley Stull, the popular blonde accordionist, and Otis Manning the magician.

A sparkling new revue comes to the Bamboo Gardens tomorrow, headlined with beauties who do all the tap routines along with song and dance numbers. Mary Martin is the chief warbler.

Brinkley's, that popular Southeast resort, continues to report constant special parties of regular guests dropping in at frequent intervals. It seems the old-timers always outnumber the new guests.

And for a nightcap or a special hot toddy to keep cold away, remember there is the Hi Hat at the Ambassador, with entertainment by Dick Rogers occasionally and by the famous Three Merrymakers all evening.

Rites Set Today For Mrs. Harper

Funeral services for Mrs. America Harper, 92, who died Wednesday night, will be held today at 2 p. m. at her residence, 2517 Ontario road northwest.

Mrs. Harper, was found in the hallway of the second floor of the apartment house by her daughter, Miss Maude Harper. She was pronounced dead of a heart attack.

She leaves another daughter, Miss Minnie Harper, and a son. The Rev. Karl G. Newell will officiate at the services. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Col W. B. Gordon's Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Col. William B. Gordon, U. S. A., retired, who died Monday at Winter Haven, Fla., will be held tomorrow in West Point, N. Y.

The author of several textbooks on scientific subjects, he was professor of Natural and Experimental Philosophy at the Military Academy from 1901 until his retirement in 1917.

Ottinger Dies; Long New York G. O. P. Leader

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—Albert Ottinger, 59, twice attorney general of New York State and Republican opponent of Franklin D. Roosevelt when the latter was elected to his first term as Governor in 1928, died at his home here today after a heart attack.

Ottinger had maintained an active interest in politics until beset by ill health a few months ago.

The first Jew ever nominated for Governor in New York State, Ottinger had a distinguished career in State and national politics. During the Harding administration he served as an Assistant Attorney General under Harry M. Daugherty.

After his defeat by Roosevelt—by a margin of 26,064 votes—he resumed the practice of law in New York and was an early leader in the fusionist movement. At one time he proposed John D. Rockefeller, jr., as Republican-Fusion candidate for mayor.

In January, 1936, months before Alf M. Landon became a strong candidate for the Presidential nomination Ottinger launched an Eastern "Landon for President" boom. After the Kansan was nominated, Ottinger aided Eastern Republican leaders in the campaign.

A native of New York, Ottinger came from a long line of Jewish leaders—rabbis, lawyers and scholars.

He was elected to the State Senate in 1916. In 1921 he became assistant to Daugherty. He was elected New York attorney general in 1924 and re-elected in 1926.

He was unmarried. Surviving are three brothers, Leon, Lawrence and former Supreme Court Justice Nathan Ottinger, all of New York.

Joseph E. Angel Falls Dead Here

Joseph E. Angel, 70, retired chief clerk of the Southern Railway Co., died of heart disease yesterday after collapsing at Fifteenth and nounced dead at George Washington Hospital.

Mr. Angel's death came only two weeks after his retirement from the Southern Railway, an organization for which he worked more than a half-century.

Mr. Angel made his home here at 39 West Kirke street, Chevy Chase, Md. He was a Mason and an Episcopalian.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Heloise Ingersoll Angel; two daughters, Mrs. Summer Wood, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Hugh Leach, of Richmond, wife of the president of the Federal Reserve Board system for this area; four sisters, the Misses Mary, Nannie, Rebecca and Betty Angel, all of Richmond, and a brother, Richard G. Angel, also of Richmond. He also leaves two grandsons.

Funeral services will be held at his home at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Plans for burial had not been completed last night.

Mrs. F. L. Mortimer Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Catherine Jane Mortimer, of Hyattstown, Md., will be held this afternoon at 1 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ruth Mortimer Price, 8515 Cedar street, Silver Spring, Md. Dr. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Washington and the Rev. Dulaney of the M. E. Church south at Clarksburg, Md., will officiate and burial will be in the church cemetery at Hyattstown.

A native of Baltimore, Mrs. Mortimer moved to the upper section of Montgomery County about 43 years ago and has lived there ever since. She was a member of the Southern Methodist Church in Hyattstown.

In addition to her daughter, she is survived by her husband, Frank L. Mortimer, and a son, L. Curtiss Mortimer, of Silver Spring.

Mrs. Anna Pollok Funeral Is Held

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Connolly Pollok, Washington native and one of the first two domestic science teachers in the public schools here, were held yesterday at Grace Episcopal Church, New York.

Mrs. Pollok, who was 87, died in New York Wednesday. She was the daughter of Thomas Connolly, first chief examiner in the United States Patent Office. She went to New York many years ago to become an instructor at Columbia University Teachers' College. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Theodore Rhoades, of New York, and Miss Alice Pollok, of Glenn Dale, Md.

Maj. Mechling's Burial At Arlington Tomorrow

Interment services for Maj. Edward A. Mechling, Quartermaster Corps, U. S. Army, retired, who died Wednesday at Walter Reed Hospital, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will be Maj. J. Moultrie Ward, Maj. Elmer G. Thomas, Maj. Charles I. Bazire, Maj. Richard J. Marshall, Maj. Will R. White and Capt. Elsmere J. Walters.

Elizabeth Lee Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Miss Elizabeth Lee, 88, who died Wednesday morning, will be held at the Hysong funeral home, 1300 N street northwest, tomorrow at 4 p. m.

The Rev. William P. James, former student of Mrs. Lee, will officiate. Following the services the body will be sent to Atchison, Kans., where services will be held at the grave in the Mount Vernon Cemetery.

Born in McKeesport, Pa., Miss Lee accompanied her parents to the West and settled in Atchison. Educated in the public schools there, Miss Lee later graduated from the Kansas State Normal school. Miss Lee came to Washington 18 years ago.

She is survived by two nieces, with whom she made her home at 1322 Massachusetts avenue northwest. They are the Misses N. Mabel Haymon and Edwina F. Haymon.

Col. Gordon Rites Set at West Point

Funeral services for Col. William B. Gordon, United States Army, 85, retired, who died Tuesday in Winter Haven, Fla., will be held Saturday at West Point, N. Y.

Col. Gordon, who served 16 years on the faculty of the Military Academy, retired from active duty in 1917.

He is survived by his daughter, Mrs. G. G. Bartlerr, of Fair Haven, Mass., and two sons, Col. W. W. Gordon, of the Army War College, who is on duty in the office of the Adjutant General, and Maj. Philip Gordon, of 3110 Thirty-fourth street northwest, who has retired from active service.

Mrs. Mary O'Brien To Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Louise O'Brien, mother of Lieut. Robert C. Pearce, of the Metropolitan Police Traffic Division, will be held at 9 a. m. today at Notre Dame Catholic Church, Worcester, Mass.

Mrs. O'Brien, who was 65, died Tuesday at George Washington University Hospital. She had lived in Washington for three years, making her home with her son at 4340 Davenport street northwest.

Born in Worcester, Mrs. O'Brien was educated at the Sisters of Mercy Convent, Lachine, Quebec. Her first husband was Richard Spencer Pearce, professor of music at Wellesley, Mass. After his death she married Lawrence O'Brien and made her home in Lynn, Mass. She was prominent in Catholic activities. Surviving, besides Pearce, are her husband and a daughter, Mrs. W. R. Brown, and four grandchildren.

Vice Admiral Leys, Medical Officer, Is Dead

University of Pennsylvania Graduate Held High Posts in Navy.

Funeral services for Vice Admiral James Farquharson Leys, 70, retired Medical Corps officer, who died Wednesday at Philadelphia, will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Arlington Cemetery, the Navy Department announced yesterday.

A native of Pennsylvania, he was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania medical school in 1890 surgeon in the Navy three years later.

During the Spanish-American War he served on the dynamite ship Vesuvius and then was attached to the battleship New York at Vera Cruz in 1914.

Admiral Leys was surgeon of the Atlantic fleet in 1915 and 1916. He was senior medical officer of Boston Navy Yard in the World War and received a special letter of commendation for his services there.

After commanding the Naval Hospital, Newport, R. I., from 1919 until 1923, Admiral Leys was transferred to command of the Naval Hospital, Boston, Mass. Two years later he was ordered to duty as senior medical officer of the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Navy Yard, and remained in that post until his retirement.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Gwendoleyne M. Leys, of Bryn Mawr, Pa.

D. C. Society Turns Out To Greet Sonja Henie

Actress-Skater Met by Notables After Receiving Decoration of Order of St. Olav at Norwegian Legation; Luncheon Also Given.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Washington society "went Hollywood" yesterday. The crowd of youngsters gathered outside the Norwegian Legation shouting, "Sonja! Sonja! We want Sonja!" was not one whit more thrilled over the celebrated skater's visit to the Capital than were the social notables waiting in the second-floor drawing room and in pine-paneled library for her to appear.

They had come to see her presented with the decoration recently awarded her by the King of Norway, and for the time being dignified diplomats, staid Senators, debutantes and other residential Washingtonians were as excited about the event as a crowd of school children.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Photographers were crowded around the door to the dining room. Guests watched and waited with an air of expectancy one rarely sees at diplomatic parties. Newsreel cameramen arranged lights in the library and paced up and down the room. Mme. Morgenstierne, wearing a gold lame frock cut on simple lines, mingled with the guests, explaining that luncheon was late because "it took so long for Sonja to get through the crowd to come here from the airport . . . But she will be in soon."

Suddenly, social palaver ceased and a hush fell over the room. The Minister and Miss Henie, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Salma Henie, were entering.

Looking twice as lovely as any of her photographs, dimpling and beaming as if it were the happiest moment in her life, Miss Henie proceeded with the Minister across the room and stood before the tall portrait of King Haakon VII of Norway to receive the decoration.

She was a portrait herself. Her black velvet suit, fitted at the waist and with a band of silver fox outlining the tunic, was worn with a black towering turban. High-heeled patent pumps were on her dainty feet, two huge orchids were on her left shoulder and rhinestone bracelets, circling both wrists, matched the rhinestone pink at her neck.

Is Youngest Person To Receive the Award

The crowd pushed in closer. Cameras were primed and necks were craned as the affable Minister began his presentation speech. Briefly recounting the milestones in the carer of the girl who has skated her way to fame and fortune, he also mentioned her role as "an interpreter of the youth of Norway." At the conclusion of his speech he presented her with a diploma, in recognition of her "unique contribution as a sportswoman and artist," and a handsome medal—making her a Knight of the First Class of the Order of St. Olav, the youngest person ever to receive such an honor.

Cameras clicked and lights flashed as the crowd applauded. Miss Henie shook the Minister's hand and quietly thanked him, lifting her eyes for the first time. (During his entire speech she kept her eyes on the handsome white bearskin rug at her feet.)

The two children of the Counselor of the Legation and Mme. Galbe—Kari and Grete—approached Miss Henie and asked for autographs. The crowd edged in closer. Mme. Morgenstierne and the Minister made the introductions, and a sizable section of Washington society had one of its biggest thrills of the season.

Tea-time dainties on the candlelit dining room table, and champagne, served from huge silver trays, were passed through the crowd, while Miss Henie and her host and hostess were lured to the library to pose for more pictures, and to go through the ceremony all over again . . . for the benefit of the newsreel camera.

Meanwhile, the throng outside had stayed on . . . unmindful of time, calling for "Sonja . . . Sonja!" When she finally appeared on her way to the Shoreham—where a press conference and a buffet supper had been arranged in her honor by Samuel Wheeler and Arthur De Titta, of Twentieth Century-Fox — the crowd went wild. Sonja, who earlier had spent a whole hour getting from the airport to the legation . . . who had waved to them from the window of her car and from the second floor windows of the legation, was close enough to touch . . . to look at them with her smiling brown eyes . . . to write her name on countless pieces of paper thrust toward her.

But soon, all too soon, it was over. The idol of the hour was whisked away to keep her appointments at the Shoreham; to arrange for her departure late last night, after one of the most crowded days in her whole career. Guests fortunate enough to be at the legation reception yesterday, however, as well as those who saw her outside, will be talking about her for many a day. Washington residents, who see a celebrity every time they turn around, and Washingtonians who are celebrities themselves, doubtless will boast aplenty about meeting the Olympic champion . . . the youngest person (she's 23) ever to be awarded the decoration of the Order of St. Olav . . . the pretty, petite Sonja Henie.

Many Social Notables Attend the Reception

Among those glimpsed at the reception were the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, she in black with a wide-brimmed veiled hat; Mrs. Dean Acheson, in a red suit trimmed with Persian lamb and a small black hat, accompanied by her debutante daughter, Miss Jane Acheson, in brown; Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith talking with Miss Mary Patten; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, one of the most popular guests there; Mrs. Owen J. Roberts arriving with her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Roberts; the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, and the Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With, the latter wearing a smart black wool suit and a towering hat trimmed in red. Miss Nora de With, in a rose-colored dress with matching hat, came along a bit later.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming were there; also Herr and Frau Thomsen, of the German Embassy; Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Harold Simms, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland Frau Scholz, the First Secretary of the Legation and Mme. Irgens, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czechoslovakian Minister; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Roper, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Countess van Rechteren Limpburg and many others.

Helen Brereton Engaged to Wed

Navy Captain's Daughter and Robert D. Swezey Are Betrothed.

Capt. William Denny Brereton, U. S. N., and Mrs. Brereton, of 3711 Thirty-fourth street, have announced engagement of their daughter, Miss Helen Hyde Brereton, to Robert Dwight Swezey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dwight Swezey, of Newtonville, Mass. The marriage will take place in late April or early May.

Miss Brereton attended school in Florence, Italy, and is the sister of Miss Nancy Brereton, who made her debut here several years ago, and Miss Sally Brereton. Mr. Swezey attended Harvard College and Harvard law school, and is at present with the Government here.

Capt. Brereton is now in command of the U. S. S. Brooklyn. Mrs. Brereton hopes to go to California next summer to join her husband and follow his ship.

Lady Langford, who has a house in London, is a friend of the Princess Victor of Thurn and Taxis, who also arrived at the Mayflower yesterday with her son by a former marriage, Gerald Fitzgerald, of Ireland. The Princess and Mr. Fitzgerald are leaving today for Pennsylvania.

Shoreham Dinner Honors Gibbonses, Leaving for N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Gibbons, who are leaving Washington to make their home in New York, were guests of honor at a dinner given by friends in the blue room of the Shoreham last evening.

Mr. Gibbons has resigned his place with the Maritime Commission to become assistant treasurer of the United States Lines in New York.

At the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. James G. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald H. Helmbold, Mr. and Mrs. Roger P. Hollingsworth, Mr. and Mrs. William U. Kirsch, Mrs. Catherine Spooner and Dr. E. W. Corning.

Bachrachs Entertain At Home in Edgemoor

The first of three dinners planned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Bachrach took place last evening at "White Chimneys," their home in Edgemoor, Md. There were 10 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Bachrach will entertain again this coming Tuesday evening and also on Thursday, January 20.

Mrs. Whitten Entertains.

Mrs. Francis S. Whitten entertained at dinner last evening in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Dorothy Norris, of New York. Covers were laid for 12.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

ODDS AND ENDS: Sir Ronald Lindsay, whom the press insists on "retiring" every time he sets foot out of Washington, really expects to be with us until the spring of 1939. . . . Herbert Scholz, First Secretary of the German Embassy, is sailing for Berlin on a business trip. He expects to return in about four weeks. . . . The Immigration Commissioner and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling entertained at dinner Wednesday, among their guests being Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, and the Ambassador to Turkey and Mrs. John MacMurray. . . . Mrs. Noel Trentham entertained at luncheon yesterday at Pierre's. Mrs. Trentham, who is the wife of the Financial Counselor of the British Embassy, is the most natural person in Washington. After a four-week trip to Florida, the Trenthams will go to New York, and in March expect to go to the West Coast.

ALTHOUGH it got no publicity, the dinner at which the Japanese Ambassador and Mrs. Saito entertained the other evening (their first since the hostilities) went off very successfully, from all reports. In fact, the ranking guests, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring, lingered until 11 o'clock, half an hour after the usual dinner deadline.

Others present were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis Sayre, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; the Greek Minister; Mrs. Marriner Eccles, wife of the governor of the Federal Reserve Board; the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Thomsen; Mrs. McCook Knox and Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson.

The Japanese Embassy is one of the most beautiful in Washington with its cream-colored walls, deep blue rugs and objets d'art. There are many large and exquisite Japanese paintings, all of them executed especially for the embassy when it was built several years ago.

WITH ALL THE parties which make social life in the Capital a dizzy one, there nevertheless is one brand of entertaining which has of late been on the decrease—the "at homes" given by Senators' wives. Time was when every Thursday afternoon these official ladies would spread the dining room table with all the silver, load it with sandwiches, and then resignedly await the influx of most of Washington.

However, an "at home" given in a real spirit of hospitality was that yesterday of Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of the Senator from Missouri. As it was more or less an affair for ladies only, the Senator, unfortunately, was nowhere in evidence. The son of the late Champ Clark, for many years Speaker of the House, he is serving his first term in the Senate, although under his father he once was parliamentarian of the House. Besides being a lawyer and a Senator, Mr. Clark is the author of a book on John Quincy Adams and is preparing one on Andrew Jackson.

The Clark home is at 4922 Quebec street, beyond American University. Yesterday Mrs. Clark, wearing a simply made black frock with a diamond pendant, received her guests in the drawin room, with its pale green tinted walls and vases of calla lilies. Among those who called were the wives of several Senators, including Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Pat Harrison and Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy. Mrs. W. W. Marsh, mother of Mrs. Bennett, assisted in receiving. She has been making her home with her daughter for the past three years.

Assisting Mrs. Clark at the tea table were Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the junior Senator from Missouri, and the wives of the Representatives from that State. They were Mrs. Milton A. Romjue, Mrs. William Nelson, Mrs. Richard M. Duncan, Mrs. C. Jasper Bell, Mrs. Joseph B. Shannon, Mrs. Reuben T. Wood, Mrs. Dewey Short, Mrs. Clyde Williams, Mrs. Clarence Cannon, Mrs. Orville Aimmerman, Mrs. Thomas C. Hennings, jr., Mrs. C. Arthur Henderson and Mrs. John J. Cochran.

Others who assisted were Mrs. Harry Hewes, wife of the former Senator from Missouri; Mrs. Robert Cahill, Mrs. Edmund Horgan, Mrs. Albert Payne and Mrs. William A. Morgan.

Miss Flanders, Mr. Gurnee Wed

Of interest to Washington was the wedding on Wednesday in New York when Miss Virginia Lee Flanders, daughter of Mrs. Annis Chittenden Flanders, of that city, became the bride of Walter S. Gurnee, son of Mrs. Gurnee of New York and Oyster Bay, and the late Walter S. Gurnee. He is a nephew of Miss Bell Gurnee, of Washington.

The ceremony took place in the chantry of St. Thomas Church. The bride's only attendant was Mrs. Frederick L. Stagg, a sister of the bridegroom.

Matsons Recovering From Auto Injuries

Col. Joseph Matson, Coast Artillery Corps, retired, and Mrs. Matson, both well known in Washington, are recuperating from injuries suffered in an automobile accident near their home in Pasadena, Calif., shortly before Christmas.

One son, Edward Matson, was killed; the other, Donald Matson, was injured but has recovered sufficiently to return to Harvard Medical School.

Mrs. Matson is a sister of Mrs. Edward D. Vosbury, of Falls Church, Va. Miss Constance Connor Brown, formerly director of the Washington Studio of Theater Arts and now on the staff of El Capitan College of the Theater in Hollywood, Calif., spent her Christmas vacation in Pasadena in attendance on Col. and Mrs. Matson.

Mrs. Roper's 2 Nieces To Come Here Sunday

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper's nieces, Miss Margaret McKenzie, of North Carolina and Miss Mary Tennyson Fletcher, of South Carolina, will arrive Sunday to visit their aunt.

They will remain in Washington a week and will be present at Mrs. Roper's first "at home," January 19. A full program of parties is already being arranged for them.

Envoys of the World Dine at White House

Dinner at 8 at the White House last evening gathered virtually the whole round world into the brown panel State Dining Room. The occasion was one of the high points of the social season . . . the diplmatic dinner.

"Heirloom" china and crystal, culled from a dozen administrations were on the table. The Monroe epergnes, fairly toppling with hothouse fruit, flanked the Monroe mirrored plaque.

Decorations, as at the dinner for the Vice President and Mrs. Garner, were carnations, white Buddleia and maidenhair fern.

Following the dinner, which was served a la protocol, the ladies retired to the Blue Room for a few moments' chat with their hostess. As is the custom, the gentlemen remained with Mr. Roosevelt at the horseshoe table, sweeping up crumbs of international gossip.

Later, in the East Room, an evening's program of music furnished Rose Bampton, soprano; Joseph Bentonelli, tenor, and Catherine Littlefield, Carl Cleighton and Thomas Cannon, dancers, performing to full-sized salvos of applause. The music had a diplomatic slant, too, with Mr. Bentonelli singing old English madrigals, and Miss Bampton dipping into songs by Schumann and "Aida" music by Verdi. Ballet numbers were from Tschaikowsky and Ravel. And so, "Home, James," in a dozen different languages as ostrich-feathered full-dress hats and mink coats returned to their respective embassies and legations.

Covers Laid For 92 Guests

On the guest list were the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay; the Ambassador of Peru, Manual de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil; the Ambasador of Chile, Manuel Trucco; the Soviet Ambasador and Mme. Troyanovsky; the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito; the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Ertegun; the Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; the Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich; the Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios; the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff, and the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Chengting T. Wang.

Also the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, the Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, the Swedish Minister and Mme. Women's Clubs Offer President Aid on Boom

Co-operation for 'Prompt Program of Wise and Thoughtful Spending' Welcomed by Mr. Roosevelt in Reply to Board of Directors.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. Roberta Campbell, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, chairman of legislation, personally proffered to President Roosevelt yesterday morning at the White House the services of organized club women to the country "for the mobilization of the woman power of the country for a prompt program of thoughtful and wise spending."

The letter presented to President Roosevelt follows:

"By unanimous action of the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in session assembled, our organization voted to volunteer its services to the Nation, through the President of the United States for a mobilization of the woman power of the country for a program of thoughtful and wise spending.

"This voluntary offer was authorized to the end that the women of the country, representing such a large percentage of the buying power, may intelligently co-operate with both industry and labor for a patriotic economic stabilization.

"On behalf of our board, which is composed of the official representatives of club women from every State in the Union, we invite your consideration of this offer."

The President's reply to the directors, who are now meeting here, was received at federation headquarters late last evening. It said:

"I welcome the co-operation of your great organization to lead in 'mobilization of the woman power of the country for a prompt program of thoughtful and wise spending.'

"Such a program if wisely inaugurated and generally carried through will assuredly give a great impetus to the immediate buying power of the Nation.

"Co-operation of the women throughout the Nation means, in a great measure, co-operation of the consuming public. Wise spending, with due regard to the avoidance of too great commitment of future incomes on the part of the great spending public, will result in economic stabilization and marked benefits.

"I appreciate much your proffer to inaugurate this movement among the women of the Nation, which is bound to result in the improvement of our whole economic system."

Patronage System Scored by Speakers

The patronage system came in for sharp condemnation both in the report of Mrs. Lawson, as president of the federation and of Mrs. Jefferson D. Atwood, of Roswell, N. Mex., chairman of the department of American citizenship at the afternoon meeting of the board, which opened its sessions yesterday. Patronage was attacked again last night by John Calvin Brown, chairman of the National Reform Club, who spoke on the evening program and asserted that politics, privilege and organized groups are three forces in America that are stronger than our Democratic Government.

"The inefficiency and high cost of management of public affairs are due largely to our political patronage system; the increase of crime and corruption is often due to political immunities; and the wild reckless expenditure of public funds is due to the spending powers we have given to politics," said Mr. Brown.

He believes that the theory of Democracy that the powers to govern are vested in the people and the theory of capitalism that every one should have a right to accumulate and own property and choose his own vocation is fundamentally sound, but that abuses have grown up in the systems that prevent their functioning according to theory.

Mrs. Atwood, in her report asserted: "It is with no feeling of elation that we approach the subject of Civil Service, for today we are faced with pending legislation which if passed, will deal a great blow to the principle to which the general federation has committed itself, namely, that fitness and efficiency shall be the major considerations in the filling of public appointive positions."

Mrs. Atwood was particularly concerned with Senate bill 3022, introduced by Mr. McKeller, of Tennessee, in which provision is made that vacancies occuring in the offices of postmasters of the first, second and third classes shall be filled by appointment by the President with the approval of the Senate. She believes that this bill would place the appointment of postmasters back under the spoils system, and asked that the general federation make a formal protest against the McKeller bill and urge the passage of legislation that will extend and improve the merit system to cover practically all non-policy-determining posts.

Mrs. Lawson Urges Members to Act

Mrs. Lawson pointed out, in her report that early in December an S O S had been sent to the board members urging them to wire or write their Senators opposing the McKellar bill and urging adherence to the merit system and extension of the civil service plan.

Mrs. Lawson also turned attention to the study of international affairs. "No woman wants war, and if women have their way, there will be no more wars," she said. "We must take our part in international affairs, but we also have many problems at home which must be met. Women, we must save our country from those influences which mean political, economic, social and spiritual destruction, and offer ourselves and our organization as instrumentalities for the saving, safeguarding and upbuilding of our Nation and the world.

"Seventy-four clubs in foreign lands have joined with us in our study of treaties, which was authorized at the Tulsa Council meeting last spring. Dr. Herbert Wright, of Catholic University, will explain the work he has done in this matter in an address Friday evening."

A five-point plan for constructive action to obtain peace was listed in the report of Miss Alves Long, St. Louis, Mo., chairman of international relations.

She urged "legislation implementing the Stimson policy of territorial gains made by violation of treaties," revision of the neutrality act to refuse treaty violators supplies of key materials such as iron and oil as well as munitions; refusal of loans and credits for developing territory unjustly conquered as well as for prosecution of war, continuation of efforts to revive world trade, and insistence by citizens of a "clear consistent policy of defense" when the Government proposed increased armament.

Education against crime as a primary objective of the public schools was urged by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, chairman of education for the federation, in her report prepared for the morning session.

"It should be listed as even more important than reading, writing and arithmetic," she said. "There is something drastically wrong with the training of our young people with 20 per cent of the crime army made up of young people less than voting age.."

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, in addressing the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday morning, declared that the depression is due not so much to physical matters as to spiritual deficiencies—to a maladjustment of the spiritual and emotional phases of life. "We must think with our hearts as well as with our heads," the bishop said. "Souls are not saved by the arguments of the pulpit, but through the right kind of every-day living. No sphere of community life and welfare should be alien to us.

Officers of P.-T. A. Congress Enjoy a Tea Party

P.-T. A. Visitors Honored at Tea

Mrs. J. K. Pettengill Pours and Dr. Thomes W. Gosling Is Host.

Members of the executive committee of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, meeting at the Washington Hotel for their annual session this week, joined with members of the staff of national headquarters in a tea yesterday afternoon in the rose room of the Washington Hotel.

Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, national president, and Dr. Thomas W. Gosling, vice president, took the informal part of host in seeing that the guests were served. Mrs. Pettengill wore a gown of deep red crepe with full sleeves of cut velvet. Unlike many of the gatherings in Washington at tea time, this was distinguished by gay colors, worn by the guests, replacing the monotony of familiar black. Mrs. Pettengill's red gown was one of ten observed in different shades of the same color. There were also blues, browns and greens suggestive of the approach of spring.

Mrs. Pettengill presented to the staff members, the various officers here for the executive meeting. Among them were: Mrs. John E. Hayes, of Twin Falls, Idaho; Mrs. L. A. Mailhes, of Shreveport, La.; Mrs. Chris Hirning, of Mitchell, S. Dak.; Mrs. William Kletzer, of Portland, Oreg.; Mrs. C. H. Turner, of Redondo Beach, Calif.; Mrs. W. A. Hastings, of Madison, Wis.; Mrs. James Sheehan, of Kentucky; Mrs. Warren Mabrey, of Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Dr. William T. Sanger, of Richmond, the treasurer; Dr. Ada Hart Arlitt, of Cincinnati; William McKinley Robinson, of Kalamazoo, Mich.; Mrs. Fred M. Raymond, chairman of publications, who is here from Grand Rapids; Mrs. William T. Bannerman, of this city, chairman of legislation; Dr. Gosling and William Bristow, general secretary of the congress.

Woodridge Fathers Assume Command at P.-T. A. Meeting

This is the season for Fathers' Nights at the meetings of the various parent-teacher associations in the District. A town hall discussion of "Nonresident Enrollment in the District Schools" was a feature of the program last night at the Woodridge Parent-Teacher Association, with the fathers in charge.

The husbands of the women who hold office in the association took their places for the evening. John M. Robey served as president in place of his wife; Frank Edwards, as secretary; W. B. Putnam, treasurer; Freeman Weiss, chairman of membership; Howard Sullivan, of student aid; Harrold Brooks, as refreshment chairman; Robert Grigg, as chairman of hospitality, with Dr. E. Mollari, Richard Davis, R. Hunke and Robert Inglars as members of his committee.

The men also acted as room "mothers," welcoming the parents as they visited the classrooms before the meeting to inspect the work done by the pupils and confer with the teachers.

The town hall was conducted by Prof. Charles Richardson of the University of Maryland as moderator. On the panel were Robert J. Cottrell, executive secretary of the Board of Trade; Ralph Powers, of Hyattsville, who presented the Maryland angle of the subject; Chester Davis, who presented the facts in the Kemp case from the office of the corporation counsel, and Ward Keesecker, who presented facts on the situation in other States.

A father's night program was presented at Wheatley School on Wednesday night. This was a panel on the school and the community. There also, the men served in their wives' places as officers for the evening. Martin Johnson acted as president; William Lee, treasurer; J. Bryant, secretary, and Foster Touant, head of the Fathers' Council, was in charge of the program.

Speakers included Elwood Baker, former executive secretary of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers; the Rev. Wilson Holder, of Centennial Baptist Church; Dr. L. Calvin, medical inspector; John Nelson, director of the Northeast Boys' Club; George Cleary, president of the Trindad Citizens' Association; W. I. Cleveland, of the American Automobile Association; Byron Brooks, F. Reese, of the Community Center; Harry English, also of the Community Center; A. Marseglia, who spoke on the influence of music; Charles Emigh, on dancing, and Lynn Drake, of the Boy Scouts.

Officers Visit O. E. S. Session

Officers and the General Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star were welcomed by Grand Matron Elizabeth W. Rhine at the opening of the forty-second annual session of the Grand Chapter of the District of Columbia last night at the Mayflower Hotel. Presiding with Mrs. Rhine was Grand Patron Victor B. Rench.

The reception was in the ballroom of the hotel, with 700 members of the order and guests attending. The guests of honor from the General Grand Chapter were Mrs. Anna Smalley, matron; Frank Lynn, patron; Mrs. Minnie E. Keyes, secretary, and Mrs. Flora E. Campbell, treasurer. Grand Chapter officers from other jurisdictions and many past grand officers, who are residents of Washington, also attended.

The Eastern Star choral unit sang several numbers and two soloists, Mrs. Estelle Gates and Richard Titlow also contributed to the musical program. A memorial service was conducted for members who had died during the year, and reports of the grand matron and patron of the District completed the evening's business.

Tonight there will be election of officers and committee reports which will occupy the entire meeting. The installation of the officers will take place Saturday night, followed by a banquet in the Mayflower ballroom.

The present associate matron, Mrs. Helen D. Robbins, will succeed Mrs. Rhine as grand matron, and Harry J. Schmidt, the present associate grand patron, will succeed Mr. Rench. The offices in the Order of the Eastern Star are filled by advancing the line.

Mrs. Howard to Speak At Congressional Club

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard will address the Congressional Club this afternoon at the second of its weekly teas, speaking on "Present Indications."

Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the club, will receive and Mrs. Ralph Church will have charge of the program. Those at the tea tables will include Mrs. James A. Meeks, Mrs. Earl C. Michener, Mrs. Henry Maverick, Mrs. John A. Martin.

Those on the hospitality committee are Mrs. Frank E. Hook, Mrs. George H. Mahon, Mrs. Cassius C. Dowell, Mrs. Alfred J. Elliott.

C. A. R. May Soon Have National Home of Own

Mrs. William H. Pouch, U. S. Chairman, Describes Long-Delayed Plans to Meeting of Executive Committee Here.

The Children of the American Revolution will have a national headquarters of their own if plans discussed at yesterday's meeting of the executive committee are carried out. The ambition of the society, cherished for many years and put aside until the D. A. R. and S. A. R. buildings had been largely relieved of debt, will be realized in the comparatively near future, according to Mrs. William H. Pouch, national president.

Mrs. Pouch, who was here from New York to preside at the session, announced that the fund to which the various chapters have been contributing now amounts to $7,580. Some years ago, when Memorial Continental Hall was under construction, the C. A. R. gave $2,000 the entire amount of its building fund at that time, for a room there. The society then began again to accumulate money toward a building of its own and the project will be seriously undertaken within the next few months.

Children of the societies throughout the country have been saving dimes on ten of the national holidays. They also raise funds by selling candy and by benefit entertainments.

Their convention this year will open April 25 and the program will include the dramatization of projects including the planting of penny pines and of Constitution trees at the D. A. R. mountain schools; planting of gardens under the supervision of the D. A. R. Garden Clubs; sending seeds to mountain schools; collecting coupons for laundry equipment at Tammassee and contributing to the C. A. R. building fund. A young movie star—whose name has not been announced—will be here as a guest.

Mrs. Pouch yesterday read a letter from Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, saying the Navy would gladly co-operate with the society in its program of patriotic education, linked with a study of the naval vessels named for Revolutionary heroes or events. One ship will be assigned to each State and the Children of the American Revolution there will receive the ships' papers and cruise letters and other information, giving a current tie-up to their interest in the historic character or event responsible for the vessel's name. Mrs. B. Harrison Lingo, chairman of patriotic education for the national society is in charge of this activity.

Mrs. Ryland Bryant, registrar, reported 174 new members added during the month and Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, treasurer, announced 485 had been sent to Tammassee.

Among other national officers and department chairmen at the session were Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, organizing secretary; Mrs. Charles S. Groves, curator; Mrs. Amos A. Fries, chairman of press relations; Mrs. Swann Sinclair, of Virginia, past president; Mrs. Gory Hogg, State director, from West Virginia; Mrs. James Henry Harper, District of Columbia, State president; Mrs. Harold B. Gardner, of New Rochelle, N. Y., music chairman; Mrs. Donald Earle, chairman of exhibits for the convention, and Mrs. Eldridge Lee Myers, chairman of pages.

D. A. R. Chapter Will Give Party

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 13.

ALICE HUGHES.

THERE'S BEEN a lot of leg-staring going on these last few weeks. Not for the purpose of seeing whether they are eligible for a front line chorus, but to determine whether or not they are wearing silk or lisle stockings. That this recent rush to cotton may have something to do with a Japanese boycott is not under discussion here. What seems likely to happen, however, is that for the first time in 25 years cotton stockings are going to clothe a great many American legs again. Last March there were not more than five manufacturers making cotton stockings in America. Now there are over a hundred. In 1937 our 65,000,000 American women wore 700,000,000 pairs of silk stockings, full-fashioned and seamless. No one took the trouble to count cotton and wool stockings, there were so few worn.

This year will tell a different story, for every important maker of silk stockings is now rushing complete sizes, styles and colors on lisle hosiery, and New York women are buying them like mad. You don't have to hate Japan to wear lisle stockings. They happen to look grand with tweeds and woolens and with cotton and linen clothes. Cotton lisle stockings still have to travel far, however, to compete in beauty with silk stockings, which are one of the two perfected products the United States can boast of. The other is American bathroom plumbing, and both are greatly coveted and admired by foreigners.

America has the world's greatest cotton production, but not the finest. That comes, just as it did in biblical times, from Egypt's banks of the Nile. That thread is longer and finer than ours, and so the lisle stockings we import from England, made of Egyptian cotton, are finer and much costlier than ours. Oddly enough, the impetus of this Japanese silk boycott may change the entire nature of this country's cotton growers. Until now they have been encouraged to grow Delta cotton, which is fairly course. Only a few plantations in Georgia and the Carolinas have planted the finer Sea Island cotton. I know that a campaign is afoot this moment to get planters to plant seeds of finer cotton, providing our weather conditions permit.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Lunching at "21" the other day with one of my former Columbia School of Journalism classmates, now grown affluent on movie money, she pulled out a list of several hundred movie stars' names available for loan to other studios. After each name is listed the salary she commands. Highest-priced was Ann Dvorak, who wants $10,000 a picture. Sounds like a lot, maybe, but in movie money, it's only peanuts! Nancy Carroll can be had for $10,000 a picture. Mary Brian asks $1,250 a week, plus transportation from New York. Betty Furness will work for $2,000 a picture; Helen Twelvetrees for $1,000, and so on down to Gail Sheridan, who'll take $300 a week, mere chicken feed!

Went to see the opening of "Right This Way," which has Tamara in it. Tamara is the pretty Russian peasant girl who sang "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" so appealingly in "Roberta." She still sings appealingly, but unfortunately in plays in which she is required to act. If she would only just sing!

Python Accents for Mid-Season Elegance

Post Staff Photos.

Cycle Brings Return Vogue Of Snakeskin

This is one of a series on how to enliven winter costumes.

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

SNAKESKIN has returned to vogue, with accent on python! In the several cycles of fashion that are recurring this season with unprecedented popularity is the snakeskin accessory. Snakeskin shoes, handbags and belts are making their debut in the spring and summer fashion scheme of things and Washington stores and shops already are exploiting them as a distinctive mid-season clothes tonic.

If you are looking for a dramatic way to give your jaded winter wardrobe a new lease on life, here is one clever answer. With an all-black frock which was chic at the beginning of the season but seems quite lifeless now, try substituting a pair of python shoes for the sombre black affairs you have been wearing. Or, if you do not care about dramatizing your feet, wear black shoes and add a python belt for striking accent; this could be matched with a bag of the same material.

Black is not the only background color which furnishes an ideal foil for snakeskin accessories. Brown, wine tones, blues, gray, beige and deep green combine smartly with the mottled python. Another interesting feature about purchasing snakeskin shoes now—they will be equally smart to wear with spring suits and frocks and are being sponsored by stylists as a clever accent for all-white costumes next summer.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the specious advice offered in your column of January 10 to "M. D.," I am willing to gamble that you have no daughters of your own. . . . You have only to open your eyes to see the consequences of the course you advocate. Or do you ever open them? The high school which my daughter attends recently has had experience with three unwed mothers of the teen age whose downfall is the direct result of following the very course you advocate.

• • • •

The divorce courts are so crowded here in the District that the cases filed today may not be reached for two years, because of the congestion. What sort of cases? Mainly those resulting from young, inexperienced girls rushing into matrimony before they knew what their real tastes and likes consisted of. And for every case filed there, there probably are half a dozen equally unhappy cases which are not filed.

• • • •

Promiscuous petting is well-nigh universal amongst youngsters of that age, leading in literally thousands of cases to immorality. What is there in it for the girl? A short period of illicit thrills and then a status, continuing for the rest of her life, of undesirability to men who really seek wives in the full meaning of the word. She is damaged goods to those worth having.

• • • •

And it is just such ill-considered writings as yours that constitute the prime reason for such conditions. You would do well to advocate maximum freedom in all things that are reparable and strict parental discipline in all things that lead to a girl's irreparable downfall. Infants cannot play with matches, and girls of teen age cannot play safely with emotions and impulses whose dangers they do not understand. The course which all wise and loving parents would advocate, I feel confident, is one that would guard their girls from such dangers until they themselves can appreciate the hazard. Better the loss of a few dates and good times now, and a few tears, than the damaged-goods status to which lack of restraint too often leads.

• • • •

You are not helping parents who really love their daughters and wish to guide them. My own daughter has no end of good times and is given all the freedom she could wish for and asks for, where the dangers are not of the kind that lead to immorality. She stays until the party is over—when her mother knows who gives the party and who is there. Then she comes straight home. She has no dates for unchaperoned automobile rides, goes to no cocktail parties, and so far as we know, is not exposed to situations where young men can attempt liberties with her.

• • • •

Her mother and I make it our business to set our faces against these dangers. On two occasions when she has wanted to go on parties open to question, her mother refused permission, not unkindly, but with a sympathetic explanation of the reasons for refusing. She does not know it, but her mother from the background watches her every step now as carefully as she watched her first awkward attempts at walking. As a result, the girl is one of the most popular in the community, is happy, carefree and joyous. I do not know where she would be, however, if we should have set our compass by your false bearings. I think you are dead wrong and that "M. D." is dead right.

M. D.

Let's Hear From Youth.

DEAR M. D.: In spite of your bitter attack upon my really rather conservative suggestions that "adolescents have need to be treated as trustworthy human beings," and that "it is as necessary for youth to have a certain amount of social freedom as it is for a bird to be pushed from the nest and made to fly," and that "the best way to protect a child from making defiling social mistakes is to instill in him, from infancy, an esthetic appreciation of all that is fine in human beings and human relationships," I do not believe our fundamental philosophies concerning the ultimate aims of child-rearing differ so greatly.

• • • •

I believe we differ principally on one other point—namely, my intuitive conviction that the average boy and girl is essentially decent in impulse and conduct; and your intuitive conviction (or so it would appear from your foregoing letter) that the majority of them are just the reverse; that given an inch of freedom, they will promptly take a mile of license.

• • • •

When I see parents frothing at the mouth in mingled fear and rage at hearing a self-respecting amount of social freedom advocated for youth, I wonder just what misuse of similar privilege they made in their salad days, or would have made, given the chance. I wonder, too, if their own lack of balance and self-control—so abundantly evident in debate—isn't largely responsible for their unflattering estimate of youth's self-governing abilities.

• • • •

It occurs to me that it might be a good idea to let youth itself answer the moot question posed January 10 by "M. D.," namely: "How much freedom should an adolescent girl have in this age of night clubs, cocktail parties and automobiles?" (The adolescent girl in question being 18 years of age, whose parents themselves call for her at 11:30 p. m. to bring her home from parties.) For my part, I confess an open mind on the subject. And I have, as well, great faith in the intelligence, integrity, right-mindedness and moral conservatism of properly educated modern youth. So, young men and young women from 17 to 23, here is your chance to speak up on a subject that seems to have your elders pretty thoroughly baffled. What have you to say, for or against "the social freedom that prevails today?" M. H.

Maryland Dishes Featured in This Week's Contest

Do you thrill to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland?" Do you feel that even in the culinary world, this famous State has made a real contribution? If so, then you were probably one of the many who wrote to The Post asking that the Favorite Recipe Contest feature Maryland recipes.

This week is Maryland week. Any recipe that has originated in Maryland or been associated with some famous dinner or historic event in the State is eligible in the contest.

It may be a recipe that has been taken from one of the many old Maryland cookbooks—and there seems to be one published including recipes dating back to the seventeenth century. It may be modernized versions of these recipes. Any Maryland dish deserves recognition.

The dead line for entering recipes in this contest is January 22. Write your recipe clearly, inclose name and address, and mail to Jean Green, Post Food Editor, before this time.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Wide Hipline No Longer Inevitable as Years Pass 40 Mark.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE USED to think that a spreading hipline was inevitable and accepted it with resignation. But no longer! There are so many examples of smart women who never lose their figures that we know it is possible to have a beautiful figure at 40, 50 or 60!

You may lose your figure because you are too tired to exercise, too busy, or too lazy. Regular exercise helps to relieve fatigue and will gradually increase your store of energy. Good muscle tone is a factor in vitality. When you are tired your exercises should not be strenuous but they must be regular. A few stretching exercises are the best thing in the world for tense muscles and frazzled nerves. Follow the stretching with a few well directed hip exercises.

Busy as we are in this work-a-day world, there is not one of us who cannot take five to ten minutes a day for exercise. Just that small amount of daily exercise will keep your figure in trim.

If you are a lazybones and have to browbeat yourself into taking exercise, then you must make exercise a habit that is never broken even for a single day. If you skip a day it is doubly hard to get back into the swing.

The type and amount for hip exercise needed depends on your figure. Rolling is the best expedient for firming flabby fat and smoothing the hipline: With several excess inches to be removed from the hipline, however, you must resort to stronger measures. The best reducers are high backward kicks, which firm the gluteal muscles of the buttocks, or wide circles with the legs to tone the gluteal and thigh muscles.

Try this exercise to streamline the hips.

Movement—Bring one leg up first to a right angle, then cross over and touch the toes to the fingers of the outstretched hand on the other side. The leg is first raised to right angles to bring the abdominal muscles into the exercise. Alternate legs, repeating eight times.

Home Comforts For Air Travel, Her Objective

Helen Stansbury Is Making Aviation "Woman Conscious."

AVIATION may be a business which has been developed by men, but if it is going to appeal to women it's got to change its ways, says Miss Helen Stansbury, the only woman executive in American aviation.

When Miss Stansbury went in to see Harold Crary, vice president in charge of advertising for United Air Lines, about a job she said quite frankly, "I don't know a thing about your business but you are doing it wrong." She then explained that women are distinctly not interested in the weight, wingspread or capacity of aircraft, but are attracted by such subjects as the color scheme in which the great cabin airliners are decorated and whether the food is hot.

As a result she has been traveling around the country ever since explaining to women—and men, too, for that matter—that plane travel is not only the quickest and cleanest, but also the most comfortable and home-like.

Miss Stansbury points out that nobody romps up and down the aisle of an airplane hawking magazines, candy and cigarettes. All these are to be had aboard airliners, but no effort is made to "sell" the passengers. All they have to do is reach for a magazine or cigarette as would be done at home, she explains.

Men Like Comfort.

In her travels about the United States, Miss Stansbury says she has found that recently men as well as women have been interested in such things as comfort and safety in aircraft.

Answering queries on these subjects, she points out that four insurance companies have recently cut their travel insurance rates on scheduled airlines until they are now no higher than those charged railroad passengers.

As to comfort, Miss Stansbury has frequently referred to the luxurious furnishings of transport liners which, "thank heaven, are not upholstered in plush." Hassocks, she says, "are provided for each person," and asks, "Is the same true in your house?"

The greatest aviation advance in recent years, so far as women's comfort is concerned, she believes, has been in the service of food on scheduled airliners. No longer are large ham or cheese sandwiches accompanied by leathery potato chips passed out in containers to scared passengers. Instead, a hot four-course meal is served on portable tables which fit across the arms of the seats in the planes.

Finally, the newest development in air travel—sleepers—is sure to attract considerable patronage from women, Miss Stansbury thinks. She points out that the movement of a plane can't be noticed at all in the sleepers. "And best of all," she concludes, "there is a window beside the upper berths of airsleepers."

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Young parents think their own problems with the food habits of children never have troubled anyone else before. But no household has ever sailed the sea of life without facing these troubles. The child who never eats between meals, who never spoils his appetite with candy, who never refuses to eat, who has no food dislikes—if you have that kind of a child in your home, then you really ought to worry because that child is sick. That is the angel child, and angel children are hateful little objects.

So far as the candy question is concerned, children do not need candy or pure sugar, so long as they have the well chosen diet mentioned yesterday. And if they have the articles we named—milk, eggs, vegetables, fruits and cereals—the candy won't hurt them. Candy has no minerals nor vitamins and blunts their appetites. But they all eat some candy, and no one would want a child that didn't like candy.

The family attitude toward children's food habits is the most important element in the problem, and young parents may have to re-educate themselves to like simple dishes during the formative years of their children. For many years the food an individual eats is conditioned by what the parents eat, so they should broaden their tastes and have a wide variety on the table. From observation of those who grew up under such a system, I advocate the "eat what is put before you and learn to like it" rule. The parents who give out those injunctions are doing far more for their children than the "Oh! let the poor dear eat what he wants to" school.

Children refuse food because it is monotonous, or poorly prepared or unappetizing, or because they have been pampered. Rarely the reason they refuse it is because they are sick or below par. So the real responsibility of food habits, good or bad, is on the parents—on the way the food is cooked or the example of a finicky appetite in one of the grownups at the table.

Rath's Spiced Ham 12 oz. can 31c
The most enticing flavored ham you ever tasted. Chill thoroughly in the can, open, then slice to suit.

Wyman's Blueberries 20 oz. can 17c
Big fellows, sweet and flavorful, packed at the peak of ripeness. Serve as a breakfast fruit or in a pie. Wyman's foods are noted for their goodness.

Treesweet Orange Juice 12 oz. can 10c
Delicious—To enhance the flavor, pour the juice back and forth several times to replace the air lost in the canning process.

Dole Natural Unsweetened Pineapple 30 oz. can 22c
Packed from fully field ripened fruit . . . fruit that is at the peak of its sugar content. A flavor that will appeal to you.

Hunt's Tomkrout Cocktail

If you are one who wants the benefits of sauerkraut juice and yet do not particularly like its flavor, try this. It is a blend of tomato and sauerkraut juices in the proper proportions to produce a palatable, nutritious beverage. 12-oz. can 9c.

Hunt's Supreme Apricot Nip

Not to be confused with a fruit juice. This nip is the whole fruit reduced to liquid form. Only the seeds, skins and heavy fiber have been removed. You get all of the important vitamins and nutritive elements of the whole fruit. 12-oz. can 9c.

Wet Shrimp

Shrimp cocktail at home is simple with a can of wet shrimp on the shelf. Chill thoroughly or preferably serve nested in cracked ice together with a sauce made of Stokely chili sauce to which a dash of horseradish has been added. 5¼ oz. can 18c.

Gold Cup Pure Maple Syrup

Genuine maple syrup boiled down from pure maple sap. Not a maple flavored syrup. You've probably been paying much more than our low price of 35c for a full pint bottle.

Dude Ranch Peas

Very distinctive, huge in size—the largest peas grown. For something especially nice try a can. They are pleasingly tender despite their size. Our low price for 17-oz. cans, 2 for 25c.

St. Francis Nectarine Halves

Fancy halves grown in California. The nectarine is a variety of peach, having a smooth skin like that of a plum, but with a seed like that of a peach. A delightful flavor. Particularly delicious in a salad or as a dessert. Our low price, 30-oz. can 23c.

Sunblown Apple Juice

Drink an apple! This is the highly refined juice of the finest fruit. Nothing added, nothing taken away, but certain solids. Contains all of the valuable food elements of whole, ripe apples.

Lone Palm Guava Jelly

A particularly fine quality guava jelly that you'll enjoy eating. Makes a delicious spread — also very pleasing spread on sandwiches made with Crosse & Blackwell Date and Nut Bread and Philadelphia Cream Cheese. Make triple deckers with the jelly on one side and cheese on the other. The jelly sells at 15c for an 8-ounce glass.

Ribbon Brand Sour Pitted Cherries

An old standby that we've sold for years. Makes delicious cherry pies. Our low price 15c for a full No. 2 can. Why not a cherry pie for dinner tonight?

The Quality Trio From the Land O'Lakes

A name that you've associated with the finest quality in butter is now obtainable on two other items equally as fine, Land O'Lakes milk and Land O'Lakes cheese.

Land O'Lakes Sweet Cream Butter
One of the most popular and largest selling butters in America. A butter that makes everything taste better.
It is churned from fresh, sweet cream, the kind you use in your coffee. The first butter to receive the approval of the American Medical Association.

Land O'Lakes Milk

From the rich dairy regions of Wisconsin. This fine evaporated milk needs only the addition of water to bring it back to the richness of whole milk. A product on a par with its famous predecessor, Land o' Lakes Butter.

Land O'Lakes Cheese
Aged for months to give it that cured, snappy flavor you recognize in finer cheeses. However, Land O' Lakes is not an extremely sharp cheese, sort of a compromise between mild and sharp.

Rice Topped By Peaches Wins Award

Fruit Poached in White Wine Gives Accent to Dessert.

By Nancy Ellis.

RICE snowballs with peaches poached in wine is a dish that lifts rice into the class of glorified desserts. The smooth, fluffy texture of rice is contrasted with tart crushed pineapple. When whipped cream is added the combination becomes most pleasant to the palate. Served with halves of peaches simmered in wine, the dessert becomes suitable for the finest dinner. The flavorful peach gives a not-too-sweet accent to the dessert and makes it an ideal finale to a heavy meal.

This recipe wins the first award of $3 in our current recipe contest for favorite dishes made with rice. It was submitted by Mrs. A. A. Currier, 3426 Sixteenth street northwest.

RICE SNOWBALLS WITH PEACHES POACHED IN WINE.

¾ cup of flaky cooked rice
1-3 cup of canned crushed pineapple, partly drained
6 large halves of canned peaches, drained
½ cup of whipping cream
1 cup of white wine
3 tablespoons of sugar

Dissolve the sugar in the pineapple and combine with the rice. Fold in the stiffly beaten cream and chill. Poach the peaches with the wine in a small saucepan for five minutes. Remove the peaches and chill. Mix the peach syrup with wine and chill. For each serving fill and heap a peach half with the rice fluff and pour over it the peach syrup and wine. Top with a maraschino cherry if desired.

The second award was given Mrs. F. Cochrane, 124 Hesketh street, Chevy Chase, Md. The smooth texture of a creamy rice sauce seasoned to perfection makes an excellent combination with either fresh or canned shrimp. It is a dish suitable for a luncheon or a main dish on Friday.

RICE AND SHRIMP DISH.

2 cups of cooked rice
6 tablespoons of catsup
1 large can of shrimp or 1½ to 2 cups
1 teaspoon of Worchestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon of tabasco sauce
1 pint of cream

Break up the shrimp. Mix all ingredients together well and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about one hour.

A rice and pork chop casserole is a nutritious main dish for a quickly prepared meal. Miss Amy A. Bopst, 800 North Market street, Frederick, Md., says that this dish is a favorite with her family. The pork chops contribute protein, the rice starch and the tomatoes and green pepper the protective foodstuffs now considered so important.

RICE AND PORK CHOP CASSEROLE.

6 lean pork chops
6 tablespoons of raw rice
1 large onion
3 cups of hot water
2 tomatoes, or about that amount of stewed tomatoes
1 green pepper
¼ teaspoon of pepper
3 teaspoons of salt.

Sear the chops quickly on both sides in a frying pan. Remove to a casserole. On each chop place one tablespoon of rice, a slice of onion, a slice of tomato or equivalent in stewed tomatoes, and two strips of green pepper. Sprinkle over all salt and pepper. Add hot water. Cover and bake three to three and a half hours in an oven set at 350 degrees.

A recipe from New Orleans wins the fourth prize. These Creole cakes have a spicy taste and are to be served with a topping of raspberry. The recipe was submitted by Mrs. S. M. Seaton, 3002 Adams street northwest. They are unusual and will bring you many compliments at your next bridge party or guest dinner.

CREOLE RICE CAKES.

2-3 cup of rice
1 pint of scalded milk
½ cup of sugar
½ teaspoon of salt
Few grains of cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg
3 eggs
3 teaspoons of finely chopped almonds
½ teaspoon of orange extract

Stir the rice and salt into the scalded milk. Simmer slowly until the milk is absorbed and the rice is tender. Remove from the fire. Add the sugar, egg yolks beaten together and the flavoring and spices.

Line patty pans with rich pastry flour rolled ⅛ inch thick. Fold the stiffly beaten egg whites into the rice and pour into the patty pans. Sprinkle with almonds and bake until firm and browned. This will be about 30 minutes. Have the oven temperature at 350 degrees. Cool and ice with raspberry frosting.

VEGETABLE AND RICE CASSEROLE.

1 cup of rice
2 tablespoons of butter
2 cups of boiling water
1 teaspoon of salt
1 can of ready-to-serve vegetable soup
½ cup of grated cheese
½ cup of buttered crumbs

Brown the rice in the hot melted butter. Add two cups of boiling water and one teaspoon of salt. Boil until nearly tender. Add the soup and cheese and turn into a casserole. Top with fine, well-buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Serve hot.

Mrs. Ontrich's Cookie Baking Proves Boon to Her Friends

Most Women Make Mistake in Not Testing Batter, She Says; Uses Eye Dropper to Obtain Right Tint for the Frosting.

By Jean Green.

FRIENDS of Mrs. Paul Ontrich, 1719 Varnum street northwest, are glad she has a hobby. Her hobby is making cookies. In spite of her many activities Mrs. Ontrich has found time to become a connoisseur of cookies and an expert at making them. Nearly everywhere she goes she finds a new idea to incorporate into her art. Every holiday and her children's birthdays give her an opportunity to try out her technique.

Mrs. Paul Ontrich, 1719 Varnum street northwest, has made the artistic decoration of cookies and party refreshments her hobby.

Out of her vast experience Mrs. Ontrich has acquired information that may be of benefit to women who are not yet cookie experts. "Most women slip in not testing the cookie batter," she said. "Even though I have made cookies a hundred times, I always bake a sample of them before I am sure that the consistency is correct. I have found that the size of the egg makes a great difference. Even when I follow the recipe to the letter, if the egg is large, I may need more flour."

She's Careful of Frosting.

"One of the big mistakes beginners make in decorating is to make the frosting too dark," she continued. "I think experts agree that for decorating purposes pastel colors are more attractive. In blending colors, I add only a few drops of coloring at a time and blend well. In this way I obtain the exact shade desired. I use an eye-dropper for adding the coloring, and keep several on hand, so that I have one for each color and need not change."

Mrs. Ontrich at first found it difficult to obtain a fluffy frosting that could be used successfully in decorating and at the same time was creamy and rich to the taste. She has found that cookies decorated with the usual seven-minute frosting look pretty but do not taste as well. After much experimenting she has evolved a recipe that is made with egg white and sugar, but includes a small amount of butter to make it soft and pliable.

Must Work Quickly.

As to technique, she says, "I find it necessary to work quickly in decorating; so I have each frosting tinted, blended and placed in small bowls before I start work. Then if there is some delay, I cover each with heavy waxed paper or one of the new transparent covers. This prevents them from crusting on top."

Mrs. Ontrich feels that each color demands a special flavor. Yellow frosting is flavored with lemon; pink with almond or vanilla, blue with almond, green with almond or mint. Chocolate frosting is often flavored with coffee to make a Mocha flavor, but chocolate is not practical for decorating. Cookies can be dipped in the chocolate, she points out, and then rolled in ground nuts.

Here is the recipe that she uses for all her decorated cookies:

(Ornamental Tea Cookies.)
½ pound butter
2-3 cup sifted sugar
1 unbeaten egg
2½ cups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon almond flavor

Cream butter. Add sugar and continue to cream well. Add egg and mix well. Sift dry ingredients. Add with almond flavoring. Put into cookie press and press on an ungreased cookie sheet about 3 inches apart. Bake in an oven set at 400 degrees for 10 minutes.

FROSTING.

1 egg white
1 cup confectioners' sugar
1 tablespoon soft butter
Flavoring
Coloring

Put the egg white, sugar and soft butter into an electric beater and beat until it stands in peaks. Flavor and color.

Here are some ways that Mrs. Ontrich observes holidays in her cookie making. For Thanksgiving the nut cookies are rolled like pecans and indented with a pointed toothpick to give the appearance of pumpkins. She decorates the top with a slice of candied peel. Her cookies at Valentine's Day are heart shaped and decorated with pink roses. For Christmas, stars are used with a small red poinsettia on each star point. Since one of her daughters observes her birthday on Valentine's Day this is really a double occasion and the birthday cake is usually a queen of hearts with cinnamon hearts across head and skirt. The small favors are cup cakes, decorated.

At a recent tea Mrs. Ontrich gave in honor of Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, a flower motif was used in decorating refreshments. Here is her menu:

AFTERNOON TEA.

Assorted sandwiches
Banana bread Orange bread
Candied fruit peel
Salted almonds
Flower-decorated cookies
Flower-decorated mints

Market Tips

Canned orange juice contains the same valuable protective food elements found in the fresh orange juice. It is now available vacuum packed and gains zip and additional flavor if aerated before serving. This is done by pouring the juice from one container to the other to regain the air lost during canning.

New to many housewives in Washington is the combination of tomato and sauerkraut juice. The combination has an excellent flavor and combines two very healthful juices. The sauerkraut juice, which is highly recommended along with buttermilk by many nutritionists, gains a more subtle flavor when combined with the tomato. The juice is found in most Washington stores.

Washington markets have many reasonably priced fruits and vegetables. Among them are apples, bananas, oranges and grapefruit. Cranberries are still available and strawberries are coming in from Florida. At vegetable counters are green beans, beets, brocolli, carrots, celery, lettuce, peas and spinach. Tomatoes slipped in from Cuba and Florida give a cheery color to winter meals.

Many Uses Now Found For Stainless Steel

Stainless steel has been used for kitchen cutlery with great success. Its nontarnishing properties have made it popular. Today the stainless steel is used for serving dishes, coffee service sets, beverage accessories, cooking utensils and for flatware.

The flatware is presented in five patterns and has a fine silvery appearance. It is not only attractive for use in the home, but grand for picnics and for boating.

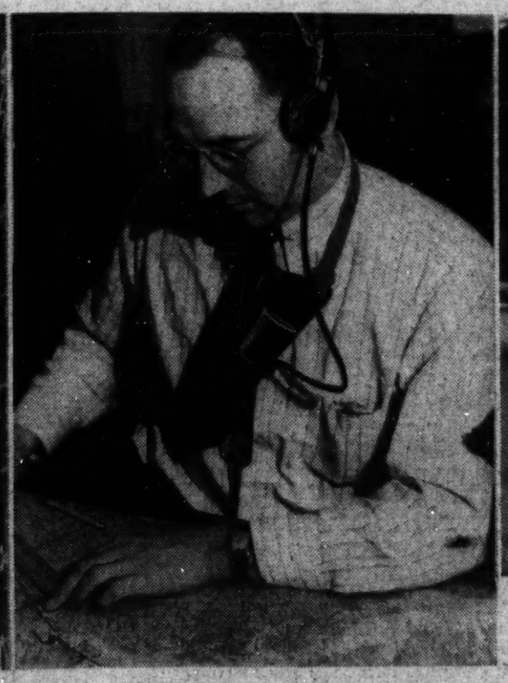
These Men Prevent Aerial Traffic Jams Here

Post Staff Photos.

1 The prevention of traffic jams when planes converge on the busy Washington airport is the job of these men in this strip. Bad weather makes their task particularly tough. Big airliners are "stacked" at about 1,000-foot levels while they await their turn to land. Above is C. B. Walter, control tower operator, who records plane movements and relays the information to other traffic control offices. The job of moving planes "downstairs" rests upon . . .

2 . . . L. E. Warren, manager of traffic control, who is notified of plane movements and assigns each plane a level, which is marked on a wooden slab on his board.



3 T. N. Gore, assistant manager of traffic control, keeps track of all planes in his area by means of markers on his map. Markers are moved every 15 minutes.

4 V. J. Kosicki, chief operator at the airport, is in direct contact with planes. Before him are wind velocity and wind direction instruments and a clock. He relays important wind data and the time to pilots and other information relative to positions of planes in the air. He, Gore and Warren are employed by the Department of Commerce, and they serve as co-ordinators for all lines using the airport. Lives of passengers depend upon these men, especially when visibility is poor or at zero.

IT-CAN'T-HAPPEN-HERE NOTE: Henry Armstrong registered his twenty-first consecutive knockout in Madison Square Garden the other night when he dug a low punch into Enrico Venturi's midsection and watched Referee Arthur Donovan count Venturi out.

Armstrong was making a chopping-block of Venturi in that sixth round and the knockout was only a matter of time, but the fact remains that Venturi went down from the effects of a low punch.

Venturi claimed a foul on the blow and Referee Donovan admitted to radio broadcasters at the ringside that the punch was low. But Donovan explained that under New York's no-foul rule, he had no alternative but to count the fateful ten over the Italian fighter.

But it couldn't happen here in Washington. The District Boxing Commission does not subscribe to the quaint no-foul rule of the New York Athletic Commission. The New York people were driven to drastic action several years ago by a sudden wave of foul endings that threatened the legal life of boxing in the State, and came up with their strange decision that a fighter could not be fouled by a low punch.

POVICH.

That New York ruling smacks slightly of another famous saying: "They can't put you in jail for that."

The District Boxing Commission is still willing to depend on its referees and attending physicians in the matter of judging whether or not a fighter has been fouled by a low punch. It has worked satisfactorily here and the District has a smaller percentage of foul ending fights than any State in the Union with the obvious exception of New York.

• • • •

Col. Miller Hits Rule.

Col. Harvey Miller, secretary of the D. C. Boxing Commission, speaks a logical piece when he talks of New York's foul rule and the inanity of it.

"We consider the New York ruling ridiculous. They admit that a fighter can be fouled by their ruling that a low punch costs its author the round in which it was delivered. But what is to prevent one fighter from fouling another consistently and virtually conceding every round until he has succeeded in weakening the other fellow to the extent that he is ripe for a legal knockout punch. It doesn't add up."

DEPRESSION NOTE—Cleveland Indians sign Pitcher Bob Feller to a $15,000 contract for 1938, and Outfilder Joe DiMaggio demands $25,000 for signing with New York Yankees.

If those figures, Feller's particularly, don't incite the youth of the Nation to hunt up all available "How to Pitch" literature and nail toeplates on their shoes, then the youth of the Nation is no ambitious lot.

At the rate he is being paid, the natural suspicion is that Feller had a whopping season on the mound last year, but that is hardly the case. He was useless to the Indians for half of the season with his sore arm, and won only nine games while losing seven. But the reason for Feller's big-money contract is obvious enough. He packs 'em in at the gate.

There were a dozen pitchers in the league who can show a better record than Feller's, but they do not command salaries approaching Feller's figures. They do not happen to be rookie sensations who may conceivably break the league's strike-out record every time they step to the mound.

DiMaggio, on his mechanical ability, more nearly is worth the stipend he draws. Unlike Feller, he is a proven big league star and is in the line-up of the Yankees every day during the season. Feller, as a pitcher, appears only every fourth day.

It was perhaps the luckiest decision in Babe Ruth's career when he determined to convert himself from a pitcher into an outfielder. As a pitcher Ruth would not have been the attendance magnet he proved as an outfielder in the daily line-up. As a pitcher Ruth would have averaged less than two appearances a week. And, on that basis, he would never have warranted the $80,000 salary brackets he eventually reached.

CONTENT - IN - NEW - YORK—NOTE: If the truth be known, Lou Little never gave serious thought to transferring from Columbia and accepting the coaching job at Penn which was filled yesterday by the appointment of George Munger, Penn freshman coach.

The huge salary that Penn was reported prepared to pay Little held little attraction for the Columbia coach who, in New York, was drawing down sizable honorariums in addition to his salary from Columbia. The combination of his coaching salary, his profits from syndicated newspaper articles and his earnings from radio broadcasts stamped Little as the highest-paid coach in the land and Penn could hardly match his New York income.

Besides, Little, by reason of the fact that he was attached to a New York college, fell heir to the full spotlight of publicity that a successful New York coach always draws. Little's success with Columbia has not been actually startling, but he has made Columbia a power in Eastern football. And a transfer to Penn would mean a loss of that valuable publicity which a footbal coach can readily translate into dollars and cents.

Joe McCarthy-Bill Terry Feud Is Still Hotly Smouldering

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post.

New York, Jan. 13.—A cigar glows. A pipe smoulders. The smoke rises and out of these wraiths of smoke comes one of the bitterest feuds in all baseball.

McCARTHY.

Joe McCarthy, the apple-cheeked Irishman who manages the World Champion New York Yankees, is a cigar smoker. Bill Terry, pilot of the Giants, who have been beaten by the Yanks two years in a row for the world title, is a pipe smoker.

As the story comes to me, the McCarthy and Terry methods of approach to Lady Nicotine clashed somewhat dramatically one night in December during the recent major league meetings in Chicago. It seems that a flock of baseball people were sitting in a certain tavern. And that McCarthy glanced up at a man in motion and beheld Terry passing his table with a pipe in his mouth.

McCarthy, a witty fellow at times, said "Hello there, Terry. Say, what's that you got in your mouth—a pipe? I don't see how you can manage a baseball club with a pipe in your mouth!" Those may not have been Joe's exact quotations, but that's the way they were relayed to me.

Terry, a temperamental chap, halted, flushed and was nonplused for a second. Then he growled at McCarthy something like this, "Yeah! If I was a blue-ribbon guy like you, with the best baseball material stuck into my hands every year, I could manage a club if I smoked one of those Turkish water pipes." And Terry swung angrily on his way.

McCarthy, I understand, blew an expansive puff of cigar smoke into the air and chuckled like an exultant leech because he had penetrated Terry's skin so successfully. It seems that Marse Joe had been waiting for just such a chance for some time — because Memphis Willyum had failed to congratulate him after either the '36 or '37 Yankee World Series victories over the Giants. And McCarthy thought congratulations were in order.

Men who are close to McCarthy and Terry and close to the front offices of both clubs say that the Chicago incident merely symbolizes the bitterness that now exists between the two New York baseball corporations. And that this inter-club feud is providing additional incentive for each to win another pennant in '38 and meet in a third straight World Series.

Last season's repeat Subway Series was one of the most lackluster ever held. Even New York fans failed to attend, and sports followers elsewhere turned from baseball to football. Henry Ford figured there wasn't enough interest in the series to merit spending another $300,000 to broadcast it, after he plunked down $100,000 previously for the option.

TERRY.

Now, in January, when the hot stove sessions are going full blast,

Mike Jacobs Calls Bout a 'Disgrace'

Brown Wants Italian Lightweight and Handlers Tossed From Fight Game After Dubious Ending of Armstrong Bout.

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Jan. 13.—Fiery Bill Brown, of the New York Boxing Commission, demanded tonight that Enrico Venturi, Italian lightweight, and his handlers be tossed out of the fight game.

Venturi already is under a 30-day suspension for failing to make the agreed 137 pounds at yesterday's weighing-in. The suspension went into effect immediately after the knockout. Also, Chairman John J. Phelan ordered Venturi's purse of $6,150.90 held up until after Tuesday's meeting, at which the foul knockout will be investigated thoroughly.

Commissioner Brown said he would try to have Venturi, Manager Carmine Tarantino and the two seconds, Nick and Dan Florio, banned permanently from boxing in New York State. Brown believes that Venturi could have risen and "continued his foot race," and that he was improperly coached from his corner at the time of the foul.

Jacobs was still smouldering when he took a plane for Cleveland this afternoon to arrange with Sonja Henie for her mid-February ice carnival in Miami, Fla. He will fly to Miami tomorrow and return to New York in time for Tuesday's meeting.

Meanwhile Brown, Jacobs and most fight followers agreed that Referee Arthur Donovan had acted correctly in counting out Venturi when he failed to rise from the canvas. Donovan explained "you can't give a man a rest period after a foul unless he stays on his feet, according to our rules."

Penn Names MungerHead Grid Coach

Frosh Mentor Succeeds Harvey Harmon; Takes Charge at Once.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—George A. Munger, freshman coach and graduate of the class of 1933, today was appointed head coach of the University of Pennsylvania football squad.

In announcing the promotion of the 28-year-old former Penn player, the university returns to graduate coaching. Munger succeeds Harvey Harman who resigned December 27 after a disastrous season.

President Thomas S. Gates in making known the appointment said Munger "has expressed his complete adherence to the policies and principles under which the university conducts its athletics."

Munger will assume his new duties at once. President Gates said that Munger now holds the faculty rank of instructor in the department of physical education and will be advanced to the rank of assistant professor in the department, effective July 1. Munger's salary as head coach was not announced.

"While holding the rank of instructor," Gates said, "Munger has acted as director of freshman athletics and specifically as head coach of the freshman football and track teams.

"In this capacity he has earned the respect and confidence of his associates and has demonstrated an ability and character which merits his promotion."

Skate Queen in Iceless Capital

SONJA HENIE ARRIVES AT AIRPORT.

Sonja Is Sensation On Visit to Capital

Famous Skater and Movie Star Unspoiled After Years of Public Adulation—Thrilled by Idea She May Skate Under Miami's Palms.

By Bob Garrison.

Your sweetheart—and mine—Sonja Henie, the Norwegian skating queen with the sparkling brown eyes and flying feet, flew into this rinkless city yesterday and answered all the questions you've been asking.

She of the turned-up nose and dimples didn't have to utter a word to answer the biggest question.

She's truly "One In a Million." That was proved at every turn as she glided through nine hours of laborious ceremony and press conferences without narrowing that ear-to-ear smile.

Thrilled by the fact that she attracted 4,000 persons, the largest crowd in Washington Airport history, the latest movie sensation accepted the key to the city from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, then said she still considered her skating more important than her career as a movie star.

Just Good Friends.

"Tyrone and I are just good friends, that's all," she said. "The publicity men are making too much of it. I fear it has gone too far. If I am not mistaken, they now have us quarreling, and as a matter of fact, we are on the best of terms."

The three-times Olympic figure skating champion presently is appearing in a Cleveland carnival and will soon move on to Boston, then Madison Square Garden in New York. Her biggest skating thrill may come next month when she appears as the star of an ice-skating show in Miami.

Dad Was a Champion.

Although she is the youngest person ever to receive the Knight of St. Olaf award from the King of Norway (the occasion that brought her to Washington) she revealed she is not the first world champion in the Henie family.

She recalled that her father, Wilhelm, was the bike champion of the world, having won that honor in Amsterdam in 1894.

Her father, though he never skated, was a great lover of sports and when he died a little over a year ago, Sonja lost her greatest adviser. That job has partially been taken over by Carl W. Refsland, sports editor of the Norwegian News, who has been at her side since 1930.

According to him, the girl, who first ruled the world's ice at 13, is the same unspoiled youngster today that she was at the time, 12 years ago.

Tribute to Parents.

"It is a tribute to her parents, Wilhelm and his widow, Mrs. Selma Henie (who accompanied Sonja here), that Sonja has not become temperamental. It's been trying work, these years of practice, public appearances, and, here lately, the moving picture business."

Her grandmother on the maternal

Riggs, Sabin In Semifinal; Hines Beaten

Kovacs and Cooke Win Quarterfinal Matches at Miami.

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 13.—Young Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, back on the form that won him No. 2 national ranking, swept through Wilmer Hines, of Hollywood, Calif., 6—2, 6—3, in the quarterfinals of the Nautilus tennis tournament today.

Wayne Sabin, of Hollywood, Calif., the only other seeded player remaining, trounced Weston Painter, of Milwaukee, 6—1, 6—2, and will meet Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., tomorrow. Riggs' semifinal match with Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Ore., will be played Saturday.

The doubles also reached the semifinal stage with Riggs and Sabin to engage Bill Hardie and George Pero, of Miami, tomorrow. Cooke and Martin Busby, of Miami, encounter Kovacs and Hines Saturday.

Riggs reeled off four straight games in the first set before Hines broke his service in the fifth. Riggs then took Hines' service and Hines broke the Chicagoan's again for the last time. Hines tried in vain to battle Riggs with forehand chops and high lobs.

In the second set Hines had Riggs at two-love, but Bobby Deuced it and then made it 3—2. Hines won his own service to make it three-all, but Riggs ran off the next three games.

Joe Medwick Called Tops By King Carl

Hubbell Says Cardinal Slugger Greatest in Baseball.

By the Associated Press.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 13.—Carl Owen Hubbell, known variously as King Carl and Bill Terry's meal ticket, rates Joe Medwick the greatest hitter in baseball—

even better than Joe DiMaggio, of the New York Yankees.

"I might change my mind if I had to face DiMaggio every day, but I doubt it," said the New York Giants' pitcher, who dropped in for a week of golf with his battery mate, Gus Mancuso. "I do not see how anybody could be better than Medwick.

"Every batter has a weakness, a tendency to go after bad balls at certain spots, but Medwick isn't bothered. He has so much power in his wrists that he hits bad balls about as hard as many batters hit alley pitches."

Hubbell said it is difficult to make DiMaggio hit a bad pitch.

"Everybody knows," said Hubbell sheepishly, "the Giant hurlers didn't find DiMaggio's weakness in the World Series."

Hubbell said Brooklyn's Van Lingle Mungo has more stuff than any other National League pitcher, except possibly Dizzy Dean.

Pixlee May Return To Build G.W. Gym

Colonial Grid Coach Believed to Have Been Named 'Extension Director' to Supervise Construction of Huge Field House.

Turmoil in the athletic department at George Washington University took aonther twist yesterday when it was revealed at the G Street Institution that Jim Pixlee, athletic director, definitely would return to the school next year—to supervise the construction of a new fieldhouse.

No authoritative confirmation could be attached to the original report that Pixlee would not return to the local institution following his year's leave of absence, but on the other hand, sources close to the board of trustees said that he would take over the job of "expansion director."

The new field house would be constructed at Twenty-third and G streets northwest, and would accomodate between 15,000 and 20,000 persons for basketball, hockey, indoor track meets and other indoor sports.

Meanwhile, it was understood that Pixlee was in the best of stead with the university officials and that the job of "extension director" was being offered him in deference to his application for leave of absence "due to bad health." It is believed that his days as football coach are over, but in recognition of his fine record as grid mentor, he is being offered the newly created position.

Bill Rineheart, his assistant football coach and mentor of the outstanding basketball team, is believed ready to take over the grid reins next fall, although neither he nor Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president, have implied that the appointment would be made.

Following a student whispering campaign that hovered over the campus at the close of the football season and threatened to take the form of a poll to determine whether or not the student body should ask his resignation, Marvin affirmed his faith in Pixlee, stating that he was well satisfied with his work in the athletic department.

Derringer Balking, Asks to Be Traded

Bradenton, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Paul Derringer, Cincinnati Reds pitcher, said today he had written the club to trade him.

"They want me to take a $10,000 salary cut," he said, "and I don't think it's fair." He tore up the proffered $7,500 contract. Derringer said he received $17,500 last season, plus $500 for signing.

Derringer had a phenomenal season with the second division Reds in 1936 but last year he was troubled with a double hernia and had 11 wins and 12 losses.

"They made me pitch when I wasn't in physical condition to take the mound," he said. "Now when I am in great shape and should be at the peak of my career, they want me to take that big cut."

Table Tennis Event Begins

With an entry list of nearly 100 players, the District Table Tennis Association's annual tournament will start tonight in the Heurich gymnasium with first-round matches scheduled.

Play will be in men's and women's A and B classes, and men's doubles. The A class is for the championship players and the B class for non-ranked contenders.

Wilson Teachers College will send Elias Schuman and Ed Gee as favorites, the former defending champion, while Charlotte Decker is among the choices for the women's crown.

The event will advance into the semifinal rounds in all classes Saturday afternoon and wind up with the finals in four classes, and semi-finals and finals in the men's A class Saturday night.

A general admission of 25 cents will be charged, with a limited number of reserved seats remaining for Saturday night's finals at 75 cents each. Preliminary round matches will be two out of three sets, with semifinals and finals three out of five.

Players competing must, in line with the rules of the association, wear dark clothing and rubber-soled shoes.

Bess Ehrhardt, Shipstad Admit Long Marriage

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Boston, Jan. 13.—Bess Ehrhardt, of Superior, Wis., the Nation's newest fancy skating sensation, and Roy Shipstad, of St. Paul, Minn., American professional figure skating champion, have been married secretly for 15 months, it was learned tonight.

"We're so tired of denying rumors," the couple told the United Press, "that we might as well admit it's so. Yes, we are married."

Miss Ehrhardt and Shipstad, who yesterday opened a four-day engagement here as co-stars of the "Ice Follies of 1938," now on national tour, said they were married at Hudson, Wis., October 13, 1936—a fortnight before thehir company started on its first tour of the country.

Today's a dull day for sports and dramatic reporters who had the laborious task yesterday of trailing lovely SONJA HENIE about the Capital . . . She's just as lovely off the screen . . . BOB PASTOR, the heavyweight who lasted 10 rounds with Champion JOE LOUIS and who may fight BUCK EVERETT here on the 31st, is a track man . . . He's one of those fellows they claim can run 100 yards in 10 seconds . . . And persons who saw him fight LOUIS don't doubt it, the only thing in question is the event . . . He looked more like a distance man.

It is possible to play over 100 games of rummy with the same deck of cards and not notice that there are two four of diamonds in it (if there are) . . . It happened on the train that carried local scribes to Charles Town last month. Evidently no player ever held the identical fours . . . Just bear this in mind when you don't fill that inside straight.

Codd Gelding Handled by Kurtsinger

Stubbs and Bulwark Chase Winner; Dreel Annexes Purse.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 13. Paul Codd's improved 4-year-old Pageboy, which lost a photo decision to Stocks in his first start of the winter at Tropical Park, turned in a cracker jack performance here this afternoon to defeat nine other members of the older division in the Winter Haven Purse of 1 mile. With Charlie Kurtsinger earning a double, the gelded son of The Porter, leading sire of 1937, crashed home by three lengths in the smart time of 1:37 2-5, his backers taking down $15.40 for two.

Townsend B. Martin's exceptionally fast sprinter, Stubbs, failed to go the eight furlongs successfully but held on long enough to save the place by a head from H. W. Jackson's Bulwark. Headin Home, the favorite, was outrun all the way and finished sixth.

Stubbs, a galloping winner at Tropical and, before that, victorious at the United Hunts, ran a very good race considering that the distance was beyond his limit. He held a wide lead at the top of the stretch and had Bulwark and Perlette put away. Then Kurtsinger loomed on the outside with the stretch-running Pageboy. Overtaking Stubbs inside the last furlong Pageboy swept into command and breezed to a decisive score.

The second group of baby racers to appear here this winter provided the sport as the program opened with a three-furlong straightaway dash. Selmalad, a brown son of Jock-Agnes Ayres, outfooted 10 other youngsters and clicked by 3 lengths under Mike Sarno. He finished in 0:33 4-5 and returned $23.40. Our Mat chased the winner home and lasted to head the forward running favorite, Romaunt.

Miss Oak, a 3-year-old filly that inherited some of the speed of her sire, Chestnut Oak, rewarded form players in the 6-furlong second race. Well handled by Apprentice Andy Clutter, the $8.70-for-$2 chance raced head and head with Time and Again, forged to the front in the final furlong and drew away to triumph by a length and a half. Time and Again was an easy second, two lengths before the slow-starting Oddesa Frank.

Dreel, winner of his last start at Tropical Park in $1,500 competition, moved up into better company in the third race and repeated at the lucrative odds of $20.70 for $2. The former A. G. Vanderbilt sprinter had enough class to put Vote Boy away in the early running, then hold on gamely under Eddie Arcaro's strong urging and click by a length. Bellum made a valiant stretch bid and took the place, another length clear of Ladfield. Wrenace, the choice, returned to action minus his former speed, being outrun all the way.

A fighting finish developed out of the running of the fourth race of 1 mile. The purse was annexed by the $13.20 hazard Kinross, which Charlie Kurtsinger drove home by a half-length. Motley, Harpen Belle and Wahcoo were close behind in the order named. Kinross wore down the speedy Wahcoo in the last quarter-mile and continued gamely to the end. Motley closed fastest of all from a sluggish beginning.

Due chiefly to the fact that Catalysis and Aces Wild received poorly judged rides, Polyata, a big disappointment in her last effort at Tropical Park, scored a hard-earned victory in the fifth race. The Polydor filly registered by a neck over Catalysis, with Aces Wild a half-length farther back in the field of 3-year-old fillies. Aces Wild, after breaking very slowly, was rushed to the front, but finally wilted after a duel with Polyata. Catalysis broke on top, dropped back to last on the inside, then closed with a rush on the outside when it was too late. Polyata was a $4.80 favorite and ran the 7 furlongs in 1:25 flat.

The turf course event provided an upset. Miss Pecan, at odds of $45 for $2, won more after the fashion of a standout favorite. She shot out of the pack in the front lane to gallop to a three-length victory under Hilton Dabson, Chrysmute tired after getting to the front. She managed to save second money by a length and a half from Touche. Legionary burned up considerable money by breaking slowly and failing to overcome the handicap.

Georgetown Club Wins Boxing Show

100 pounds—William Smith (M. B. C.) defeated James Calomeris (W. B. C.).

120 pounds—Ed Alexander (G. B. C.) defeated Harley Morningstar (W. B. C.).

Dukes Will Meet Miami at Night

Miami, Fla., Jan. 13 (AP).—Stuart W. Patton, graduate manager of athletics for the University of Miami, announced today Duquesne will meet Miami here November 18 in a night football game.

Patton said the contract with Duquesne was for home-and-home games, with Miami playing in Pittsburgh in 1940. The teams will not meet in 1939, he declared.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS OAK, $8.70, $5.70, $3.50; TIME AND AGAIN, $14.30, $9.00; ODDESA FRANK, $5.50.

MISS OAK, away forwardly, went in close pursuit of the leader on the outside throughout, responded courageously when the final test came, bore in slightly in the last 70 yards and compelled TIME AND AGAIN to ease up, then drew away at the end. TIME AND AGAIN, quickest to find his stride, displayed the most speed and took a short lead while saving ground, but faltered through the stretch and was beaten when forced to ease up. ODDESA FRANK, slow to get going, responded to punishment and closed fast through the stretch.

Daily Double, Selmalad and Miss Oak, Paid $128.30.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:00. Off 3:02½. Winner, N. D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DREEL, $20.70, $8.00, $6.30; BELLUM, $10.70, $7.50; LADFIELD, $7.40.

DREEL, quickest to begin, went in close attendance of VOTE BOY in the early running, drew out under pressure when straightened into the stretch, and held BELLUM safe in the final drive. BELLUM worked his way up steadily on the inside and finished going strongly. LADFIELD, prominent contender from the start, held on gamely in the stretch run.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:34. Winner, Mrs. C. Tumin's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINROSS, $13.20, $8.80, $5.90; MOTLEY, $5.60, $4.50; HARPEN BELLE, $4.30.

KINROSS, in the thick of contention from the start, responded courageously through the stretch and outlasted MOTLEY. The latter, off slowly, moved up determinedly between the field roundings the turn, was blocked on the stretch, but then swung to the outside and closed with a belated rush. HARPEN BELLE, lightly restrained early, made a game effort and outlasted WAHCOO.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,100. The Hallandale. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good for all but Aces Wild from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:02. Winner, William Ziegler, jr.'s ch. f. (3), by Polydor—Alys. Trained by M. Brady. Value to winner, $775; second, $176; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:47, 1:13 1-5, 1:25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POLYATA, $4.80, $3.20, $2.30; CATALYSIS, $4.90, $2.90; ACES WILD, $2.30.

POLYATA, going in her best form, was reserved back of the pace until reaching the head of the stretch, readily assumed command when urged and then held on resolutely under smart handling to the end. CATALYSIS gradually improved her position while never far off the leaders, made a determined bid in the final drive and finished stoutly. ACES WILD, away slowly, was rushed up fast on the inside to take command, showed good speed, but weakened.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:34½. Winner, P. B. Codd's ch. g. (4), by The Porter—Janet Blair. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $880; second, $300; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47, 1:11 1-5, 1:37 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAGE BOY, $15.40, $9.60, $5.30; STUBBS, $6.80, $4.20; BULWARK, $11.50.

PAGE BOY followed the pace under light restraint until midway around the turn, gained steadily when placed to pressure, and wore the leaders down through the stretch to win decisively. STUBBS began fast and displaying the most speed, was rated in front in the early stages, held on well with good courage when challenged to outlast BULWARK. The latter, well up and slipping through on the inside for the entire trip, finished gamely, but hung in the last strides.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles (turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:04½. Winner, Brandon Stable's dk. bh. f. (4), by Tick On or Black Toney—Binary Star. Trained by T. M. Waller. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:58.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS PECAN, $45.00, $22.80, $17.20; CHRYSMUTE, $27.80, $12.70; TOUCHE, $18.70.

MISS PECAN, away fast, was eased off the pace going to the first turn, followed the leaders while saving ground until straightened into the stretch, where she swung to the outside, then closing rapidly, wore the pacemakers down and won going away. CHRYSMUTE gradually improved her position while slipping through on the inside, assumed a brief lead entering the stretch, but was no match for the winner. TOUCHE, on the outside and prominent in the early running, finished gamely to punishment and outstayed INSCRIPTION.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:34. Off 5:36. Winner, P. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COPPER TUBE, $7.70, $4.00, $3.60; BRANDON PRINCE, $4.00, $3.40; MORE PEP, $6.10.

COPPER TUBE, slow to find his stride, began to better his position on the inside midway down the backstretch, then coming around the leaders entering the stretch, outlasted his opposition in the final drive. BRANDON PRINCE, away well, and prominent all the way, took command at the furlong pole, but could not stave off the winner. MORE PEP worked his way up steadily, came through on the inside entering the stretch and finished gamely. U DEMON, keen contender early, faltered through the stretch.

TONY FALCO.

Rialto Fights to Start After Bad Breaks.

Spoiler Falco, one of the upset artists of the boxing game, administered Jessurun a sound trouncing in their first meeting two years ago and was barely shaded in a return bout a year ago.

Falco's upset performances are many. When Jackie (Kid) Berg was at his peak it was Falco who defeated him, and it also was Falco who upset Young Peter Jackson when the latter enjoyed the popularity Henry Armstrong does today. Tony three times defeated Johnny Jadick after Jadick had twice mastered Tony Canzoneri, and also conquered Harry Dublinsky, Frankie Klick and Pete Nebo when all were considered championship threats.

In a special eight-round supporting number Pete Scalzo, Pete Reilly's undefeated featherweight, meets Al Gillette. Scalzo formerly was national, international and Golden Gloves champion and has won better than half of his professional starts by knockout while going undefeated in 33 starts.

In a six-round preliminary Joe Green faces Brooks Bowen, while opening four-round numbers pair off Frankie Marr vs. Rusty Baker, and Vince Carino vs. Doug Swetnam.

the Giants have made no determined moves to add ability or color to their team. And this is quite sad, because the Giants are competing for patronage in America's largest city against a club that really is going after pennants, championships and patronage. Only recently Col. Jacob Ruppert, Yankee owner, assured the public that he had no intention of "tearing down" his great club, even if it did seem superior to others in the American League. Instead he would continue trying to build it up.

The Yanks are bringing in an apparently sensational young second baseman, Joe Gordon, of Newark, to replace the retired Tony Lazzeri. And they have brilliant young Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich, who will improve as the oldsters fade.

But the Giants, outside of bringing in a couple of new, uncertain pitchers, apparently are doing nothing. They have virtually no color—in a metropolis that goes ga-ga over color. True, they're trying to rebuild their Jersey City farm club. But, among the Giants themselves, it seems that the only big change is their ace hurler, Carl Hubbell.

Maybe Joe McCarthy had something there when he asked how Bill Terry could manage a club while smoking a pipe. Maybe he wasn't referring to Terry alone. Maybe he meant that the Giants' front office was filled with pipe smoke. Maybe McCarthy remembered the good old days when the late John McGraw led the Giants—when there wasn't so much pipe smoke about the outfit—but when there was plenty of fire!

Players to Decide Hunt's Georgia System

Athens, Ga., Jan. 13 (AP).—Joel Hunt, new University of Georgia football coach, says, "My system will be decided entirely from the type of material I have here."

He arrived last night from Baton Rouge, La., where he was backfield coach at L. S. U., to confer with athletic officials over details of the new varsity coaching organization.

"Football is not a game of systems anymore," he declared. He plans to confer with seniors on the 1937 team and the entire squad before returning to Louisiana.

Chicago Boy Boosts Fistic Rating Here

Sicilia's Victory Over Jaramillo Puts a Feather in Cap.

Gevinson also holds a victory over Jaramillo, but that decision at the arena back in November was roundly booed. Sicilia won impressively from Jaramillo.

Indications are that if Sicilia beats Gevinson, he will get a return shot with either Tony Dupre or Bantamweight Champion Harry Jeffra, both of whom won disputed decisions from Sicilia.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn completed his supporting card, booking Al Macine, the clever young New England bantamweight, for a six-round semi-windup against Pete Powell, a tough customer from Newport News. Mancine has won two straight here, and will get a headline shot if he puts away Powell.

Returning to his arena wars in a four-rounder will be Mike Morton, former Golden Gloves winner, who meets Red Tucker, of Baltimore. Al Jameson and Tommy Hoover have been rematched for a four-rounder, and Mike O'Leary, of Leonardtown, will oppose Jack Quinn in another four.

Sicilia is due in town tomorrow to complete his training for the Gevinson bout.

Mount Rainier Faces Kendall Green Today

Mount Rainier High School's basketball team, which has lost four games and won two this season, will attempt to crash the win column today against the Kendall Green five of Gallaudet College at 3:15.

The Mounts will send into the battle the same lads who won over Greenbelt last Tuesday. They are Landolt and Taylor, forwards; O'Connor, center; Crump and Miller, guards. Tager and Glynn probably will see action.

Patty Berg's 78 Ties For Lead at Augusta

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 13.—Mrs. Jane Cothran Jameson, of Palm Beach, Fla., and Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, last year's winner, took the lead today after the first round of the 72-hole medal play Augusta Women's Titlist golf tournament.

The co-leaders for the first 18 holes shot 78s, one under women's par.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., was in second place with a score of 42-38—80. Mrs. Jameson's score was 37-41, and Miss Berg's 38-40.

Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I....39 45—84
M. McDougall, Portland, Ores. 43 41—84
Helen Dettweiler, Washington... 43 42—85
Helen Warina, Pinehurst, N. C. 43 45—88
Isabel Ogilvie, Augusta, Ga.....43 48—91

Mrs. Jameson had five 1-putt greens on the first nine, but lost some of her control coming in.

Miss Berg hit her woods and irons perfectly, but did not putt so well.

The second round will start at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. They are paired Jameson and Berg; Hemphill and Bauer; McDougall and Dettweiler; Waring and Ogilvie.

Woman's par and the cards of Berg and Jameson:

Par out	545	353	435—39
Jameson	554	343	445—37
Berg	545	354	444—38
Par in	454	536	434—40—79
Jameson	654	536	444—41—78

Terps, Duke To Clash in Double Bill

Maryland Boxing, Basketball Teams on Same Card Tomorrow.

Maryland University's inexperienced boxing team combines with its improving basketball team tomorrow night to inaugurate the first Terp doubleheader of the season, Duke, Southern Conference foe, will furnish the opposition at College Park for both teams.

As the Terp cage team has shown a more consistent scoring ability on the court than the Blue Devils, it will be a slight favorite to win the basketball game. But the boxing matches threaten to be a different matter.

Only Ben Alperstein, national collegiate lightweight champion, is held over from last year's undefeated Southern Conference championship squad, but after that there's not a man on the team with any experience. In fact, it's probably the greenest collegiate team that ever engaged in ring competition.

Duke has had two ring matches this season, beating Appalachian State, 5-3, and losing to South Carolina, 3-5, while it will be Maryland's debut with its green outfit. Duke's loss to South Carolina was no upset, however, as the latter looms as the 1938 Conference champ.

Both basketball teams have had plenty of action, the Blue Devils having played ten times already, and Maryland having fallen just three short of the same number.

The Terps bowed to Georgetown the other night but only because the Hoyas got hot in the last part of the first half and accumulated a lead that was just too much for a Maryland rally in the second half. For as fast as the College Park boys could sink them, the Georgetowners would do likewise.

Duke, beaten by several Southern schools, bowed to Navy Saturday in its last start.

side was Irish. Her family is wealthy, having been in the fur business for many years. She is 5 feet 4 inches tall, is just as lovely off the screen as on, and doesn't smoke or drink.

Sonja is a Russian name, but in Norway when a person means "O. K.", he says "Sonja."

Skating Queen Has Busy Day Here.

Several persons narrowly escaped injury from whirring propellers as the crowd of 4,000 pressed around the plane which brought Miss Henie from Cleveland.

A band played "One In a Million," from the Norwegian skater's film success, as a special detail of Metropolitan Police worked 20 minutes to clear a path from the plane to a waiting automobile.

Acting in behalf of King Haakon VII, Wilhelm Morgenstierne, Norwegian Minister, conferred the knighthood on Miss Henie at a reception in the legation.

The youngest Norwegian subject ever to receive the diamond-studded medal, Miss Henie heard the Minister praise her "outstanding achievement as a sportswoman, artist and interpreter of the spirit of the young of Norway."

Another admiring crowd threw Miss Henie's schedule out of gear and delayed by an hour her departure from the legation to a party for the press at the Shoreham Hotel.

Western Five Faces Tech in Feature Tilt of Interhigh Series Tonight

Wilson Foe Of Eastern In Opener

Eastern, Western Fives Favored in Twin Encounters.

By Jack Munhall.

Of prime importance to three teams—Eastern, Western and Tech—is the twin bill at Tech gym which pits Eastern against Wilson at 7:15 o'clock, and Western against Tech one hour later.

McKinley's alert five has swept through two foes for easy victories and is now entrenched in first place with two victories and no losses. Western, defending champion, and Eastern, the favorite to lift the crown, are deadlocked for the second position with one win and no losses.

Should Tech upset Western, Eastern, expected to easily beat Wilson, would promptly be installed as a prohibitive choice to annex its fourth championship in five years, since Tech is not deemed able to maintain its present pace against stronger opposition. However, dope favors Western to sneak by the T-Streeters and Eastern to rout the Presidents.

All of which leads up to the meeting of Eastern and Western in one game of a bargain bill Tuesday, when the series probably will be settled in favor of one or the other. In the event that both fives take the floor still unbeaten, it easily is foreseen that the winner will be a favorite to win the title.

Western, with a comparatively green team, badly needs the confidence that a victory over Eastern would supply. But a defeat for the Georgetowners may alter their spirit and allow Eastern to romp home, according to the experts. Eastern's veteran five is composed of the best material of any squad in the series.

Tech will be at a disadvantage tonight because 6-foot-5-inch Merrill Heddings, its center and leading scorer, will not be available. Heddings, a Seventh Day Adventist, is forbidden by the rules of his religion to play after 7 p. m. Hence he will not even be in uniform.

Tech's lineup will include Dellinger and Heatwole, at forwards; De Leon, at center, and Curtis and Keagy, at guards. Western probably will start Custer and Holloran, at forwards; Stanton, at center, and Needle and Saylor, at guards.

Eastern's same lineup will start Hancock and Matera, at forwards; Quantrille, at center, and Lusby and Lombardy, at guards. Wilson will counter with Hawksworth and MacDonald, at forwards; Findely, at center, and Hoyt and Dave Maloney, at guards.

G. W. Frosh Five Wins

Spectators at the Tech gym were given a full evening of basketball entertainment last night as they watched Heurich down Kendrick, 52-42, Lubeseal bow to George Washington Frosh, 44-40, and the Georgetown girls team defeat United Typewriters, 20-10.

This benefit performance for the Presidents Warm Springs, Ga., Infantile Paralysis Foundation was sponsored by the Community Center and some 750 rooters attended to aid the cause, and to watch some good basketball executed by every squad participating.

The George Washington-Lubeseal game was a thriller all the way. With Lucas and Tipton sinking the leather, the Lubeseals walked into an early lead but this was overcome by some expert one-hand shooting by Cronin, Amendola and Hyatt. The teams matched points down the home stretch but as the score indicates, the Frosh were just a little too good last night.

Goldfaden and Russell were the main guns in the professional tilt so far as Kendrick was concerned. Even though 10 points difference is all the box score shows, the contest was never in doubt. Somehow you felt that the Heurich team could always get more points if they needed them. Latona and Buscher kept the Alexandria team in the running.

Three young ladies by the name of Honabach, Lewis, and Winkler paved the way for the win over the United Typewriters. The Georgetowners only allowed the Typists four goals from the floor.

Rich Man, Poor Man, Beggar Man, Indian Chief—They're All Wrestlers Now!

By Walter Haight.

Bronko's start was like the evening breeze
That rustles through the cypress trees;
But when het up he went for keeps
And piled Old Whiskers up in heaps.

To tell the truth, I hadn't covered a wrestling match since one night at the Coliseum when Joe Turner slammed the Masked Marvel so hard that a side of beef fell off a rack in Center Market, a floor below, landed with a thud on a slab of spareribs and the night watchman, passing up the aisle at the moment, gave it a slap on the vertebrae and yelled, "The Winnah and New Champeen!"

HAIGHT.

I can hardly blame the boss. I had no right to sit around and pout because Bob Garrison was assigned to interview Sonja Henie. I thought he might say, "Haight, go home and have a good cry" but instead he said, "Haight, you cover the wrestling match."

Well, I had a good foundation for it. My pop used to tell me about Rob Roy Mackey wrestling a bear over Southeast and entrusting the collection plate to no one but the fellow with one arm.

My reincarnation as a wrestling reporter and fan found me off on the wrong foot. I arrived before the first bout began, a distinct violation of rule No. 36 of the National Wrestling Writers Association, District Branch. At the extreme end of the press box bench, sat a rather fleshy stranger. I had never seen him at a race track with his chin on his chest and his pockets turned inside out, so I knew he wasn't a newspaper man.

I slid in beside him. He eyed me and I eyed him. He reached in his pocket, pulled out a watch and placed it on the bench in front of him. I retaliated by pulling out my pawn ticket and fingering it.

A loud boo almost knocked our heads together. It was a fresh early-evening raspberry being presented to a pair of wrestlers making their way to the mat. The referee looked at my fat friend and nodded. My pal nodded back and the match began. I nodded at Jimmy Lake just to be even.

Mike Kilonis was trying to get water on the elbow by poking John Grandovitch sometime later when the stranger who had been keeping one eye on his watch and the other on the match, bellowed, "Five minutes." I felt like yelling, "Five minutes to what," but Dave Herman slid in on the other side of me. He gave me a body slam, three Japanese headlocks, a handful of cauliflower ear seed, pointed to the stranger and yelled, "Haight, meet the timekeeper!"

Finally Grandovitch gave Kilonis a bodyvich slamovich and the mat was nude. But not for long, for, on the crest of a wave of boos, Ram Singh, the Hindu, and John Wilcox rode matward. Herman had just informed me that these were hard-working fellows when Singh gave Wilcox a body press, crease and all, in six and a half minutes.

Then Chief Chewaki rode to the mat piggy back on the echoes of the booes that followed Wilcox to the dressing room. Al Pericra, European champion, appeared and a game of "let's play Indians" began. The Chief is a slicker. It seems that he has a knack of suddenly becoming the possessor of added equipment at certain stages of his matches.

In St. Louis he is said to have reached up in the thin air and grabbed a magic wand that waved his opponent into submission. In Detroit, it is reported that he pulled a Martin bomber out from under his arm and the plane circled over his rival's head and made five direct hits, paving the way for the Chief's victory. In Philadelphia, it is alleged that he opened his mouth and Bob Burns' Grandpa Snazzy jumped out and plastered fried eggs over the eyes of his foe and the Chief turned him into a ham omelet.

Being a virtual stranger here, the Chief didn't want to be sensational, so he reached down in his trunks and brought out a coat-hanger of the common wire variety. He then tried to make Pericra look like one of those African women with the bed spring necks.

Then again, the Chief might have been trying to wire Pericra for sound. However, the referee stepped in and informed the Chief that wire-tapping had been ruled out by the Supreme Court. The Chief argued that he was only trying to make a slingshot so he could shoot Pericra's head at a heckler. The referee had the last say, however. He disqualified the Chief for not showing his Social Security number, or something, after 18 minutes.

The evening's artistic masterpiece came in the Dropkick Murphy-Paddy Mack battle. It was a struggle of no little action. They bounced all over the mat in a sizzling exhibition of speed and endurance. Finally, the big moment came. Murphy had just glided gracefully out of a leg lock. Somehow, he tied knots in Mack's hands and feet at the same time, getting him into a position that necessitated only the holding of the tip of Mack's little toe to keep him in position.

With Mack resembling a bundle of laundry, Murphy held on to his toe, leaned back and surveyed his work much in the manner of an artist pausing in his task of painting a beautiful sunset.

Having made a football out of Mack, it was a simple matter to dropkick him four times and pave the way for the main bout.

To a chorus of "The Redskins Will Get You If You Don't Watch Out" and "Look Out, That's Turk Edwards Following You," Bronko Nagurski climbed through the ropes.

He autographed several carloads of raspberries before Jack Sullivan, looking all the part of a big brother of the Smith brothers, appeared in the opposite corner. Sullivan was tatooed like an animated Neon sign and we at the ringside got a preview of next Sunday's funny paper as he and the champion did a little cheek-to-cheek at the start of the match.

Nagurski might have plaited Sullivan's beard, given it a finger wave or tied it up in bits of white paper but the former Minnesota champion apparently does not go in for playful oddities. He was all business as he struggled with the 7-foot, 4-inch giant.

Finally he whittled him down to the right size and weakened him with a leg spread that made Sullivan look like one of the spans on the San Francisco Bridge, with his beard resembling seaweed at low tide.

Then the football in Nagurski came out. Just how Cliff Battles, Sammy Baugh and Riley Smith lasted a football game against this guy I don't know. He tackled Sullivan and if there hadn't been a good tread on his chin he would have skidded over to Fourteenth and Florida avenue. Sullivan staggered to his feet. Nagurski charged. He's up, he's down, he's up, he's down. Bronko then grabbed him and bodyslammed him into the count.

My fat friend on the end of the bench bellowed, "Thirty-four minutes," grabbed his hat and his watch and was gone. I grabbed my hat and pocketed my pawn ticket.

BRONKO TRIES THE OLD SPLIT BUSINESS.

Drought Alarm Raises Wheat 3c Per Bushel

Dust Storms Are Reported Raging Over Southwest Winter Wheat Areas.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 13.—Flurried buying rushed wheat values up 3⅛ cents a bushel, net maximum, here today to the topmost levels reached since last October.

Big dust storms, asserted to be among the earliest ever known, were reported as raging over wide areas of domestic winter wheat territory Southwest, Kansas in particular, and boding ill consequences for crops. Dispatches from various Kansas points said visibility was limited to about half a city block.

Official advices stated the moisture dearth situation in much of the domestic winter wheat region West and Southwest was similar to that which preceded two recent severe drought years.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 3⅜ to 3 cents above yesterday's finish; May, 98⅞@99; July, 93¼@92⅞. Corn, ⅛ to ⅜ up; May, 61¼@61⅝; July, 61¾. Oats unchanged, 10¼ advance. Rye showing 1⅛ to 1½ cents bulge, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents higher.

Loan Money Up To 1.39 Billion

By the Associated Press.

The lendable money for excess reserves in the Nation's banks rose last week to the highest total since May 1, 1937, the Federal Reserve Board announced today.

Due primarily to the continued return flow of Christmas shopping money to the banks, excess reserves increased $120,000,000 to $1,390,000,000. This approached the level of excess reserves held by the banks before last May 1 when the Federal Reserve Board forced a reduction by increasing reserve requirements.

During the week ended January 12, money in circulation decreased $115,000,000 to $6,395,000,000.

There was no net change in the holdings of Government securities by the reserve banks.

Bank Clearings Decline 17.4% From Year Ago

Nearly All of Leading Financial Centers Report Decreases.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 13.—Bank clearings for the current full week fell below the total for the preceding five-day week, which included first-of-the-month settlements, and likewise failed to equal the corresponding 1937 figure for the ninth successive time.

Total check payments for the week ended Wednesday, January 12, for 22 leading cities of the United States, as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $4,912,502,000, as compared with $5,945,371,000 for the same 1937 week, or a decrease of 17.4 per cent.

At New York clearings dropped to $3,014,089,000, against $3,759,808,000 last year, or a loss of 19.8 per cent. The turnover at outside centers aggregated $1,898,433,000, a decline of 13.1 per cent from the $2,185,563,000 for the same week a year ago.

Clearings this week dropped $592,824,000 from the total of the five-day week preceding. Between the two similar periods of 1937 there was a loss of $898,464,000.

Bank clearings at leading cities, together with percentage change from a year ago, follow:

The Market

Stocks Sway Back and Forth With Narrow Changes; U. S. Bonds Firm.

New York, Jan. 13.—Stocks backed and filled within a fractional area in one of the dullest sessions of the year. Sales were around 900,000 shares. United States bonds advanced. A feature of the bond market was a runup in tractions. Commodities did well. May wheat closed 2½ cents higher at 98⅞ cents a bushel.

In stocks the strength in the tractions was the main feature. Gold shares also were firm to strong. Homestake sold at a new high and by early afternoon Dome and McIntyre had equaled their previous high prices for this year and last year, but the advances were only fractional. Talk of another move for subway unification gave the tractions their speculative flavor, something which they have every three weeks or so.

Steel held close to its previous closing price of yesterday, after an early fractional loss. Bethlehem sold off a point. Rails and utilities were firm. Chrysler canceled an early loss of a point. Metals were a bit draggy, especially the coppers. American Metal dipped more than 2 points, but recovered part of the loss. Continental Baking and Canada Dry were popular in the low-priced division.

Little Change.

Fundamentally nothing much has changed in the economic situation over the last week or two, but the feeling in Wall Street is distinctly more optimistic. That is true less because of the larger sales volume and the tendency of stocks to advance than because of reports of some improvement in industry. There seems to be no danger nevertheless that optimism is going to run away with anybody, for it is realized that many obstacles are in the path of business recovery which at best will be slow after the present wave of replacement buying subsides.

One of the sorest spots is the railroad position. Even with higher freight rates, which now are expected within another month, and with loans from the RFC, the ability of many lines to pull through this business depression will be sorely tried. It is the prospect of further capital deflation in railroad bonds and stocks that is keeping the brakes on a large section of the market. Those who like to take words at their face value are inclined to take more hope over the outlook for public utilities, but admittedly that industry still is in deep water.

Congress in Control.

Congress just now more than the President holds the key that will release a good deal of business enterprise. Prompt revision of taxation, with repeal of the undistributed profits tax, and a leaning toward economy will do much. If that doesn't come the speculator can fall back on hope of inflation, but even he would rather see business recover along sound lines and under a solvent Government.

Abroad the course of finance is less smooth. Another crisis is developing in France, largely because the demands of labor and the wishes of a government, at bottom sympathetic to the New Deal in France but painfully aware of the consequence of going too far with handicaps to industrial production, embodied in the minimum hours law, and of a continuing heavy treasury deficit are irreconcilable. The threatened fall of the Chautemps ministry, and consequently of the Bonnet financial management, again put pressure on the franc. That pressure may be largely bear selling, but part of it also must be another exodus of capital from France.

Begin at Home.

After the fall of Premier Blum the overtures made to capital by the succeeding government did cause some repatriation of capital, but not enough. Moreover, the real difficulty of the government lies less in the flightiness of capital than in its inability to raise enough revenue to suport its heavy program of expenditures, a program swollen mightily by the new social schemes. A real chute in the franc would have a bad effect on markets everywhere, as French money would not go into securities; it more likely would turn into gold for deposit in London safe deposit vaults. Meanwhile it is said that our Treasury is watching closely our French developments. Well they might, for all the suport that we can give French currency may be needed. While the Treasury is about it, a little action on our own problem of mounting deficits (with the French example in mind) will do no harm.

While actual developments in France were enough to cause anxiety, the air was filled with disquieting rumors. One was that another devaluation was in prospect, which if it came before the week end would involve closing of the Paris Bourse. That particular rumor, as well as the others, lacked confirmation on this side.

Service.

After a week of the effective date of the new service charges voted by the Stock Exchange on inactive accounts, the governing committee had to run up the white flag before the firing of members who found the charges washing away profitable accounts. The decision to rescind the $2 a month charge came rather more suddenly than even those who had been protesting most vigorously the charges expected. It probably will prove to be fortunate for the Stock Exchange that an error was so quickly recognized, and the damage done scarcely will be irreparable, even if it does leave a bad taste in a few mouths, which have found the feeding none too good at best. Many brokers discovered, or so they said, that people simply don't like to pay full value for services rendered them (the regular commission rates) and then be asked to contribute for the privilege of paying someone for his services. However, it was not at all public protest which moved the exchange to act in this case. So far as has been made known, no public protest was made to the authorities. Rather it was the alarm created among members themselves at the sight of removal of threatened removal of securities from brokerage vaults into bank vaults that brought action.

Rent Climb Halts After 46 Months

Boston, Mass., Jan. 13.—At last there has been a halt in the upward trend of house rents. The index for November was just slightly lower than for October—the first time in 46 months that house rents have not advanced. In fact, every individual month since January, 1934, when rents were at their depression low, they have gone up, with a total climb of 42 per cent.

Riggs Names Callahan Head Of Committee

Following the organization meeting of the directors of the Riggs National Bank, held yesterday, Robert V. Fleming, president, announced that certain changes had been made in the official organization of the bank.

He said that H. Rozier Dulany, who had served as chairman of the executive committee of the bank for 22 years, had requested that he be relieved of the chairmanship because he felt the duties and responsibilities would weigh too heavily upon him at his time of life, although he remains a member of the executive committee. At the meeting an appropriate resolution, in recognition and appreciation of Mr. Dulany's long service as chairman of the executive committee was adopted, and an embossed copy, signed by each of his associates on the board of directors, is to be presented to him in the near future.

Daniel J. Callahan was appointed chairman of the executive committee to succeed Mr. Dulany. Promotions made in the officials of the bank were:

At the main office, J. Byron Brooks, who has been in the employ of the bank since 1917 and has served as head bookkeeper for the past 15 years, was advanced to assistant cashier; Daniel D. Whitcraft, also connected with the bank since 1917, was elected assistant auditor, to fill the position which has remained vacant since the creation of the office of comptroller several years ago, when the then auditor was advanced to comptroller and the assistant auditor promoted to auditor.

Gregg C. Burns, formerly manager of the Northwest Branch, was reelected assistant cashier and appointed assistant manager of the branches. Lynn O. DeLashmutt, assistant manager of the Farmers & Mechanics Branch, and Corcoran Thom, jr., assistant manager of the Dupont Circle Branch, were both elected assistant cashiers and reappointed assistant managers of their respective branches.

Harold W. Burnside, formerly manager of the Chevy Chase Branch, was re-elected assistant cashier and appointed manager of the Northwest Branch, replacing Mr. Burns. Norman F. Brown, in the employ of the bank since 1924, was promoted to assistant manager of the Northwest Branch.

J. Ezra Troth, assistant manager of the Chevy Chase Branch, was advanced to assistant cashier and appointed manager of the Chevy Chase Branch, replacing Mr. Burnside. Mr. Richard A. Weaver, head teller at the Chevy Chase Branch, was promoted to assistant manager of that branch.

Mr. Fleming also announced that William F. Dismer and Henry W. Fisher, jr., were added to the advisory board of the branches. Mr. Dismer is an outstanding business man in the Park Road section of the city, being former president of the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association, and Mr. Fisher, whose father formerly served as a member of the advisory board of the branches, is also a prominent business man in the Georgetown section.

List of officers of the Riggs National Bank re-elected for the ensuing year, and managers and assistant managers of branches reappointed at the organization meeting of the board of directors held this afternoon: President and chairman of the board, Robert V. Fleming; vice chairman of the board, Charles C. Glover, jr.; vice president, Avon M. Nevius; vice president and cashier, George O. Vass; vice president, Hilleary G. Hoskinson; vice president, Earle M. Amick; vice president and trust officer, Sidney F. Taliaferro; assistant vice presidents: John R. McMullan, Nelson B. O'Neal and Frank G. Burrough; assistant cashiers, I. J. Roberts, B. Gwynn Dent, Harry L. Selby, Ralph R. DePrez, Carl H. Donch, Gregg C. Burns, Harold W. Burnside, Bernard I. Boudren, W. Edmund Freeman, Hulbert T. Bisselle, Daniel J. Callahan, jr., Charles R. Fadeley and William H. Taylor; comptroller, Raymond G. Marx; auditor, R. Earle Haycock; trust officers, George M. McKee, Kenneth F. Brooks; assistant trust officers, Henry K. Dierkoph, Edwin B. Shaw; general counsel, Frank J. Hogan; manager of the branches, Nelson B. O'Neal, assistant vice president; manager, Farmers & Mechanics Branch, Harry L. Selby, assistant cashier; assistant manager, Lynn O. DeLashmutt, assistant cashier; manager, Dupont Circle branch, Ralph R. DePres, assistant cashier; assistant manager, Corcoran Thom, jr., assistant cashier; manager, Park road branch, Carl H. Donch, assistant cashier; assistant managers, Joseph A. Keene, Robert V. Mellefont; assistant manager, Northwest Branch, Charles G. Hubbard; manager, Seventh street branch, Bernard I. Boudren, assistant cashier; assistant manager, F. A. Auldridge; manager, Friendship Branch, W. Edmund Freeman, assistant cashier, and assistant manager, L. B. Pendleton, jr.

Hamilton National.

Franc Slumps To New Bottom

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Collapsing under the weight of the monetary crisis in Paris, the French franc today reached the lowest point since the panicky days of 1926 when the devalued currency—known as the Poincare franc—was arbitrarily valued at 3.95 cents after plunging to around 3 cents.

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—The French franc broke rapidly in foreign exchange trading today and banking circles said the Chautemps government had partly withdrawn support of the stabilization fund.

From 3.38½ cents at the close of trading yesterday, the unit quickly fell to around 3.29 cents—the lowest since the crisis of last October when Georges Bonnet was recalled from Washington as ambassador to become minister of finance. Then, the franc reached 3.28 cents before the United States, Britain and France stepped in to support it under the tripartite monetary agreement.

Curb Prices Dip In Late Selling

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—Late selling eliminated some curb market gains today and left the active list generally in the minus division at the close. Utilities moved ahead around midday on news of Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation's registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The rise prompted increased selling and most power company leaders were slightly lower at the finish.

Creole Petroleum closed at 26½, off ⅛; Lake Shore Mines 52, off ⅛; American Gas & Electric 26½, off ½; Pittsburgh Plate Glass 88¾, off 1¼, and Gulf Oil 4, off ¼.

Slightly higher were United Power & Light "A," St. Regis Paper, Cities Service and American Cyanamid "B."

Local Trade Reports Gain For December

New York, Jan. 13.—Washington was one of a group of 21 cities in the country in which business staged an improvement of 3 per cent or more in December over November, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., national advertising firm. Washington was also one of a group of but 28 cities in which conditions were at normal or above during the month. Business in Washington stood at 4 per cent above normal at the end of December, a gain of 3 per cent over November. The city's business index stood at 5 per cent above normal in December, 1936.

"Although the national index of business showed a decline of 7 per cent during December and now stands at 29 per cent below normal," the report states, "41 trading areas, largely agricultural and mining regions, recorded increases over their November standings. Twenty-one of these areas gained 3 per cent or more. Of the remaining 106 areas into which the country is divided, 98 showed losses and 8 remained without change."

A year ago, at the end of December, the report shows, the national index stood at 2 per cent below normal. The greatest December gains, the indexes improving 5 per cent or more over November, were registered in the following areas: Atlanta, Birmingham, Cedar Rapids, Dallas, El Paso, Knoxville, Los Angeles, Memphis, Milwaukee Montgomery, Nashville, Newark, New Haven, Omaha, Providence, Salt Lake City, San Diego, Springfield, Mass.; Washington, D. C.; Wilkes-Barer and Yakima.

J. W. Hanes to Assume SEC Post Today

New York, Jan. 13 (AP).—John W. Hanes, newly elected member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, will leave for Washington tonight to assume his place on the commission. He was named for the commission by President Roosevelt on December 10 and was confirmed by the Senate on December 15.

On the commission Hanes, who was senior partner of Chas. D. Barney & Co., succeeds J. D. Ross, who resigned to become administrator of the Bonneville Dam.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 13 (AP). (United States Department of Agriculture)—The wool market in Boston was very quiet today. Quotations on domestic wools nominally were mostly unchanged, but it was difficult to secure the maximum prices realized last week. A feeling of uneasiness over the price situation has been inclined to spread during the past few days. Mill buyers have continued to make inquiries, but their purchases have been confined to small quantities for urgent immediate needs.

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

War Admiral, 3-year-old champion of 1927, was out on the track today and was given a handy half-mile workout, going that route in :48 3-5. This was the first time that the Man o' War colt has been asked for anything resembling speed. He is preparing for the $50,000 added Widener Cup on March 5 and, with plenty of time, Trainer George Conway is not hustling the champion. War Admiral has earned $181,300 in his two years of campaigning. He took down only $14,820 as a 2-year-old and turned in $166,500 last year. His largest purse came in the Kentucky Derby when Owner Samuel Riddle received a check for $52,050. We might as well make this War Admiral day. He started six times as a 2-year-old, winning three, finishing second twice and third once. As a 3-year old he won eight straight, being undefeated. He was foaled May 2, 1934, at the Faraway Farms, Lexington, Ky., and is out of the mare Brushup by Sweep. War Admiral is one of the four horses which have won racing's "big three"—the Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. He holds the Belmont track record for a mile and a half and equalled the American record when he ran the route in 2:28 3-5 lasts summer. War Admiral is a "big doer," as the horsemen say, eating all the food placed before him.

BILL.

First race—Kate Smith, a daughter of Black Servant and Okaybee, is a good looking filly and may make good at the first asking. Kenty Miss and Dutch Flag have worked well and may make money appearances.

Second race—Westys Hero is a fair sort and appears nicely placed in company of this caliber. With proper handling we may cash a bet on this one. Zump has some fair races in the book and is dangerous. Mamas Boy to take care of the others.

Third race—Pharacase may be the right one in this open race. I'm going to string along. Flying Ark has some speed and may force Higher Up into third money.

Fourth race—Sachem is fit as hands can make a horse and appears to have a good chance of getting home first in this company. Smugged In and Dark Friend figure close to the top one, however.

Fifth race—Sketchbook and Join Us, recent winners, seem destined to battle it out for first money in this field. I give the first named a slight edge. One Jest may be better than generally rated and is dangerous.

Sixth race—Our Willie has been running good races of late and is at the peak of his form. He is not too ambitiously placed here and should take down the No. 1 money. Dnieper and Brush Hook for the remainder.

Seventh race—Top Billing is well named as far as this field is concerned. He seems to have something on Very Busy and Sickle Lass, the two most likely to cause trouble if such materializes.

Eighth race—Far Cry appears to have found a suitable spot in the day's finale and should gain the verdict. Prewar and William V. to do the chief chasing.

Best bet—Sketchbook.

Calculator Pays His Backers $9.20

New Orleans, Jan. 13 (AP).—F. Barton's Calculator, taking command in the closing strides and winding up on top in a photo finish, on the 6-furlong feature sixth race at Fair Grounds today for his first victory in seven starts here.

Rated off the pace by Jockey R. L. Vedder, the 4-year-old chestnut made his bid after the field rounded the final turn, and was awarded the decision over C. Troutt's Gallienne and F. Mallory's Baby Sweep, in that order.

Mrs. R. O. Burns' 5-year-old My Colin set all the early pace, leading as late as the head of the stretch, but was unable to hang on in the fast finish.

Calculator, which ran the 6-furlongs in 1:18 1-5, paid $9.20, $4.60 and $3.20. Gallienne returned $4.20 for place, and Baby Sweep, $2.60 for show.

ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF THREE-STORY BRICK DWELLING, NINE ROOMS, TWO BATHS, HOT-AIR HEAT, NO. 1426 "Q" STREET, N. W.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 6886, folio 77, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on TUESDAY, the EIGHTEENTH day of JANUARY, 1938, at TWO-TEN o'clock p. m., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: The East 23 feet on "Q" Street by the full depth thereof, of Lot 25 of Drury's subdivision of Square 209, as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber B at folio 36. Said property now known for purposes of assessment and taxation as Lot 873 in said Square 209. Subject to the right of redemption by the maker of the aforesaid deed of trust, her heirs and assigns, within a period of sixty days from the date of sale, not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in equal installments, represented by promissory notes of purchaser payable in one and two years, with interest at 5 per cent per annum from day of sale, payable semi-annually, secured by first deed of trust upon property sold, or all cash, at option of purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

Bob Burns Says—

I don't know whether it's the climate out here or if it's that freshness that you always find about young countries, but there is something out here in the West that seems to give you ambition. People never seem to get too old to plan for the future.

Grandma and Grandpa Snazzy were out here on a visit not long ago and soon after they got home, they were sittin' in front of the first and Grandma says "Well, Snazzy, we've been together for a good many years, but there soon will come a time when one of us will have'ta go."

Grandpa says "Well, there ain't no use worryin' about that, now" and Grandma says "No, but I was jest thinkin' —when that time does come, I would like to live in California."

Sloan Donates $25,000 to Aid Traffic Safety

Money Given Foundation Will Augment National Contest Prizes.

A contribution of $25,000 to promote traffic safety—the largest personal donation for this purpose ever made—was offered to the Automotive Safety Foundation yesterday by Alfred P. Sloan, chairman of the board, General Motors Corporation.

The money was tendered, according to an announcement by the National Safety Council, as a tangible expression of Sloan's "high personal regard" for Paul G. Hoffman, president of the foundation, and his work in the field of traffic safety during the past several years.

It was decided to use the gift for additional and personal awards in the 1937 national traffic safety contest sponsored by the National Safety Council. The contest concluded December 31 and prize winning cities and States will be announced early in April.

Twelve police officers and eight traffic engineers will be selected from the prize-winning cities and States for a year's training course in traffic safety.

Each will receive $1,000 in cash, plus the cost of a year's tuition at Northwestern University Traffic Institute and the Harvard Bureau for Street and Traffic Research, it was announced.

Purpose of the $25,000 contribution, said Sloan, is to foster progress in the safe and efficient use of streets and highways in four ways:

1. By encouraging States and cities in the use of scientific methods of traffic control and accident prevention.

2. By emphasizing the importance of using men trained in traffic engineering and enforcement.

3. By stimulation of training of men in these new and specialized professions.

4. By recognizing community achievement in traffic safety and efficiency by providing university training for their engineering and police personnel.

Colored Man Held On Weapon Charge

James Robinson, colored, 28, was held on $3,000 bond in Police Court yesterday, awaiting jury trial on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

Robinson was arrested January 4 after a chase through the Commerce Building and across the Washington Monument grounds by two Arlington detectives and a taxi driver, Phillip Klein, 1810 Twenty-third street northwest. Klein eventually felled the man with a flying tackle.

Robinson pleaded not guilty, and Assistant District Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin asked a $2,000 bond. Judge Hobart Newman raised the figure when Robinson's record showed arrests in half a dozen cities.

2 Narcotic Ring Suspects Seized

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury yesterday announced two alleged leaders in a large narcotics smuggling ring, wanted in the United States, had been arrested in Europe.

Officials said Josef Schwartz was in jail in Paris awaiting extradition to this country, and Yasha Katzenberg was held in Rumania. Rumanian authorities have agreed to deport Katzenberg to some country which has an extradition treaty with the United States so this country can bring him back for trial.

General Motors Official Urges New Industries

Detroit, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—C. F. Kettering, General Motors vice president in charge of research, tonight attacked attempts to achieve "economic perpetual motion" and urged the development of new industries as the only workable cure for unemployment.

Speaking before the Society of Automotive Engineers, Kettering criticized business leaders for failure to make use of research for the development of new products and new industries which would keep pace with social progress and prevent unemployment.

Racketeer Foe Slain.

New York, Jan. 13 (U.P.).—Isadore Frank, 51-year-old poultry dealer, who for five years reputedly refused to pay "protection" money to poultry racketeers, was shot and killed tonight as he stepped from his automobile in front of his home.

Siren on Radio Wails 'Death's Theme Song'

Washington's new "theme song of death"—the mournful wail of a siren—sounded for the first time yesterday when police announced the city's fifth traffic fatality for the year.

The National Broadcasting Co., through Station WRC, told the District of its newest traffic death—Mary Snowden, 55-year-old colored woman—and Announcer Jim McGrath described the accident in which she was fatally injured.

"Thou Shalt Not Kill," intoned McGrath, repeating the safety slogan adopted by city officials at a recent meeting in the office of Representative William Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, chairman of a House traffic subcommittee.

After sounding the siren to herald another fatality, McGrath reviewed the accident and concluded:

"Drive carefully and avoid death."

The siren's scream will be heard from every local radio station each time a death is reported.

Left Senator So He Could Win Presidency, Mrs. France Says

She Testifies Maryland Legislator Asked Her to Quit U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., Jan. 13.—The former Princess Tatiana Decterav, Russian-born wife of former United States Senator Joseph I. France, testified during trial of France's divorce suit today that his frequent "very bad spells" of jealousy made her "unhappy," but that her love for him never was killed.

Denying the charge, Mrs. France told Circuit Court Judge Owen J. Knott that France asked her to "go away" while he campaigned for the Republican Presidential nomination. She intended to return, she said, and had no thought of deserting him.

Judge Knott adjourned the trial until January 19, when Dr. Irvin J. Spear, of Baltimore, will testify for the defense as to Mrs. France's mental condition. The 34-year-old Russian woman testified a mental illness prevented her from returning to the United States.

The ailment, she said, was induced by a cablegram she received from France in 1932. Contents of the message were not divulged.

After her marriage to the Marylander in Europe in 1924, her life with him was peaceful and happy, she said, except for his "spells" of jealousy. In the spring of 1931, she testified, she heard her sister, Natalie, had attempted suicide in Venice.

"My mother decided she should go there," she continued. "About the same time, a Senator Bourne and his wife came to visit us. Mrs. Bourne talked to me a lot, telling me I should go away and let my husband run his campaign.

"The senator (France) told me the same thing. So I went. I always obeyed him."

France accompanied her to New York and bade her an affectionate farewell aboard her ship, she said, adding "you see, he thought he was going to be president, but I—well, I thought differently."

When she asked him, after receiving the 1932 cablegram, to come to Europe and get her, he replied he was too poor, but would come for her soon as he could recoup his fortune, she testified. She said a bulging suitcase in the courtroom was filled with endearing love letters and cables from him.

Last June, she continued, France told her in a tranatlantic telephone call he was seeking a divorce. He asked her not to contest it and said he would explain things in a letter, she said. The letter never was received, she added.

Testimony in the case showed France's fortune, once estimated at $3,000,000, had been shrunk in August, 1937, to about $185,000. France testified he had to borrow $15,000 to "tide me over" 1937. He said he paid his wife $250 monthly from 1931 on and had given her about $42,000 since 1931.

Flier Lost on Samoan Clipper Ace Fighter in World War

Capt. Cecil Sellers Flew Far Into Germany and Shot Down Five Enemy Planes, Close Friend Here Recalls.

Capt. Cecil Sellers, who perished in the crash of the Samoan Clipper, was an ace flier during the World War, a close friend recalled yesterday.

On one occasion, he said, Sellers disobeyed the rule forbidding flights into Germany of more than 70 miles, and "flew after and shot down five German planes."

However, a balloon observer saw the "dog fight" in the sky and reported it to his superiors.

Several days later, according to the story, after debating whether to court-martial or decorate Sellers, the military authorities decided on the latter course.

Army records state that the Tennessee flyer, who later was commissioned a major in the Air Corps Reserve, received a Distinguished Service Medal for an engagement near Longuyon, France, on September 16, 1918. The accompanying citation said:

"Starting on a very important bombing mission with five other planes, as pilot he went on alone when the other five machines were forced to turn back. On crossing the enemy lines he was attacked by three enemy planes, but continued toward his objective, while his observer kept them at bay. In the face of this hostile opposition the objective was reached and their bombs dropped. On the way back four more planes joined in the attack, but, fighting them back, they reached our lines with valuable information after a fight lasting 38 minutes."

Sen. King Backs Justice Stephens For High Court

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, will take the initiative today in seeking indorsement by the Utah delegation in Congress of Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, for appointment to the Supreme Court as a successor to Justice George Sutherland. The latter will retire from the tribunal next Tuesday. Justice Stephens is from Utah.

With the retirement of Justice Sutherland, also from Utah, the Supreme Court will be left without a member from the country west of the Mississippi River. Senator King said a westerner should be named to succeed Justice Sutherland, not for any sentimental reason, but because there come to the court from the West important questions regarding public lands, water rights and Indians involving points of law with which easterners are not expertly familiar.

It was erroneously stated in The Post yesterday that both Utah Senators had unsuccessfully sought an audience with President Roosevelt to impress on him Justice Stephens' qualifications for the post. Such a conference was sought with the President by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, but Senator King has made no effort to see the President regarding this matter.

Forced Retirement Of Judges Studied

By the Associated Press.

A Senate Judiciary sub-committee considered yesterday advisability of submission to the States of a constitutional amendment providing for compulsory retirement of Supreme Court justices at the age of 75. Voluntary retirement would be permitted at 70.

At the same time, sub-committee members expressed opposition to proposed amendments requiring a two-thirds vote of the Supreme Court to invalidate acts of Congress. The committee also discussed a bill to provide for 27 new circuit and district Federal judges.

Groceryman Is Slugged To Death in Va. Robbery

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A 52-year-old groceryman was slugged to death today in Richmond's second murder robbery within a week. A boy found H. W. Bolton, the victim, lying near the door of his little Church Hill shop. His head battered. The cash register of the shop had been rifled.

Navy to Propose Merchant Marine School Ship Plan

By the Associated Press.

Capt. H. G. Copeland, of the Naval Operations Bureau, said yesterday the Navy "has in mind a program of expansion" for the training of merchant seamen on State school ships.

Testifying before the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, Capt. Copeland said the Navy favored the school ship plan and objected to any interference with it until a better system was established.

Chairman Bland (Democrat), Virginia, told Copeland he was "pleased to learn of the Navy's change of heart." He recalled that the Navy opposed passage of his bill last year to authorize establishment of a school ship at Newport News.

Lefkowitz Loses N.Y. School Job to To Ernst by 4 to 2

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 13.—Frederic Ernst, a member of the New York City school system since 1903, yesterday was elected associate superintendent of schools by a 4-2 vote of the board of education, ending a deadlock that had existed for the last five months.

Defeating Dr. Abraham Lefkowitz, Ernst was elevated to one of the most important positions in New York's school administration. The seven associate superintendents constitute the board of superintendents, a policy-making body which, together with the superintendent, conducts the educational affairs of the city. The associate superintendents are elected for a six-year term at an annual salary of $12,500.

Ernst was generally considered the more conservative candidate for the post, while Lefkowitz was said to be backed by the liberals.

Virginia Sheriff Hunting for Ryan

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Sheriff W. S. Woolf said tonight he had received a request from Sheriff William T. Harwood, of Sheridan, Wyo., to "apprehend" Thomas Fortune Ryan 2d, scion of a wealthy New York family.

Woolf said Ryan had moved recently from the house he rented near here "but I believe I may be able to communicate with him in the next few days."

House Group FavorsIncrease In Token Fare

Explanation by Utilities Commission Members Well Received.

Members of the House sub-committee on utilities yesterday appeared favorably impressed by the explanation of members of the Public Utilities Commission for the increased token fare as hearings were resumed on the two Dirksen bills.

Riley E. Elgen, chairman, and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, will reappear before the sub-committee this morning and are scheduled to complete their testimony. The sub-committee then will turn its attention to the financial set-up of the Capital Transit Co., Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, said.

Elgen called the attention of the sub-committee to the low rate of return the transit company has been getting ever since the street railway merger, and he predicted that even with the increase in token fares the company will not earn what is ordinarily termed a "fair" rate of return.

He also said the commission's orders always are subject to judicial review and that it must, therefore, make its findings in accordance with the evidence.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, who did most of the questioning, brought out the fact that the rate of return and, indirectly the fares, depended upon the valuation of the company's properties, as finally settled in the courts. Dirksen admitted the courts might have allowed an even higher rate of fare than the commission.

At the request of Dirksen, Elgen submitted statistical reports on the North American Co., which controls the Capital Transit Co., the increase in wages and taxes that the company has experienced, and the decline in passengers.

Dr. Drake Heads Chemical Society

Dr. N. L. Drake, professor of organic chemistry at the University of Maryland, was installed as president of the Chemical Society of Washington last night at a meeting in the Cosmos Club. Other officers are Dr. F. C. Kracek, of the geophysical laboratory of the Carnegie Institution, of Washington, secretary, and Dr. R. M. Hann, of the National Institute of Health, treasurer.

New councilors also installed were L. B. Broughton, University of Maryland; V. du Vigneaud, George Washington University Medical School; R. E. Gibson, geophysical laboratory; H. T. Herrick, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils; G. E. Lundell, Bureau of Standards, and B. H. Nicolet, Bureau of Dairy Industry.

Members of the board of managers are N. Bekkedahl and E. R. Smith, Bureau of Standards; H. L. Haller, Bureau of Entomology; M. M. Haring, University of Maryland; S. B. Hendricks and G. E. Hilbert, fertilizer research division, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils, and K. T. Williams, Bureau of Chemistry and Soils.

Retiring president B. H. Nicolet made the address.

Canadian Experts Cancel Va. Flight

Plans for a group of Canadian and American aviation officials to fly to Langley Field, Va., to visit the laboratories of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics were canceled yesterday because of poor flying conditions, the State Department announced.

The group, headed by V. I. Smart, Canadian deputy minister of transport, had planned to make the trip in Navy plans.

Instead, conferences with the Bureau of Air Commerce and the Federal Communications Commission, which have been in progress for several days, were continued in an effort to reach a new agreement governing air commerce and regulation on flights between the United States and Canada. At present, commercial questions affecting the two countries are settled in accordance with a 1929 agreement.

Giant Utility Firm Registers With SEC

By the Associated Press.

Another giant of the public utility industry—Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation—registered yesterday under the holding company act.

The Securities Commission, Chairman William O. Douglas said, welcomes the corporation's decision "to register and join in tackling problems faced both by the Government and the industry."

Columbia Gas & Electric, officials said, has been working on plans for simplifying its corporate structure for a year or more, and some intermediate holding companies have been eliminated.

Keller Resigns Post With FCC

Joseph E. Keller, who has been serving as secretary to Commissioner Thad H. Brown of the Federal Communications Commission, has resigned his post effective January 24, it was announced yesterday.

He will join a local law firm. Keller is a graduate of the University of Dayton, where he received the degree of LL. D. He also holds the degree of doctor of jurisprudence from Georgetown Law School.

At the present time he is a member of the faculty of graduate school of law at Southeastern University. The vacancy on the FCC will be filled by Franklin C. Salsbury, of Cleveland, Ohio.

'Flying Priest' Seeks to Found U.S. Branch of Arctic Aid Unit

Father Schulte to Lecture at Catholic University Jan. 25 on Value of Planes in North; Other Vehicles Needed Too.

When you're flying at 150 miles per hour over a barren, uncharted wilderness you've never seen before; when the temperature is 50 below; when a storm is coming up and your gas supply is going down; and your three passengers are ignorant of the danger; when the one and only engine of your plane begins to sputter—"oh boy! What a terrible feeling."

Terrible feeling it was, but Father Paul Schulte, O. M. I., managed to scrape out of situations like that in the months he spent in the Arctic last winter laying plans for an air service that will bring medical aid, mail and provisions to far-flung missionary posts and settlements "within the circle."

Father Schulte, who on January 25 will give a lecture at Catholic University, illustrated with his film, "The Flying Cross in the Arctic," is oganizing an American branch of the Missionary International Vehicular Association, of which he is founder.

Would Enlist Boys.

The NIVA, which has been functioning for several years in Africa and the East Indies, now hopes to "motorize the Arctic," Father Schulte said. "To bring the isolated settlements of the far North into touch with civilization, we need airplanes, wireless stations, motorboats, tractors and snow-mobiles," he declared.

"With bases in Chicago and Cliff Haven, N. Y., I hope to establish a plane service that will spend six months each year in the Arctic," said Father Schulte. "I want to enlist Catholic boys who are poor, healthy and of good character, to study the mechanics of airplanes and eventually to become pilots. In this way, the organization will be twice a charity—for the boys, who are given a great experience and taught a useful occupation, and for the priests and Eskimos of the North, who frequently are in desperate need of speedy contact with hospitals and doctors.

Flew in World War.

A strapping blond German, Father Schulte commenced his flying career on the Western Front and in the Near East during the World War. With 22 years' experience as a pilot, he has become known as "the flying priest." He officiated at the first mass in the air, on May 8, 1936, in the dirigible Hindenburg as it sped over the Atlantic Ocean.

Father Schulte founded the MIVA after he had seen his closest friend, Father Otto Fuhrmann, O. M. I., die of malaria and pneumonia in southwest Africa, "when airplane transportation to a hospital might have saved him." That was in 1925, and in the intervening years the MIVA has supplied 12 airplanes and 170 pieces of motorized equipment to missions in many parts of the world.

Eskimos Not Afraid.

With the magnetic compass rendered useless by proximity to the magnetic pole, Arctic pilots must use the sun to guide them, Father Schulte said. "But with proper plans and precautions, there's no reason to get lost. I've never been lost in the Arctic—I don't take chances."

The Eskimos aren't frightened by airplanes, they are merely astonished, he said. "Their reaction simply is: white people can do everything."

4 More Judges For D.C. Bench Asked in Senate

Bills Propose One Additional Appeals Justice, 3 on Federal Court.

Four additional Federal judges for the District and provision for retired Supreme Court justices to serve in the courts when needed were proposed yesterday by members of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Following the recommendations of the annual conference of Federal circuit judges last summer, the bills propose one additional justice for the Court of Appeals and three more justices for the United States District Court.

Senator Ashurst, chairman of the committee, and Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, are joint authors of the bill to increase the justices.

Hatch introduced a separate measure to amend the act of last March providing for the retirement of Supreme Court justices so as to make it applicable to the District. This bill permit the Supreme Court to assign the retired justices to the District Federal courts as the need arises.

Senator Ashurst said early action will be taken on the bills by the Judiciary Committee. A public hearing will be held, to which the Attorney General and others will be invited.

It is expected that the measures will be enacted into law during the present session of Congress.

TVA Saved Millions On Cement Deals

By the Associated Press.

Through negotiations with the cement industry the Tennessee Valley Authority made a paper saving of $2,000,000 on purchases, Chairman Arthur E. Morgan testified at a Federal Trade Commission hearing yesterday.

Morgan was a witness at a hearing on the commission's charge that the cement industry fixed prices and bid collusively.

Walter B. Wooden, commission counsel, made it clear that he had not the "remotest idea" Morgan had "participated in an illegal act."

Collins Seeking New Transfer Of Playgrounds

House Sub-committee Will Make Second Effort on Jurisdiction.

The House sub-committee on District appropriations will make another effort to consolidate local playground supervision in the 1939 supply bill, Chairman Collins indicated yesterday after a conference with officials of the Community Center Department.

Last year Collins attempted to transfer all school playgrounds from jurisdiction of the Playground Department to the Community Center Department.

"I think that, generally speaking, all playgrounds for children should be under supervision of the schools the year around," he said.

"The Playground Department then could confine itself to other recreational activities."

Whatever plan is adopted by the sub-committee, Collins said it would attempt to prevent present overlapping of jurisdiction, now exercised by three agencies—the Playground Department, the Community Center Department, and the National Capital Parks Office.

Collins recalled that he and Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, had addressed a letter to the several recreational agencies last year and had advised them to work out a consolidation scheme before the next appropriations act was passed.

The sub-committee will start hearings on the public school estimates today. Hearings of the civic spokesmen will not occur before the first part of next week, Collins said, as the schools are expected to occupy at least two days.

Wanderbirds Will Hike In Virginia on Sunday

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club will hike in Virginia Sunday. Leaving the old Leesburg road they will follow a trail along Dead Run to the Potomac and Stubblefield Falls, Scotts Run, Bull Neck Run to Prospect Rock.

The hike will be 6 miles long and the club will leave the National Theater at 9:30 a. m.

U.S. Mail Bag Shop May Produce More

An increased output by the Postoffice equipment shop at Fifth and W streets northeast to keep mail bag production abreast of condemnations was forecast yesterday in testimony before the House committee on the postal budget.

An additional $170,000 has been requested for the shop which John B. Cady, assistant director of the equipment and supplies branch of the Postoffice Department, said is expected to manufacture 252,800 additional mail bags and 504,500 mail locks during 1939. Condemnation of mail bags has exceeded production by about 1,000,000 bags during the last four years.

Irish Veterans to Meet.

A meeting of Post 17 of the Irish War Veterans will be held at 1132 Eighteenth street northwest at 8 p. m. today. A. A. Leasman, post commander, announces that plans will be discussed for the Washington's Birthday celebration. Representative John S. McGroarty (Democrat), of California, is to be honorary chairman of the program committee.
